Unaware of their error in directions, the boys were travelling farther and farther from where lay their only chance of safety. A sudden tropical night dropped down on the jungle, engulfing them in its black folds. Below them a deep, somber ravine loomed.

Out of the dark void rose the weird scream of a ferocious beast, something stirred in the trees above. The night life of the jungle was wakening, with its sound of stealthily moving bodies, with its terrifying noises —each of which was a symbol perhaps of lurking death.

And now the boys were to encounter Jacobi—Jacobi, the half-breed, the renegade, the man who was to be the cause of many adventures for Jack and Tarzan.

... Farther away than Dick and Dan imagined, the derelict Sally, which they had so foolishly left several hours before, was returned at last to the tracks. A grand blow las wielded. The scrambled into the coaches. Not even the bravest would risk being left behind.

... With a sharp hoot and a series of staccato obeys, the train pulled under way and was soon gliding swiftly through the jungle night. Thus was severed the last slight thread that bound the young adventurers to the outer world. They were captives of that monstrous wilderness.

PLAINFIELD

Plainfield, April 11—The Young People's Union held their meeting in the church on Tuesday with Mrs. Harry Harrison presiding. The meeting was opened with a hymn and prayer by Mrs. Harrison. The Minister continued the study of the sermon on the Mount by Stanley Jones dealing with "God's offer of help and the Golden Rule." The minutes were read by Mrs. Fred Pringle. SMOKE FROM SHAFT STIRS HOPE 3 MEN SAFE

Three Men Buried Alive In Moose River Mine; Rock Suddenly Caves In Hope Held Toronto Men Took Refuge in Tunnel

AT 150-FOOT LEVEL

Progress at 'Removal' of Debris Is Very Slow

Moose River, N.S., April 13 (CP)—Wisps of smoke from woodfire seeping through crevices of rock have convinced P. D. Henderson, foreman of the Moose River gold mine, that three Toronto men entrapped by a sudden cave-in late last night may still be alive in an underground chamber.

The three, N. E. Magill, and Dr. D. E. Robertson of Toronto, part-owners of the mine, and Alfred Goulding, time-keeper, were entombed by the fall of tons of gravel. Rescuers had reached within 200 feet of them and hoped to find them alive, the mine foreman said.

Fire For Warmth?

"I believe their lamps went out and they have built a fire for warmth and light. That is what the smoke means," Henderson declared. Rescuers were also off empty handed at that level and it looks to me as if they had broken them up for a fire."

Henderson said the trio carried a portable and a spare lamp and he believed these would go out for want of fuel about three o'clock this morning.

By proceeding through an old, disused shaft he hoped the rescuers would reach the three late this afternoon.

"We are doing everything possible to reach them," the Magill mine foreman stated. "Already they have extended their tunnel 100 feet toward the shaft. That the smoke seeping through the rocks might be from a smouldering explosion, Henderson was loath to admit.

Where Hoist Cable Broke.

Workers believed the trio inspected the workings of the mine were on the hoist platform when the cable broke. If that was so they had approximately 10 seconds in which to seek shelter of some sort before the rock came tumbling down from the roof, for the rear of falling rock reached the ears of those on the surface just that much after the signal from below.

Emergency salvage crews had not determined whether the three were alive. The sign of life they received were attempting to blast their way through a barrier of solid rock many feet thick. They had descended into the mine by an auxiliary shaft in order to tunnel through the fall-in.

Scores of miners worked feverishly today to rescue three Toronto men imprisoned behind solid rock that caved in a tunnel in the Moose River gold mine late last night. J. F. Mason of the province's chief inspector of mines, directed rescue operations here, 75 miles from Halifax.

Hope was held out that R. E. Magill, 35-year-old Toronto mining man; Dr. D. E. Robertson, Toronto surgeon; and Alfred Goulding, also of Toronto, had gained shelter of an airtight under-ground passage when the rock fell shortly after 9 p.m. (8.30 p.m. E.S.T.).

Magill and Dr. Robertson held a half-interest in the mine, and Goulding is their timekeeper, a former Toronto resident. The surgeon arrived from Toronto Saturday night.

At 11 p.m. last night 14 rescuers signalled surface workers, apparently a warning of impending danger. Surface men sprang to life as the hoist for the cage had dropped to a low rumbling told of the cave-in.

Scores of miners from Caribou Mines nearby rushed to the pithead and organized two rescue parties, clearing all night through the rock and gravel debris.

Kempton Park, England, April 13 (CP)—Lord Derby's Guiscard today won the Queen's Prize Handicap over the two-mile route. Two lengths back of Guiscard was J. F. Dent's Corona Corona and H. Martineau's Apple Peel was third, three lengths back.

Fortify Island Is Turkish Idea

Istanbul, Turkey, April 13 (AP)—The Turkish government was understood today to have requested permission of the League of Nations to fortify the Aegean Island at the entrance to the Dardanelles Straits, the Island of Dedeagatch Island which have been heavily fortified by Thrace.

Such fortification would be in addition to the demilitarization of the Dardanelles Straits zones already noted by Turkey.

THREE LIVES LOST ON ONTARIO ROADS

Fog on Highway in Stamford Township Fatal

(By The Canadian Press)

Three lives were lost in automobile accidents on Ontario highways in the Easter week-end and several persons were injured. The latest victim was Orange Blandford and in the Niagara Peninsula.

John Blanda of Hamilton was injured fatally on the Ancaster Highway in the Hamilton area when the wrecking truck in which he was riding failed to turn a curve. He was hurled from the machine.

Florence Love, 23, of Grimsby, died in hospital in Hamilton from injuries received when the automobile in which she was riding struck the rear of a standing Canadian National Railways bus near Winona.

Thomas C. Guinn, 18-year-old son of a Pontiff clergyman, was killed when his roadster failed to negotiate a curve on a foggy Stamford Township highway.

LETHAL GAS DEATH WILL BE STUDIED

Canadians on Way to Nevada to Examine Execution Methods

Toronto, April 13 (CP)—Wife-official patients of burdensome could not be determined, it was learned today that Charles T. Plaxton, K.C., senior counsel of the Department of Justice, Ottawa, and his brother, Hugh Plaxton, K.C. (Trinity-Toronto) are on their way to Nevada where they will study the lethal gas method of execution.

Abolition of hanging as the method of inflicting capital punishment is proposed in House of Commons by Dr. J. S. Woodsworth (Winnipeg-Wellington-North) who suggested substituting the Nevada gas chamber method.

It was reported here today Charles Plaxton will examine Nevada system and report his findings to the Department of Justice.

BRONZE TABLET IS DEDICATED

Memory of Mrs. J. Campbell Honored in Unitarian Church

Toronto, Apr. 13 (CP)—A bronze tablet in memory of Mrs. Jessie Dow Campbell was dedicated at Easter service in the Unitarian Church by the pastor, Rev. J. C. Hodgins. The tablet was presented by members of the Women's Alliance, and Mrs. Campbell's grandson, Kenneth Campbell, assisted at the unveiling. It bears the following inscription:

"In loving memory of Jessie Rose, 1857-1932, beloved wife of William Campbell. Born into the Unitarian Fellowship she gave to this church the loyalty of her heart and the labor of her hands."

Relatives present included her daughters Mrs. W. Taylor and Mrs. T. Powell, of Belleville.

ACTOR'S MOTHER NEARS THE COAST

New York, April 13.—(AP)— The mother of Freddie Bartholomew, child movie actor, on her arrival from London last week, was expected to arrive in Los Angeles today, to join the child's father in action.

Attorney Philip A. Levey said he received this information in a cablegram from the London law firm of Albert, Fletcher and Kaufman.

The cablegram, apparently quoting the boy's father, read in part:

"My wife Lillian has been trapped and kidnapped by unscrupulous people. She has been restrained from communicating with me. News of what is happening is being kept from her."

FRANCE ANXIOUS AT NEW CRISIS OVER SANCTIONS

Break With Italy or Coolness With Britain Foreseen

WOOING OF ITALY

Wednesday's Conference of Sarraut and Paul-Boncour Important

Paris, April 13 (AP)—Apprehension was expressed in French quarters today at the prospect of a new crisis in the Mediterranean leaving France alone in opposing German fortification of the Rhineland.

Officials indicated that British efforts to get the League of Nations to use force against Italy might force France either to break with Italy or to be cool toward Britain, both possibilities which this government is anxious to avoid.

French plan of action against Reichschancellor Hitler's fortification of the Rhineland centred with an effort to win back Premier Mussolini of Italy to the Stresa front, it was considered by Premier Sarraut, Foreign Minister Flandin, and Joseph Paul-Boncour, without Portfolio, in a conference Wednesday.

Officials said that their meeting may result in the most important move Adolf Hitler put troops into the formerly demilitarized border area.

OLD COURTSHIPS ARE RECALLED

Mr. and Mrs. George Martin of Saskatoon Married Here 66 Years Ago

Saskatoon, April 13.—Another milestone has been marked in the life of Mr. and Mrs. George Martin of this city, for it is the 66th anniversary of their wedding. Owing to Mrs. Martin's ill-health no reception was held and the day was spent quietly.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin came to this city in 1910, the former having been the operative in the Canadian Trunk bus line to Earl, Sask. Six years later they moved to a farm at Cherokil, returning to the city in 1937. Since then they have resided at 335 Fourth Avenue, North.

Looking back on their wedding day as many years ago, Mr. Martin recalls with interest the fact that there were then no automobiles, and that the popular mode of the day came a-courting on horseback. The boy with the best horse was apt to get the prettiest girl.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin were married at Belleville, Ontario, by the Rev. Joseph Kilgor. Mrs. Martin's maiden name was Elizabeth Dinning and she has two brothers now resident in Saskatoon, Albert and Jack, and one sister, Mrs. Alice Cummings, Tenth Street, Nutana.

'JAFSIE' CALLED IN WENDEL PROBE

Is Requested to Appear Before Grand Jury

Trenton, N.J., April 13 (AP)—Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon, who testified he gave Bruno Richard Hauptmann $50,000 for return of the Lindbergh baby, has been requested to appear Wednesday before the grand jury investigating charges that certain men—Paul H. Wendel of Trenton killed the child.

Wendel, a disbarred lawyer wanted on embezzlement charges, was lodged in a Trenton jail the night before Hauptmann's arrest on charges formally charged with the murder for which Hauptmann was convicted 72 hours later. He said he was abducted by four men in Brooklyn, N.Y., two months ago and held incommunicado "confessing" the Lindbergh kidnapping.

Assistant District Attorney William F. Medlenhauer said Condon said one of the men sought for questioning in connection with Wendel's abduction was Murray Hamilton, alias Moe Taylor, whose father's home in the neighborhood in which Wendel said he was held captive.

The grand jury, which heard the prison warden delay Hauptmann's execution three days and then voted to "discontinue" its inquiry, resumed the afternoon before Hauptmann died, will remain in session tomorrow. It has subpoenaed a score of witnesses and "requested" Condon to come from outside the state, including Mahlon S. Foster of Williamsport, Pa.

Foster said "Dr. Wendel" had given him "all prescriptions and that after Wendel's arrest he (Foster) had looked up the handwriting, compared the handwriting with the ransom notes, and contacted Governor Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey.

Future British Queen English is Paris Guess

Paris, April 13 (CP-Havas)—Mary Francis Chanel predicted in the newspaper Paris Midi today that King Edward's future Queen (assuming he marries) would be "English, good, beautiful, and a clever woman."

Chanel named four possibilities: Lady Ann Hope, 23, daughter of the Viscogr. Designate to India; Lady Mary Gosenor, 26, daughter of the Duke of Westminster; Lady Angela Montagu-Douglas Scott, 30, sister of the Earl of Buccleuch and of the Duchess of Gloucester; Lady Letitia Lambton, 25, daughter of the Earl of Shaftesbury.

All four are described as following active outdoor lives and showing vital interest in social problems.

SUPPLY OF SYRUP IS BELOW NORMAL

Price Remains Steady at $1.50 up $2.00 Per Gallon

Toronto, April 13.—(CP)—Flow of maple sap on farms of Canadian provinces is normal, and for this season today with the supply of syrup considerably below normal and 25 Western Ontario and Quebec half that of last year.

Scarcity of syrup has brought higher prices, however, with the present quotations $1.50 up $2.00 per gallon. Early season prices this year ranged from $2 to $2.50 per gallon and, as supplies of low production, failed to grow to the low level of 1934 and 1935 last year.

Farmers and maple bush owners are unable to explain the light flow as previous experience has taught them a severe drought with consequent shortage of sap such as the past two weeks but there was no shortage in former production and would be attained.

Producers estimate about 3-4 the 1935 production is the most distrited. Little change in the quality of syrup is reported, although some producers believe their product is slightly inferior to that of previous good years.

In both Eastern townships district of Quebec, inferior, flavored the syrup was of inferior quality but prices were maintained at the high level of last year at $1.50 to $2.75. The Montreal area reported the flow as "fair" but it was "poor" in the Montreal district.

Price Ahead Some

Quebec province production last year was 1,250,000 gallons of syrup and 4,375,000 pounds of sugar with a total value of $1,911,000 but there is little likelihood the present season's total would approach this figure.

Price for syrup and sugar ruled about the same as last year in the Brockville district of Ontario with syrup marketed at $1.50 to $2 per gallon. Sugar-enough to customers. Huge supply of syrup was somewhat smaller than last year, but producers 50 cents higher at $2.36 tops.

Hamilton district reported reported the flow was almost over with a good average supply, of syrup and prices comparing well with last year. London reported one of the best flows in years, with prices holding above $2 after the season.

Stratford, Kitchener and St. Thomas districts report the flow set to release their sap but the possibility was the flow might continue for a week or two under favorable conditions. Prices ranged from $2 to $2.75 per gallon.

Canada's average production on 1, 000 taps is about 4,000 pounds of sugar and 75 per cent is produced in Quebec, 20 per cent in Ontario and one per cent in the Maritimes.

EASTER MARKED IN DUBLIN BY SERIOUS RIOTS

100 Injured, When Stones Thrown And Blows Exchanged

POLICE DRAW BATONS

Exhorted to Overthrow Government and Establish Republic

Dublin, April 13.—(CP Cable)—Widespread manifestations of Republican sentiment marked observance of the 20th anniversary of the Irish Easter uprising yesterday.

About 100 persons were injured in Dublin when onlookers clashed with processionists and members of the Socialist Army and Communists. Stones were thrown and blows exchanged before police could disperse their batons in an attempt to restore order. At the processions observed Glasnevin Cemetery many Republicans marched to what is a Catholic Cemetery; don't let Communists in."

Eamon De Valera, Opposition to the Government of President Ramon de Valera is reported to be day passed without violence.

Police on the border village of Tempo, police used batons and then fired over the heads of a crowd which killed Sean Belfast, police in the Irish Republican Army.

At Cobh, armed men entered the club room of the company of bagpipers, smashed all the instruments they could find, and left a warning for pipers to stay away from the harbour-day ceremonies. At Boyle, County Roscommon, Republicans attacked Socialists and Police "no overthrow the present government, imposed by England, and establish an independent republic."

Police and Republican Republicans and other Irish sympathizers demonstrated against the British Government's refusal to permit the transfer to Ireland of the body of Sir Roger Casement, executed for treason in connection with preparations for the abortive Irish uprising.

POLICE SEARCH FOR 2 SUSPECTS

Housemaid in Another Home Gives Valuable Information

New York, April 13 (AP)—Police sought two unidentified men today in connection with the bathtub slaying of attractive Mrs. Nancy Titterton, 29, whose dismembered body and effeminate type, the other as stocky and coarse-appearing.

Marion Lewis, 20, a housemaid, told detectives the stocky man twice visited the apartment entrance to the home of her employer, J. Wooster Titterton, a retired member of the Lambert Chemical Company, less than 24 hours before the body was found in a Yonkers ferry.

Lambert resides at 17 Beekman Place with Mrs. Titterton and her husband, Lewis, an executive of the National Broadcasting Company, and their children, aged 12 Beekman Place.

The second man was described by Miss Helen Meyer, a Park Avenue costumer, as tall, handsome, well dressed and "quiet." She said he displayed a detailed knowledge of the secret exit to which Mrs. and Mrs. Titterton lived.

Miss Meyer said the suspect called at her shop last Tuesday and manoeuvred to be alone with her. He paid cash for a $5 dress without the cost of putting on a style show at a country club near Deal, N.J., and then persuaded her to cash a $5 cheque. She later found the cheques were worthless and the country club non-existent.

The description furnished by Miss Meyer tallied with that of a man who made two mysterious visits last week to the building in which the Titterton lived.

Detective Arthur, who was questioned by detectives of the homicide squad last night, said the second man, wearing a soft hat, overcoat, grabbed her by the wrists, when she refused his summons at a servants' entrance.

Portsmouth, Ont., April 13 (CP)—It must have been the Easter spirit that encouraged a chicken owned by Jules Bedard to lay such a double egg. The egg measured seven inches in length by five inches and weighed 4 1-4 ounces.

Detroit, April 13 (CP)—Mrs. Emma Gillette, 38, widow, died last night of a knife wound that police said was inflicted by her adopted son, Lawrence Gillette, 20, who refused to serve a murder charge against Gregory Kastenchuk, 26 the chef, was held.

Chicago, April 13 (CP)— The next time Al Capone's name is mentioned in the night he intends to lock the front door and take his key with him.

Customers, dropping in for the kind of refreshment they can't get at a tavern on the evening, and finding no bartenders on duty, were served by Capone himself.

Chicago, April 13 (CP)— Al Capone's brother, Ralph, didn't even reach for a gun. He reached for his hip pocket, but instead drew under the bed.

"If was as mad I carved the bed over and gave him about four pesos for the privilege," he said, "and came out with his hands up." Rocco told police. "I guess his gun is still under the bed in the corner."

The burglar, who said he was Ralph Capone, 33, was fined $100 for abrasions.

Chicago, Ill., April 13 (CP)— Shane Harris, 21, a negro, pitched the first baseball game of the season when he was shot to death during an argument over a game at respective merits of the White Sox and Cubs. While Oglesby, 35, his negro roommate, surrendered to police.

Omaha, Neb., April 13 (CP)— Police said they have weighed heavily on the burglar's conscience, but, nevertheless, the burglar after his home was ransacked. The thief had left a note saying he would fly on his back. It included 5,300 pennies.

Singapore, April 13 (CP-Havas)—James Whitney Bennett, British aviator, narrowly escaped being drowned in the China Sea today. It was said, when he awoke and found the mosquito netting of his bed on fire. The flier had fallen asleep while smoking a cigarette.

GLAD EASTER CRY HEARD IN WORLD

Millions of The Faithful Participate In The Ceremonies

(By The Associated Press)

Impressive religious rites and resplendent fashion parades marked Christendom's observance of Easter.

Millions of the faithful participated in traditional ceremonies. But the peace of the holy festival was disrupted by riotous scenes in Dublin and the breaking of an Ethiopian settlement.

The Vatican observed its quietest Easter in many years. Thousands of Romans remained in the city while the state of Pope Pius' health prevented him from celebrating Mass there.

Intermittent drizzle dampened New York's annual fashion parade along Fifth Avenue but bright sunshine favored processions along Chicago's Michigan Boulevard.

Overflow crowds, estimated at 20,000, attended services in the 23 churches at Moscow, capital of the Soviet nation, where religious instruction for youth is banned by the Government.

Vatican City—site of recent religious disputes — approximately 100,000 Catholics gathered at Mass with complete liberty.

A parade of the Irish Republican Army in Dublin, in memory of those who died in the 1916 rebellion, precipitated clashes. Many persons injured.

Italian planes bombed Warra Mallu in war-torn Ethiopia. Worshippers rushed from churches. Three were reported killed.

Six High Officials of The Government Are Arrested

By GLENN RABB

By The Associated Press

Tokyo, April 13—Six high officials of the Provisional Government of Manchukuo were arrested, a Domei (Japanese) news agency dispatch said today, charged with plotting subversive activities and of falsifying military information to the Soviet Russia.

The dispatch said Ling Sheng, governor of North Hingan Province and one of the officials held, had "sold out to the Communist army sent by Chiang Kai-shek to attack Mongolia" in the Communist army sent by Chiang Kai-shek to attack Mongolia" in the Communist army sent by the Japanese general headquarters alleged that Ling Sheng, until now considered as the most important Mongol official in the Manchukuoan government, headed a plot to "sell out" to the Japanese influence from northeast, ern Manchukuo.

The charges of such a plot indicated a serious breakdown in the policy followed thus far by Manchukuo's Japanese protectors of easing Mongol chieftains to maintain their grip on Mongol-inhabited regions of western Manchukuo, while gradually trying to extend Manchukuan influence or other tribes in Inner and Outer Mongolia.

The Japanese general headquarters communique alleged that Ling Sheng had been in communication with Soviet authorities since 1932 when the Communist army sent a punitive expedition into Northwest Manchuria during the conflict with the Chinese Bandit-Living regime over the Chinese eastern railway.

POLICE RADIO PROVES WORTH

Two Apprehended in Possession of Allegedly Stolen Bicycles

Belleville police today, again proved highly efficient when two alleged bicycle thieves were apprehended by Plainclothes Constable Fred Izard a few moments after the report of the alleged bicycle had been broadcast over station CJB early on Sunday evening.

Constable Izard was patrolling in the police car, when the report was picked up. "Calling car No. 2, keep a strict lookout for a red C.C.M. bicycle, stolen a few minutes ago from its parking place on Front St. A man wearing blue overalls was seen riding it," was the substance of the message relayed over the other wave by Chief Ernest who was on duty at the police station. Plainclothes Constable Izard hastened to the western extremity of the city, where he apprehended two youths on two different bicycles, one being a red colored C.C.M. bike. Questioning the youths the cyclists for further questioning and placing the youths in the police car, instructed them to hold the bicycles, while he then proceed on the running board.

Upon their arrival at the police station the red C.C.M. bike was identified by Dr. M. Day, who had reported the bicycle stolen, being the property of his son. Later the other bicycle, also a C.C.M. was identified by Stanley Wilson, Shell gasoline service station attendant at the corner of Cannifton and West Bridge Streets. The latter bike having been stolen from the owners knowledge at the time of discovery.

The two youths found in possession of the bicycles gave their names as Vincent Lloyd, 24, and Ernest Lloyd, 26, both of Roblin's Mills. Charges of the theft of bicycles were laid in both incidents. The Lloyds will be taken to court and will appear in tomorrow's local police court.

Dr. Day, who first laid the complaint relative to his son's bicycle being stolen about 7.30 last night, was astounded at the rapidity of the apprehension of the culprits, it only being a few minutes after the bicycle was given broadcast, that Officer Izard arrested at the police station with the two bicycles and his alleged thieves in tow.

Material Witness is Sought by Police

Montreal, April 13—(CP)—Search continued today for a man wanted as a material witness in connection with the mysterious deaths of Leon Ladair and Joseph Alfred Dudevoir whose charred bodies were found in the blackened remains of the Ladair home at Namur, Que., last Tuesday.

Provincial and municipal police were searching all vehicles leaving Montreal today, while other squads searched the city and district for the man they wanted as material witness to the fire.

Mrs. Dudevoir, wife of one of the dead men, has disappeared and may have perished in the fire, which destroyed the home at Namur. Police were unable to find any traces of the woman in the remains of the building and are continuing their search in that district.

Last Living Descendant Makes Good Threat to Dishevel Home

Arnprior, Ont., April 13 (CP).—Disheveled, heap of stones and mortar today marked the place the last child of the Marquis of Scotland—the Laird O' McNab — sought to rule a kingdom in a far land.

Heralding the dawn of a new day yesterday, the three stone walls of the historic site from which Chief McNab ruled with the power and mighty hand of a feudal lord were leveled to bits. Earlier the early cutting and other woodwork had been torn apart and piled high in a blazing pyre—ending forever thoughts of preserving the home as a posterity.

Learning persons were discussing rehabilitation of the home in McNab township near White Lake, 13 miles from Arnprior, Mrs. Alice Roe, owner of the property, ordered its destruction. Last Sept. believed to be the last living descendant of the tyrant ruler, believed effects should have been made years ago for its preservation and kept good destruction threats. She also declared the site was beyond reclamation.

Chief McNab came to Canada in 1823 with 85 settlers whose descendants now people the township which bears his name. The government of Upper Canada allowed to open a tract of 5,000 acres of land if the chief would undertake to settle it with Scottish settlers. Anxious to recoup fallen fortunes the chief agreed but the plan barely passed settled on the virgin land.

Instead of being free man in a free country, the clansmen faced tyranny under the chief and tyranny and feudalism. They were brought before the court of quarter sessions in Perth, then the capital of Upper Canada. He left the country a broken man and died in France in 1843.

Spring Finery on Display Although Sun is Overcast

Many of Suits Covered by Overcoats Due to Chill Breezes

Easter paraders strolled city streets under dull clouds on Sunday with spring finery covered for the most part by top coats and overcoats donned against chill breezes.

But on the whole the annual parade was well represented along Front and adjoining streets. There were at times filled with the colorfully attired pedestrians.

Fashions displayed showed little change over those exhibited last year, with the possible exception of skirts and coats, which were slightly shorter, a vogue in the feminine contingent and hats which were somewhat modified in the direction of size, at least year's lines, through the more liberal use of flowers and decorations. For the male, more colorful ties and socks were in evidence, with light browns, lighter blues, gayer grays and even purples in hose finding favor in popularity. Neckties with varying colors of the rainbow were worn, although wearers of the soft, single shades of the matching colors of shirts were about divided in numbers. Hats of the soft fold-a-way style were again popular in shades ranging from French gray to fawn. Only here and there was the conservative derby evident.

Top coats, more jaunty in style, and cut, in many cases matched the color of suits worn, predominated to a morning coat, a cutaway or a gardenia was sighted among the strolling throngs. Gloves for the most part of tan or grey.

Although the weather was rather chilly pat also had his day. Small dogs, with their coats and sweaters, front rank popularity and fashion, strutted at leashes at their enjoyed the outing. For the most part the pets represented the more active breeds with terriers predominating. One rangy Borzoi, with elaborate collar and leash was also observed ahead of a trimly tailored feminine owner with a distinct aloofness for other canines.

Along Front street during the afternoon hours the parade passed and repassed, although this street did not hold all of the paraders; Bridge Streets, east and west, as well as other residential streets, were also chosen for extended walks.

Heavy traffic on roads and highways was reported by traffic officers, although accidents were declared at a minimum.

The buses and airplanes over the week end each passenger train discharged a quota of visitors and local people returned from short trips. Faced with one of the heaviest Easter movements in numbers in years each train was crowded to the limit, and in some cases extra coaches were needed to take care of the overflow.

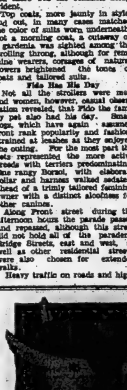
FAMINE GRIPS NORTH SZECHUEN

Two Million Persons Subjected to Death and Starvation

Hwaking, Honan Province, China, April 13.—(AP)—Famine similar to that in northern Szechuen has gripped 10,000 square miles in this province north of the Yellow River and subjected at least 2,000,000 persons to starvation, it was said today.

Canadian missionaries attached to the United Church of Canada are undertaking relief for the starving inhabitants with funds from many sources, though first to arrive from the International Famine Relief Commission.

The famine is the worst in this territory since 1920 when thousands died, the missionaries said. The main to floods and drought in the region of 1928.



Huge gangs of thieves, nominally law-abiding farmers, are preying on the starving people, the missionaries reported.

Relief in relief work are Rev. H. A. Boyd and Rev W. A. Boulton of Toronto.

MacDonald Will Enter Home For Operation

London, April 13—(AP)—Ramsay MacDonald, former Prime Minister, will enter a nursing home tomorrow for a minor operation.

The treatment, the nature of which was not disclosed, will keep the Lord President of the council from his 69th birthday.

Obituary

LATE JOHN G. THRASHER

The funeral of John Gilbert Thrasher took place from his late residence, 113 Cannifton Road, Saturday afternoon.

The service in the home and at the graveside in Belleville cemetery was conducted by the Rev. R. Farmer-Smith. A number of friends in attendance and there were many beautiful floral tributes.

The bearers were Messrs. Fred Hoard, Ernest Gunn, Darid Osborne, John Bradden and J. R. Kerr.

LATE MRS. W. E. GARFIELD (Tarsley)

Saturday afternoon the funeral of Mrs. Jane Garfield took place from the residence of Mr. G. Van Valkenburgh in the Quinte district of Thurlow Township. The service in the home and at the graveside in Belleville cemetery was conducted by the Rev. W. H. Merrick, pastor of the Bridge Street Church of which the late Mrs. Garfield was a member.

The bearers were Messrs. Fred Swain, Thomas Johnson, Clinton Casey, John Cooley, Elvin Mumford and Gerald Van Valkenburgh.

MRS. H. W. MARSH

After a lingering illness, Mrs. Erminia Mary Marsh, widow of Lt.-Col. Marsh, who died in the year 1921, passed away at the Belleville General Hospital on Saturday, April 11th.

For many years prior to her illness Mrs. Marsh was prominent in social and church life in this city. She was a member of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Imperial Daughters of the Empire, the Women's Canadian Club and the Women's Institute. She possessed an attractive personality and many old friends will learn of her passing with regret.

The late Mrs. Marsh was born in Belleville, where she lived for many ago, her parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. John Smith. For forty-two years she was a resident of this city.

Surviving her are one son, Mr. J. E. Marsh of Belleville, and one daughter, Mrs. Ethel Smith of Point Portune, Quebec.

Announcement of the funeral, which will take place, is made elsewhere in this paper.

LATE GEO. W. VANNAMAKER

The funeral of George Wellington Vannamaker took place Saturday afternoon from the residence of the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street, to the United Church at White Lake, where the service was conducted by the Rev. J. A. Plant of the Bayside Circuit. Interment was made in the White Lake Cemetery, the service at the graveside being conducted by Rev. Mr. Plant.

The bearers were Messrs. H. Dowsett, Ross Hall, C. Holland, W. Holland, W. Defoe and H. Mullett.

LATE MRS. SARAH MOFFATT

Marmora, April 13—One of Marmora's oldest residents passed away on Saturday in the person of Mrs. Sarah Moffatt, wife of Alexander Moffatt, who died early in Marmora township, January 3rd, 1935. Deceased was born in 1851, Mrs. James Darrah. With the exception of a few years in Toronto and Peterborough, she has always spent in Marmora district. The late Mrs. Moffatt was a member of the and was thus employed at the hotel formerly kept by the late George McWilliams. With her husband, she also managed the Moffatt boarding house at Deloro for a number of years. She was of a very industrious disposition, and was always privileged to St. Paul's Ladies' Aid and Women's Institute, both organized in the village. She was a member of St. Paul's Church, Marmora. Surviving are her husband and five children, Mrs. Thomas, Marmora Township; Arthur, Marmora borough; Mrs. James Jones, Marmora; Mrs. George Hall and Mrs. Bell, Walkerton. Also surviving are two brothers, Thomas Darrah, Sully, N.Y., and George, Rochester.

The funeral service was conducted by Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell at Holy Trinity Church on Saturday afternoon, the church's first funeral to take place in this church in North Marmora since its erection forty years ago. Six grandsons of the deceased were pall bearers: Gordon, Harry and Wilbert McGrath and William, Ruth and Herbert Jones. Mrs. L. B. Sundle was accompanist for the hymns, favorites of the deceased, sung by St. Paul's Anglican choir. Mrs. G. Hall sang the solo, "The Homeland of the Heart." Interment took place in Zion cemetery.

ARTHUR EBBERT NAYLOR

Former resident of Cannifton where he was born, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Richard P. Naylor, Arthur Ebbert Naylor of Rochester New York, where he has resided for the past 38 years died early in his home there. His death which occurred on Sunday, April 12, followed an illness of some weeks. Mr. Naylor was in his 53rd year at the time of his demise.

At one time Mr. Naylor had resided in this city where he was engaged in the profession of book binding, however, in the early days of his home, he left Belleville for Rochester where he followed the same trade. A member of the Presbyterian Church, he was a staunch adherent of that faith.

The late Mr. Naylor is survived by one sister, Miss Alma I. Naylor of San Francisco, California, and one brother Harry of this city.

The body will be shipped from Rochester to Belleville for burial and will arrive here on Wednesday morning. The funeral will be held from the funeral home of the Belleville Burial Company at two o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, with interment being made in the Belleville cemetery.

POLICE BLOTTER

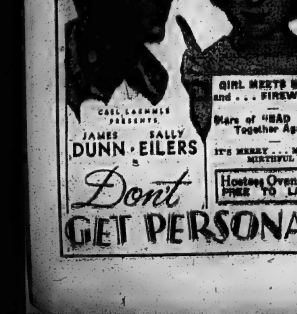
Alleged by police to have been under the influence of native wine, Patrick Berry, 31 year old Prince Edward County resident, staggered and fell against the large plate glass window at the front of Steph. Hall's Licensed sporting goods store on Front St. Saturday night and the impact broke the glass. Upon the arrival of police authorities Berry was found still lying across the broken window pane. He was arrested on a charge of drunkenness and lodged in the police cells. There appearing at the police station, Berry, an habitual L.C.A. offender, was searched and on his person was found a portion of a bottle of native wine. He was remanded in custody until tomorrow.

While playing in front of the New Service Lunch about 10.15 p.m. last night two boys, Billy Hudson and Dick Barrett fell against the large plate glass window shattering the same. Upon the arrival of Constables Arnott and Evans it was declared, that the youths were scuffling and accidentally fell against the plate glass window, causing it to crack.

A number of motorists returned to find police stickers on the windshields of their automobiles on Saturday as the result of yesterday's city traffic by-laws. Illegal parking too close to hydrants, the obstructing of traffic, overtime parking wars and the operation of motor cars and trucks with the proper lights after sundown were the more frequent infractions of the Highway Traffic Act, for which fines will appear in Tuesday's police court.

The funeral of the local police court was held in Belleville today, the court observing the Easter Monday holiday.

Thirty one transients were given sleeping quarters at the police station over the week end, 14 on Saturday night and 17 last night.



Although no motor accidents were reported by the Highway Patrol officers over the week end, they did announce, however, that an increased amount of traffic was noted on the highways. The week was also the heaviest of the present season as motorists holidayed," was the report of the Patrolmen today.

Police authorities are in possession of a bicycle, the property of which has not been established, which was picked up on Dundas St. on Saturday. The owner may have his service button by proving ownership to the authorities.

Pitchfork Tine Penetrates Brain

Foley Island, Ont., April 13 (CP) —Condition of Jack Adams, 3½ years old, who was struck on the head by a pitchfork in the grandfather tossed out of a hayloft Easter Sunday, was still grave today. One of the tines of the fork penetrated to his brain.

The boy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Adams. Edward White, the grandfather, had finished throwing down hay in the [illegible] barn and tossed the fork out [illegible] before climbing down himself. The child entered the barn as the fork was thrown.

Force Child To Attend School

(By Lisa, renalle)

When a truant officer came after the Spencer girls they kicked him out of the house. And their mama, a physician and a criminal lawyer, backed them up.

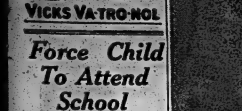
Why should the girls go to school if they didn't feel so inclined? For eight hours the jury deliberated, finally, to agree with them. At any rate, they couldn't condemn a human, or the lack of a system, which had brought forth such splendid specimens. For the Spencer girls were pretty, poised and vital. Also they had a large, broad and intense vocabulary.

And at once thousands of children demanded a similar liberation from bondage.

But they didn't get it. . Oh, not that we modern mothers aren't brawd-minded and all that, but we don't believe in dominating a child, curtailing his activities or interfering with his experiments more than is absolutely necessary. We certainly don't want our child to be inhibited, either.

Success in School

And we appreciate the attractiveness of the Spencer girls from their pictures. They certainly look healthy, and perhaps it's just the light that makes them appeal pertinant and discontented. Anyhow, we doubt the right of anyone to judge of their vocabularies. Nevertheless, we want our children to attend school regularly, and it isn't that we're afraid of the truant officer, either.



We believe in school for children. It's not just because of the "learning," or to get them from under our feet, and out of mischief, or the give and take contact with contemporaries, either. We want to groom them into shape better than anything we can do. But principally because we believe it is a good training for a child to go some place every day, sometimes he doesn't really very much want to go, just to get in training for the future.

Good Training

We believe it's good for a child to get trained to routine, to constant, daily effort, to regular, sometimes irksome, daily application, upon not too congenial tasks. We believe a few hours a day of monotony, dullness and drudgery is good training for a child.

We think up-bringing should be a preparation for adult life, and that adult life is largely composed of the above. And if you don't get learned to take it, it's just too bad, because life and the boss won't, the husband and the children can't wait, and go on without you.

We feel that the world is too shoveled, too full of busy and tired people to put up with irresponsible, uninhibited, or just plain uncontrolled youngsters. There just isn't room, and we haven't time.

HERE TO FORTUNE OF $30,000,000—ABOVE you see the first close-up made of Lance von Hatzpetz-Bevenitow, heir to some $30,000,000, the combined fortunes of Baron Kurt von Hatzpetz-Bevenitow, and the former Barbara Hutton. FARM WOMEN OF THE WORLD TO DEFY "ALL WORK AND NO PLAY"

(Copyright 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

A get-together meeting of the Agricultural Department in Washington the other day discussed plans of the third Triennial Conference of the Associated Country Women of the World, which is to meet at the National Capital on May 31 to June 6th.

About 2,000 farm women already have registered from 27 states, and numbers from foreign countries. South Africa is sending three delegations; Australia and New Zealand will also be represented.

Everyone, all over the world — whoever eats butter, eggs, poultry, fresh vegetables, country sausages and all good things which come from farms — must be glad that the women who get up before light almost every day in the year are going to have a little fun.

For the old proverb, "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy", holds equally for Jill, whether she's a young girl working in an office, shop or factory, or a matron working on a farm.

Everywhere, the deadly anæmias of doing the same thing day after day—has made it essential, at the way of crime and self-destruction. As a certain Freudian said: "Life is no daily!" And people whose nerves are frayed by the tiresome uniformity of repetition often grasp at any reckless toy which comes to hand.

Do you remember the effect of that one drum note, repeated with maddening monotony in the African Jungle, in Eugene O'Neill's great play "Emperor Jones?" Indians, too know the diabolical effect of a single tone unvaried in pitch — and they use it in their dances, in rousing the tribes to action.

Day after day, when the hands of the clock start at daylight, there is nothing for these toiling farm women to do but get up, don their Spartan armor and go through with the chores — cook, wash, iron, milk churn and all the rest of it.

These women are coming to Washington in all sorts of economical ways, for they never have much money. Numbers of them will crowd into automobiles and an arrival will pitch their tents at the tourist camps, on the banks of the Potomac.

They will pray to Heaven, meanwhile, that it may not rain when the hour comes out of the suitcase, for the White House garden party's under the Sequoia tree that Bishop Freeman will hold for them in the splendid Cathedral of St. Peter and Paul.

Farm women from foreign countries will be received at the various embassies and legations and also over farm conditions at home.

These ladies will have plenty to talk about after their get-together in Washington!

Informal Home Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning an informal house wedding and I hope you will help me.

1. Would you please tell me if it would be proper to write the invitations?

2. Is it necessary to mail an invitation to people you see every day or may I just give it to them myself?

3. Will you please tell me how I might word the invitation?

4. Please tell me when the bride cuts the cake, and how this is done?

Bride-to-be.

1. Yes, notes of invitation are the proper thing for an informal house wedding.

2. It will be better to mail all your invitations.....then there will be no uncertainty about them, no mistake about the date, the place, the time of the wedding.

3. The proper thing is for the mother of the bride-to-be, or whoever is the hostess of her home, to write the notes of invitation. Somewhat like this:

Dear Mary,

Jane and Tom are to be married in our home on Tuesday the first of May, at four o'clock, and it would make us all very happy if you and George would come for the ceremony at four and stay afterward to eat the simple gathering of relatives and friends. Do tell me that you will both be with us.

Dearest love from us all to you both.

Devotedly,

4. The bride cuts the cake during the last course. She may cut only the first piece, or she may cut the first few pieces, or she may cut the entire cake—this is as she wishes.

DIP YOUR HANDS into color. The shops are showing soft doeskin gloves in every imaginable shade in deep colors, and delicate pastels. A new importation guarantees that the glove can be wiped clean and will not bleed when washed.

GO OUT to dinner wearing a printed silk dinner dress. A charming long-sleeved model has a design of morning glories in white, gray and rose tones over a black silk crepe ground. Pink ribbon sweeps up from the back and ties in a bow at one side.

If the top decoration of the cake is a very elaborate decoration, this is usually made like a cover, and when the bride is ready to cut the cake, she lifts off this cover.

Usually the bride's cake contains "fortunes" for the wedding attendants who are seated at the bride's table. The cake is marked with rings to show which is the bridesmaids' side of the cake and which the groom's side. The favors are wrapped in silver foil, have been pushed through the bottom of the cake at intervals. In one side is a tiny gold ring which means "first to be married"; a shiny penny for wealth, a thimble or cat for the "old maid"; a wishbone for the luck-test. In the other side, a button for the bachelor, a penny for the "rich man"; a ring for the next to be married, and small dice or a horseshoe for the "lucky one."

TABLE MANNERS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. How should a substance be removed from the mouth?

2. Is it correct to try to hide the "operation" by holding up the napkin before the mouth?

3. Should you be noticed that some people before they drink from their glass, wipe their lips with their napkin. Is this what one should do?

Wondering.

1. Take the substance, as inconspicuously as possible, between the thumb and forefinger, and put it also as inconspicuously as possible on the side of the plate.

2. No! This trying to hide the "operation" by hiding the mouth behind a help-up napkin only serves to make it more noticeable.

3. Yes, we should wipe our lips with the napkin before we drink from a glass. This prevents unattractive smears on the rim of the glass.

Tale Bearer Only Wins Dislike

It is Dangerous Way of Courting Favor, Miss Grenelle Says

By LISA GRENELLE

Walter was an agreeable lad, big for his age, broad of shoulder and manly looking. Yet, he wasn't popular at school. None of his classmates seemed to like him. Nor was he much more popular at home, at least among the younger members of the family. Sister Anne and brothers Fred and Harold would have nothing to do with Walter if they could help it.

What was wrong? It was the usual thing: Walter was addicted to telling tales. It's a fault no child will forgive you know.

It doesn't matter to Willie's schoolmates whether he is the son of a distinguished banker or the offspring of a plumber, whether he is handsome or ugly, little or big, clever or a bit dumb. All they insist upon is that he be a good sport, and being a good sport, according to a child's point of view, consists principally of two things—not to cry when you're hurt, and not to tell tales.

Some Encourage It

Many mothers, without realizing it, encourage their children to tell tales. It seems to simplify things if the busy mother to let one child report the doings of another. Oscar put-in charge of the younger children, reports, not without a note of triumph. In his voice, that same has just tried to set fire to the curtains while Tommy has cut the clothes line.

Mother is furious, of course, with the younger children and gives them a proper punishment in front of Oscar. Oscar of course, is praised, and he feels very superior and grown up, quite in league and on an equal with mother.

It is a cheap and easy way of winning favor, especially when coming to stand first with mother. Oscar tries it again. He takes extra care to report everything exaggerating things a little perhaps, making only one more little step and Candy is blaming things on Janie and Tommy, things that are entirely his fault.

And at school it seems no way near up with favor than by telling, tales on the other An easy way, perhaps, of appearing superior in teacher's eyes, is telling tales on the other pupils.

It Is Not Trusted

But it doesn't work out in the long run. Everyone comes to distrust and dislike a tale bearer, so they despise a stool-pigeon. Yet, the habit grows on Oscar. Hinkle do grow, especially as it is the first, and perhaps, the only way he knows of acquiring that sense of importance all of us crave, child and adult alike.

But Mrs. — of Hollywood, Cal. mother of four, disagrees with me. She say I'm wrong, that it's dangerous to tell a child that tale bearing especially to his own mother. She says supposing Janie had been caught not by Mrs. — but by say why Jimmie shouldn't himself prevent Janie from setting fire to the curtains, he being so much bigger and stronger about it. Janie never would bear that against Jimmie, for it involved a black eye.

But Mrs. — is not convinced. She says that a child brought up not to tell tales would, when grown to man's estate, stand by and see his neighbor murder his wife and never tell, nor do anything to protect her.

Fashion Flashes

NOT POSSIBLE to possess too many blouses if one goes in for suits or for the separate skirt and blouse vogue. A lovely and useful blouse is of crisp white sheer linen with V-shaped finely tucked front matched by tiny bone studs and rings of bright red linen. Such lacing also encircles the short puffed sleeve where it is free in bow.

A GOOD FRIEND to jobe woman who goes in for dinner or evening dresses of printed fabrics is a black net coat with widely flaring back from the waist and very full abundant. This looks lovely over prints of the exotic type.

PART OF THE PICTURE both for day and evening is the cape. One delightful evening cape is of three-quarters length in brocade that has a design of tiny round colored flowers on a delicate linen-green ground.

THOSE EARLY HOURS between tea and dinner demand lazy clothes The ideal wear is a pyjama suit in heavy satin. A charming model is raspberry piped with dusty pink. Here is a matching scarf with a monogrammed Ascot scarf. Grand for travel wear too.

OUT EVERYTHERE is gray in its soft pastel shades. Most attractive with is a suit of gray woolen bouclé with a loose box braid and vest with a dark blue crepe de Chine blouse.

MIXING UP accessories colors is an important note this season. For instance, a bunch of sulphur yellow and cyclamen pink and worn pinned under the chin gives one with a navy blue wool dress. Or a suede belt and envelope bag are of the yellow, while the gloves are of the latter color.

NO LONGER a matron fashion is the frock made with simulated redingote effect. Especially is a one-piece coat dress of sheer navy blue wool made in redingote effect, with the printed portion in brilliant red and blue print on a white ground.

Transform your Home with the REFRESHING COLOURFUL touch of Paint . . . .

WHAT a glamour there is in home decoration! Even little changes made by rearranging furniture often give delight out of all proportion to the trouble involved. Think, then, how exciting it would be to have your home made new again by the magic of paint—made new inside and out with happy colours that will give your home a fresh, clean, well-groomed look. You can do it all easily, simply and economically with paint.

USE A QUALITY PAINT

For the best results, be sure you use a quality paint. Then you will get brighter colours—colours that retain their beauty—and protection that lasts. Let the price you pay be your guide to quality. And use a good brush.

Keeping Your Hands On Par With Beauty

Grace Trevor

Her graceful hands are always up to beauty par, the result of care

(By Helen Follett)

Nothing makes a woman more self-conscious than hands that are not up to beauty par. Even though the jiggles pots and pans, her pretty pawn must be velvet smooth and fair to the eye.

She must follow a policy of protection, avoid water very hot or very cold, never deal with cleaning agents that eat into the epidermis, dry her hands carefully and thoroughly after washing them. Furniture polish plays the dickens with pretty mitts. When dusting up the mahogany heirlooms, gloves should be worn.

Corn meal is a friend to hands. Its starchy contents are soothing. Foam up soap suds in the palms and a little corn meal. The fine grains will grind out every particle of dust and grime. Use a lotion freely. If you like to play at making cosmetics, soak 60 grams of white gum tragacanth in 14 ounces of strong rosewater for three days, add one ounce of alcohol, one ounce glycerine. You'll find this a worker of miracles for softening the skin giving it a lovely texture.

A creamy molding once or twice a week is helpful. Use coconut oil and massage diligently. Pat in some almond meal, slip the hands into white cotton gloves and wear them all night.

Any woman who suffers from pimples, boils, carbuncles or abscesses should pin her faith to thorough soapy cleansings which will remove extraneous matter that is a nesting place for bacteria, free the skin from deposits containing waste chemicals sent out by sweat and oil glands, stimulate its functions and enliven circulation.

Infections more frequently come on the neck where the friction of collars causes abrasions which invite bacteria to do their mean work. Soap is the queen of cosmetics, don't forget that, you who linger round cosmetic counters and fling money for beautifiers.

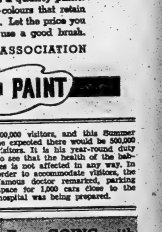
If the white-haired lady has dyed her hair and found the results appalling, as often happens with the home-experimenter, she should put herself in the hands of an experienced specialist. Placing one chemical step another makes matters worse. The hair may turn green or taupe, such things have happened.

The hair must be conditioned, a dye removed, used, the whole business started again. If it is desired that the whiteness be restored there are clever ways to do it. Part of the hair is colored, dressed so as to cover and hide the hair that is coming out in the natural shade. Then the white growth comes in, dyed portion until that, too, comes out silvered.

DR. A. R. DAFOE GUEST AT OSHAWA

Physician to Quints Purchases a New Chevrolet

Oshawa, April 13—Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, world-famous country doctor, was in Oshawa on Saturday during one of these rare interludes from his duties as physician to the Dionne quintuplets. He was guest of General Motors of Canada Limited and had lunch with the general Mrs. R. S. McLaughlin at "Parkwood."



While he practically has to be dragged away from "his babies" he enjoys his little visits to the outside world. On Saturday Dr. Dafoe was at the Oshawa Chevrolet showroom to replace the Chevrolet model he had been driving. The new car, a beautiful, dark green in color, and finished in Dafoe's own favorite blue plate "D-70" is fully equipped to take him "on his rounds."

The country doctor, Dr. Dafoe graduated from the "horse and buggy stage" away back in 1901 and has brought his first car—a Chevrolet Four Ninety—and he has been driving a Chevrolet practically ever since.

Before returning to Callander on Saturday night he paid a visit to Hockering College where his son is a student.

While bidding his genial guest, Mr. McLaughlin, Dr. Dafoe indicated that he might not have many holidays this Summer. Next year, he stated, the quintuplets had 1,500,000 visitors, and this Summer he expected there would be 500,000 visitors. It is his year-round duty to see that the health of the babies is not affected in any way. In order to accommodate visitors, the famous doctor remarked, parking space for 1,000 cars close to the hospital was being prepared.

EASTER OBSERVANCE

Whatever the state of the world in general the Christian festival of Easter was marked this year with an observance which was widespread. Even in Russia the churches were crowded with worshippers bearing the traditional greeting on their lips, "Christ is Resurrected."

Sunday saw the churches of every city, town and hamlet and village and countryside of nearly all Christendom thronged with worshippers glad with the Easter message, though in some countries the governments stood in aloofness.

Even religious leaders, non-Christian in faith, admitted in Easter addresses that Jesus of Nazareth left the greatest influence among men since time began and that He would yet come to be the bond between the Hebrew and Christian worlds, because he was a Jew of the Jews and His teachings are based on the laws and the prophets of Palestine.

The world recognizes the principles of the Man of Galilee as those principles which sum up the laws of God and life, though unfortunately man does not apply them in their fulness except in some individual lives. But the potency of these principles, faith and customs in individual lives proves their efficacy not only on individuals but on social organizations. At this time in a world torn with fears of possible strife, the human heart throughout the world naturally turns to the teachings of that universal rule of life, which would make war no more and which upholds the dignity of human life. As long as man is what he is there will be that yearning. To nations and individuals it is encouraging to find so much of the Easter spirit abroad even if it is not in that fulness which it will some day achieve.

A MODERN "SERMON"

Germany, endeavoring to prove an origin unique and without debt to other racial influences, has just had published a Nazi modification of the Sermon of the Mount, which eliminates all references to Palestine, the classes of the Hebrews, the kings, laws and prophets of ancient days and even the Ten Commandments made into the Gospel according to St. Matthew.

Few persons would recognize the new version as in this exhortation on turning the other cheek—"If thy comrade smite thee in the face in his wrath, it is not always right to smite him back. It is more manly to preserve a superior calm. Mayhap thy comrade will repent."

The Pharisees and Scribes become "teachers and preachers", and the laws "divine truths". These are the alterations of Christ's teachings—blessings. "Blessed is he who bears his sorrow manfully. He will find strength not to despair.

"Blessed is he who keeps good comradeship always, for such is the will of God."

The new Sermon according to the Germans is from the hand of Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller.

But the Evangelicals of Germany have protested against this humanisation in what endeavors to follow the Nazi doctrines. Dr. Mueller's effort seems a poor weak negative form of those divine utterances. It is just a politicalisation of religion for the purpose of the moment. One can understand that it will not reach the hearts of the people. But they will seek the truth in its purest form, not as made over to suit a political group, which for the time is in power.

EMOTIONS ELECTRICAL

That the spark of life and the emotions are electrical in basis is claimed as a result of experiments and tests which were reported at Kansas City last night by the American Chemical Society. The discovery was made at Harvard Medical School.

Those who believe in revealed religion and the place of a Supreme Power of infinite wisdom at the centre everything that is, need have no fear of such discovery for it refers only to the evidence, not to the first causes which lie beyond. Indeed a great body of scientists today accepts the view that pure mechanism cannot answer the problems of life, that evolution or natural selection cannot quite explain life. The atom is seen to be fully organized and that is as far back as man can yet go. Many of the leading scientists see a divine pattern or plan running throughout, a divine intervention directing the forces of all nature in supreme wisdom.

Hence the discovery is not disconcerting to faith. This discovery of electrical basis is therefore but the extension of knowledge which not only does not upset belief but will substantiate faith in the divine governance of the world.

The discovery is reported as follows:—"The discovery made at Harvard Medical School, is said to fit significantly into other recent revelations of science that include thought and emotions in a network of electrical phenomena which appear to underlie chemistry and structure of living matter.

"The newly found electrical charges are on the giant protein molecules, the body's so-called "building blocks", hitherto considered electrically neutral. In effect the Harvard men discovered billions of molecule-sized dynamos which exist in every human being.

"The findings result from ten years research under the direction of Dr. Edwin J. Cohn, Professor of Biological Chemistry at Harvard.

"These newly found forces", it was stated in the Chemical Society's announcement, 'are of primary interest in connection with the transmission of nervous impulses.'

"Clarification of these electrical effects removes an important barrier to the understanding necessary to the intelligent treatment of nrvous disorders, of how a nerve message courses down a nerve fibre."

EASTER ANGELS

(St. Matthew 28:1-7.)
Tune: Holley, L.M., or Rockingham.

The Marys went at dawn of day
To view the tomb where Jesus lay;
Anointing spices sweet they brought,
The first glad Easter gift they bought.

The big stone, who for us shall roll
From sepulchre on yonder knoll?
A mighty angel passed that way;
They looked—the stone was rolled away.

The angel sat upon the stone,
Majestic, awesome and alone;
His countenance like lightning shone,
His raiment white as snow in tone.

For fear of Him the keepers shake,
Like dead they lay in terror's quake;
To saintly Marys, angels' voice
Thrilled them to hope and to rejoice.

Direct he bade them banish fear,
Since loving seraphs hovered near;
Jesus ye seek, He's risen today,
Come! see the place where our Lord lay.

Go tell disciples quickly lead—
That Christ is risen from the dead!
The woman ran with joy and fear,
And winged the word to them most dear.

Now angels chant the Easter song,
Through highest heaven their praise prolong;
While we adore the Church's Head,
Our living Saviour from the dead.

WHERE THE RIVER CART JOINS

THE TWISTING CLYDE, in Bonnie Scotland, there, is a fertile, fanshaped farm. Three good fields, a bit of swamp, a shade of dirt road, and the difference between that farm and any other in Scotland as visualized by a writer in the magazine Time, lay in the fact that the farmer could gaze every day on the towering bulk of the greatest ship ever built in Britain or elsewhere. From the laying of the keel until the last touch was added to the superstructure, five years, the farmer could look from his own fields at the marvellous making of this wondership of the world, day by day, as it developed under the hands of the world's finest shipwrights and artisans of all kinds. The story of the launching is now ancient history and the farmer misses an important though temporary part of the landscape, the Queen Mary is now afloat. The launching was witnessed by thousands of people who lined the banks of the Clyde, and incidentally the launching was remarkable because astronomy had an important part in it, in addition to all the other sciences which entered into the making and launching of this great ship. It was estimated to an hour when the great ship would be ready for launching and astronomers and meteorologists agreed that one of the highest spring tides could be expected at about 2 p.m. to float the great Cunard White Star liner from John Brown's shipyard down the shallow Clyde. The launching was a success although the great ship grounded twice, fortunately without ill results. A remarkable piece of news comes from the dry dock where the Queen Mary goes for a final tuning up and hull inspection, the four gigantic propellers installed are already obsolete and will be replaced in dry dock for more modern ones. Five years was required in the building and the cost approximated $35,000,000.

FORECAST BOOM YEAR FOR GREAT LAKES SHIPPING—The 1936 ore and coal shipping season on the Great Lakes, now getting under way, will be the best since 1929 and one of the best since the boom years following the world war. This conclusion is based on results of a pre-season survey conducted by E. M. Griggs, president of the Iron and Coal Exchange, which has its headquarters in Cleveland, an affiliation of shippers and consumers of ore and coal. Advance estimates for the season anticipate a movement of 36,000,000 tons of ore this year and shipment of approximately 39,350,000 tons of coal. The importance of the navigation industry in terms of dollars and cents is evident when it is considered that each of the boats in commission costs approximately $700 a day to operate. Translating this into a total based on the estimate that about 260 boats will be commissioned this year, it means that the 1936 Great Lakes fleet will be expending more than $182,000 every day of the navigation season. This figure, of course, relates only to actual operating costs of the boats and does not take into account the hundreds of thousands represented by payrolls and operating expenses in the mines and mills and on the docks. The above layout shows early season shipping getting underway.

Little Benny's Note Book

Today in school Miss Kitty was telling us about what a grate thing it is to realize our blessings, saying, No matter how unfortunate a person is, if they are just a little fillosophical they realize that they have certain consolations, or as they are sometimes called, compensations. A blind man, for instanta, develops the senses of touch and hearing to a remarkable degree and derives a much greater pleasure and satisfaction from them than he otherwise ever would. Now I wonder what sort of a one you can give me an example of compensation? she said.

Which Scarey Judge waved his hand, saying, There was a man and he was blind and a lot about everything till suddenly he lost his job and didn't have any more money so he didn't have to worry any more about whether there was holes in his pockets.

It's unfigy to have holes in your pockets even if there's nothing to fall through, so I'd call that a doubtful compensation, anyone else? Miss Kitty said.

Which Hayrain Levy waved his hand, saying, Once a man accidently had his whole nose cut off, but he didn't care much because he had the compensation of not being able to catch a cold any more.

I'm afraid your nologes of fizzeology isn't very trustworthy, whose next? Miss Kitty said.

Being me, saying, Once a man got cawt in a flood and he was a champeen swimmer so he would of saved his life perfect trees and things floating passed hadn't of kept hitting him on the head, and his last thawt was a smile because his mother had always warned him not to wait all his time trying to be a grate swimmer so he had the compensation of knowing that fellows mothers are generally right every pelty year rite.

O my, I think we'll terminate the subject with that pretty touch of sentiment, Miss Kitty said.

Which we did.

In his Communique-Chief of the Fascist forces in East Africa announced in a communique: "The victorious advance of our troops continues in various sectors of the northern front.

"Our columns which left Gondar (30 miles north of Lake Tana, in the northwest sector) occupied yesterday, April 12, the peninsula of Gorgora, on Lake Tana, and hoisted the tri-color there.

Queen of Festivals Marked With Beauty and Devotion

Impressive Rites And Service in City Churches

Christ is risen! Christ is risen!
He hath burst His bonds in twain!
Christ is risen! Christ is risen!
Alleluia! swell the strain!

Easter Day, the Queen of Festivals, was observed at the old Parish Church of St. Thomas in services of marked beauty and devotion. Large congregations were present at the celebrations of the Holy Communion at 8 a. m., 9 a.m., and 11 a.m.; the first two celebrations being plain sung the latter fully choral. The musical portions of the service at 11 o'clock were beautifully rendered and manifested the careful training which the organ choir had received from Mr. Ross Mosher, the choir master, and Mr. W. Ernest Wheatley, Mus. Bac., as organist. The floral setting to the communion office at this service was the work of Mr. Wheatley and it was greatly admired for the first time. It is, indeed, a most beautiful arrangement and worthy of the highest commendation. All the 11 o'clock service and Sunday morning the setting will be used again.

The altar was beautifully adorned with Easter and Calla lilies.

The vicar, the Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, was the celebrant at the three celebrations of the Holy Communion at which over six hundred communicants were present.

In addressing the congregation at 11 o'clock service the vicar based his remarks upon the words "He is risen". These words he said were ringing throughout the church in all parts of the world on this great festival and it was incumbent upon all Christians to acknowledge their great debt to God for the truths of the resurrection and join in the loud Alleluias of praise and thanksgiving. The acknowledgment, he said, should be made not in mere empty words, but by consecration to a renewed spiritual life. At the great service of the church, in which the congregation was having part and receiving their Easter Communion, he urged them to determine to make their acknowledgment of their great debt to God not a spasmodic duty, but to give evidence of it by a life filled with and by regular worship of Him, who brought and won His great battle that we might have life, life abundant and life eternal. God grew to us in Christ Jesus and on High Holy Week, but day by day and God has a right to our love, for that grace day by day. We rejoice we glory in the resurrection of our Lord and Saviour, but above all we all should go forth from their Master Communion with a more ardent desire for and determination to obtain a more exalted life and attainment of Christ.

"Christ is risen!"—He is risen indeed."

With the conventional pomp and devotion the glories of Easter were celebrated in Belleville on Easter Day. Over 600 communicants received the Blessed Sacrament during the three celebrations of Holy Communion at which the Rev. C. P. Clarke, rector of St. Thomas', M.C., officiated, assisted by Rev. C. G. Wright rector of Christ Church. The church was decorated with Easter lilies placed in the chancel. At the evening service Easter carols and hymns were rendered by the choir under the direction of Mr. Ross Mayhew, organist. The Sunday Schools also observed the celebration during the week.

Easter was ushered in at Holloway Street United Church with a special Thursday Service at 11 o'clock a.m. This unique service was largely attended. Special Easter music was presented and three anthems sung in Holloway Street Church on Sunday while Easter Hymns were rendered by the choir. Rev. R. E. Freeman spoke on the "Joys of Easter" at the morning and evening services.

Celebrating Easter with music of a fitting character was accomplished at Bridge Street United Church were were unveiled yesterday especially at the 11.00 a.m. and 7.00 p.m. services. Prior to the evening service Mr. W. F. Chapman, A.T.C.M., the organist of the church gave a splendid organ recital consisting of traditional Easter music. Special soloists sang Easter Anthems at the evening service and Rev. Gerald Ruston, B.A., delivered the Easter message in his own sermon of the day, his evening sermon being the study of types and proofs of immortality.

At the Victoria Ave. Baptist Church Rev. A. G. Sinclair delivered two special Easter messages at the morning and evening services, taking for his subject at the morning service "The Easter Dawn", basing his address on that joyous Easter morn. Special anthems were rendered by soloists and the choir with Mrs. Fred Johson as choir leader and Harold Cornell as organist assisting in these joyous Easter services.

Tabernacle United Church commemorated Easter in a fitting manner. Fifty Easter lilies transformed the decorations at the altar, with the cross in the background. A large congregation gathered for the Sunday morning worship. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hogle, Betty Lou, was presented by her parents for baptism. Rev. L. R. Taylor spoke on the theme "Did not our heart burn within us?" Special Easter music was rendered by the choir.

At the evening service, the Sacred Cantata, "The Way of the Cross", by Tozer, was reverently sung by the choir under the direction of Mrs. J. F. Bradley with Mrs. H. P. Duff at the organ. The soloists were Mesdames Birdon Brown, J. F. Bradley, H. Potts, F. Cornell and Messrs Grant Muldrew, Fred Potts and Gardner Duff who gave highly interpretations of their parts. Rev. I. R. Naylor in a few words thanked the choir for their contribution to the worship of Easter Day.

John Street United Church was filled to capacity for both Easter Day services, Rev. Jobt. Hall B.A., delivering the special Easter messages in his addresses. The church was also fittingly decorated for the communion celebrations of Easter while the choir rendered special Easter anthems at both the morning and evening services. The choir was assisted by a trio consisting of Mrs. Wm. Hall, violinist, Mrs. Ernest Maybee, accordian, contributed vocal duets and Mrs. Hall and George Hoagle sang duets by Mr. and Mrs. John Hoagle.

After the last done justice to the supper Rev. J. E. Beckel presided over the programme which was under the conpassed of Mrs Lucille Dracup pianist, Mrs. Ernest Rocks, cellist Mr. Omar Dracup, banjo and Mr. Everett Maybee, accordian, contributed vocal duets and Mrs. Hall and George Hoagle and Mr. and Mrs. John Hoagle.

Letters to the Editor

Postal Building System at Craig Street

The Editor,
The Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ont.,
Sir:

Permit me, through the medium of your valued paper, to warn subscribers against substituting a journey to the Craig Mine near Bancroft for a visit to Belleville, when the moment we are changing from steel-buckets to cage hoisting. This change involves families with men at work. When the cage is installed, the drilling of the 325 foot shaft will be completed from its present point, also the cross-cutting necessary to access the ore body of the vein which is in excess of the 13' drift. This vein will be undertaken on a tonnage basis by a crew of capable mining men. Until such time as the program is completed there will be no opening for inexperienced men. Anyone addressed to the mine will be answered. The mine road is a good road in summer. Its difficult at present due to heavy snow. Considering the handicap and utter disappointment results those undertaking the journey seeking employment as present. Early in the summer we expect to be able to engage men who can adapt themselves to the work and at that time the trip in is very pleasant. We hope to steadily advance and employ a number of men permanently all year round under decent conditions and results thru far fully justify this. Thanking you in anticipation,

Yours faithfully,
Wm. H. Smith

ITALIAN PLANES FLY OVER CAPITAL

Emperor Hails Selassie Leading 300,000 to Northern Front

Addis Ababa, April 13—(AP)—Nine Italian planes flew over Addis Ababa's capital today, thrusting the populace into panic, just as a government spokesman said Emperor Haile Selassie was leading a movement of 300,000 fresh warriors to the battle front.

The fascist aerial squadron appeared out of the north, circled the city twice after an alarm had been turned back to the northern front. The flyers apparently were bent only on a scouting mission, dropping no bombs.

The government spokesman said / lassie was carrying on energetically his personal direction of the war with Italy.

The reserve manpower was dispatched to defensive positions from Lake Tana, sphere of British influence in the northwest, to Lake Asknagi, in the central sector 100 miles north of Dessye, centering about Waldia, scene of an earlier Ethiopian defeat.

The government spokesman said a direct message from the emperor indicated he was safe, despite delicate health.

Lack Defence

Government officials attributed the earlier retreat of the Ethiopian armies in the north to an alleged lack of defence against alleged poison gas attacks and aerial bombardments.

Ethiopian reports said a squadron of Italian planes bombarded Warra Baln, 40 miles southwest of Dessye, yesterday morning and several hundred worshippers rushing from the churches. Three persons were reported killed.

The dispatch of reserves indicated a change in the emperor's military tactics.

Previously he had guarded against great concentrations, particularly in the difficult terrain of the extreme north.

Now, government officials said, the Fascist armies were handicapped by hasty extension of their lines, while the "little rains" were becoming more heavy each day. The natives looked for better opportunities to attack the invaders' communications south from Makale.

GRECIAN PREMIER DIES OF APOPLEXY

Constantine Demerdjis Was Monarchist With Moderate Views

Athens, April 13.— (AP)—Constantine Demerdjis, Premier of Greece since last November 30, died today after an attack of apoplexy.

Gen. John Metaxis, veteran Minister of War, was named Premier to succeed Demerdjis.

The Premier had been under the care of a physician recently, but was thought to be convalescing. He was found dead in bed.

A monarchist with moderate views, Demerdjis had been inactive politically for a time until November, when he was called by King George to form a Cabinet after the recalled monarch became at odds with George Kondylis, the late strong man who was largely responsible for the King's return to the throne.

Demerdjis had held the post o' Minister of Naval Affairs in 1913 and 1927, but he retired from politics then and taught civil law. in the Athens University until summoned to the Premiership.

TO WED PRINCE?

Miss Ingrid Bonnier, Miss Astrid Sandeck, who works for a dressmaking establishment in Stockholm, Sweden, "may some day be the lady of Prince Bertil, Duke of Sweden. She is a famous beauty, daughter of Col. Wm. Bonnier, back of Stockholm. According to reports, Prince Bertil arrived in Nice to obtain permission from his grandfather, King Gustaf of Sweden to marry Miss Bonnier. If precedent stands for anything permission will not be given and the prince may risk legal his royal heritage by such a marriage.

Tweed and District

Tweed—A number of important matters will be dealt with by the Municipal Council at their regular April meeting. One item which came up for consideration was the payment to Sheriff Shaw, formerly any transient trader might carry on his business in Tweed without the formality of obtaining a license. This legislation was repealed and a new by-law of a similar effect immediately was enacted making the obtaining of a license, the cost of which will be determined each January by the local Council. A transient trader is defined as anyone who has not been resident in the Municipality for a period of three months and whose name does not appear on the assessors' roll. Anyone not conforming to the terms of the by-law will render himself liable to a fine of from $6.00 to $50.00 or in default of payment to a term of 21 days in jail. Constable J. C. Hayes has been authorized to enforce the by-law rigidly.

PURCHASE NEW HOSE

Members of the local Fire Department, Messrs. Claude Barrett and Wallace Moon, spoke of the insufficiency of the supply of fire hose, and on their recommendation that a further supply be obtained, the Council ordered the purchase of fifty feet from the Goodyear Rubber Company as was quoted and presented by Mr. Osborn.

For a number of years Tweed Amusements Ltd., has been faced with the serious problem of obtaining revenue from films to pay operating expenses. Several leas years ago a reduction in the assessation of arrears of taxes amounting to $400.00. A delegation from Tweed amusements, composed of Messrs. T. N. Healy and I. D. Corcoran interviewed the Council and asked the matter of a rebate of taxes for the 1936 assessment. It is felt by the organization that it is entitled to some consideration from the local Council in view of the fact that the shareholders have not in the past received and do not anticipate at any time to receive dividends on their stock. At the present time there is a considerable indebtedness against the rink which it is expected will be taken care of by getting a number of interested citizens to subscribe for additional shares. The Council, realizing that the Arena serves a useful purpose in the physical development of the youth of the village, and that it was made possible only by the generosity of a large number of broad-minded citizens, passed a motion that taxes to the amount of $375 be rebated, and that the assessment be reduced to $2,000.00. The Council and Board of directors will pay taxes amounting to $400 the remainder of the arrears.

For the use of the Council and of Constable Hayes, an allowance was recommended for the Council chambers and will be installed at once. A policy of $300 to cover automobiles employed by the village in public works was ordered from Miss M. M. Rayburn. A committee was appointed to interview Mr. Henry Courneyea, local hotel owner, with regard to the Queen check. The Council pays a rental of $10.00 per month for these sheds to accommodate the farmers, but complaints have been received regarding their unsatisfactory state, and the roof leaking in several places, making them unfit for horses.

Demand Refund

A letter received from the Workmen's Compensation Board demanded a refund of $180.81 on four claims paid last year. Considerable correspondence followed. Communications were received from the Department of Municipal Affairs for the backing by the local Council, and the Village Treasurer, from the Department of Health advising that the Medical Health Officer be paid an adequate salary fixed by by-law.

The following accounts were ordered paid:—

Jas. Rashotte, assessor $40.00; Silas Lee, assessor $40.00; J. C. Hayes, expenses, $.12; W. H. Richardson, salary 20.00; J. C. Hayes, salary 70.00; H. Courneyea, animal rental 10.00; Tweed Hydro 197.00; Tweed Hospital Association 25.00; T. H. Franklin Co., auditing 145.00; Louis Rashotte 2.25; Dominion Typewriter Co., 95.00; John Prevost 1.80; Tweed News, printing 115.00; Thos. Whalen 13.50; A. G. Barrett, W.36; R. G. Coulter 15.50; F. B. Foster 85.02; J. J. Murray 11.90; H. Foster 5.87; Quinn and Quinn 53.86; Dominion Stores 12.85; J. Baker 4.96.

A young man of the village appeared before Magistrate Lloyd on the charge of taking a car from a local garage without the owner's permission. He pleaded guilty to the charge, and, as he had appeared on former occasions charged with various offences and was on suspended sentence at the time, Magistrate Lloyd held that a term in the County Jail would have a salutary effect. A term of four weeks was imposed.

Mr. Ahbbery Quinn returned last week from Ireland where he had spent several weeks visiting his old home. Rather heavy seas were experienced on the return voyage.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Beach observed the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding on Thursday. The W. A. of St. James' Anglican Church presented Mrs. Beach with a beautiful flower basket as a token of appreciation for her faithful services to the Church. Mr. and Mrs. Beach were married at St. Dunstan's Church, Cranbrook by Rev. Canon William Bell.

The Catholic Women's League at their annual meeting this week elected the following officers:—

Pres.—Mrs. M. J. Quinn.
First Vice Pres.—Mrs. E. O'Leary.
Second Vice Pres.—Mrs. Wm. Elliott.
Third Vice Pres.—Mrs. A. McConnachie.
Sec'y. Treas.—Mrs. P. Brennan.

ROSLIN

Roslin—The April meeting of the Roslin Branch of the Women's Institute was held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. Cassadelle.

There were twelve ladies present. The president, Mrs. Harry Silk presided and opened the meeting in the usual manner by the Roll Call on an "Easter Thought". Mrs. G. Burleigh gave an instrumental selection and Mrs. M. Fargey gave a paper on "The Beauties of Spring". Mrs. H. Silk leader for the month spoke briefly on the Motto for the month, "Forward" and Mrs. Cassidy Thing God ever made and Forgot to put a Soul In." Current events were brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem. A social hour was enjoyed and a dainty lunch served by the hostess assisted by Miss E. Smeaton and Mrs. R. Wilson.

Mrs. and Mrs. Floyd Holbert of Toronto and Miss Dorothy Holbert of Belleville were Easter visitors with relatives here and at Thomasburg.

Miss Hudson of Toronto is spending the holiday with her sister Mrs. (Rev.) F. P. Hall.

The Lenten Mid-week Lantern Slide Service was held in the Anglican Church on Thursday evening of last week.

FINGER-NAILS AND THEIR CARE

This is to be one of those "throw thyself" in manicuring. Whether one is going to tell you what makes finger-nails look like that, why they are pink and polished, why they should have attention other than themself, by the tooth brush that puts on the vermillion enamel.

When the human nature carry a lovely deep rose bush it is because the blood circulates up and down, ceiling. Nails are white and transparent, the pink half moon of the flesh beneath them. Brittle nails are usually caused by a diet deficient in calcium. A glass of milk with each meal will make them grow in a few days, like the manner. Blue nails may be due to a chill, or a heart trouble.

The finger-nail consists of four parts; the free edge or cave, the body nail, the half moon or lunula and the root which extends under the flesh.

At the base of the nail is the matrix, from which the nail is constantly producing tiny cells that push forth, overlap so perfectly and beautifully that the nail surface is as smooth as glass. The slightest injury to the matrix may produce a nail deformity. Not a permanent one, always, as the nail is the most rapid of all body tissues to grow and to shed.

The outer surface of the nail is convex, the inner surface concave, with deep channels on either side to aid sheath for the fingertip. We'd have a terrible time picking up small objects if it were flat. Nature not supplied us with these pretty little shells.

The nail itself is nerveless like the lobe of the feathers of birds, but the matrix has a complete equipment of nerves, lymph and blood vessels. It is a fact of membrer of the finger-nail corpuscles.

Rough treatment with a metal nail cleaner, pushing back the cuticle, cutting it and getting an infection may cause the loss of the nail and the deformity of the nail is rigid and deformed. So be gentle with it.

Nothing can be done about white spots. In course of time they disappear. Ringers, as a rule, are not comfortable, but a danger. Soak the finger in hot soapy water, lift the flesh away from the nail with pressure of the soapy cuticle stirred with the pointed stickers.

If a pus pocket appears, apply iodine immediately. If the pain and inflammation spreads seek medical attention without delay.

Finger-nails lose the natural luster if hands come in contact with dust or strong alkalies. They improve if given an oiling frequently, like a machine gun or rainproof oil. Neither one will cause the nail polish to fade, but will pull the enamel on a lubricated surface. That won't work out at all.

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

VERY RICH are many of the new lace evening frocks. A charming model, shown above, is of gold fine flesh-colored lace appliqued all over with gold, studded in pearl-like flowers and patterned all over with a delicacy of copper threads. Necklace is high in front.

LIKE A GARDEN — you'll notice this season. Large sprays of tailored carnations that sweeps from back to front. Darling hats is finished with a flimy red veil.

LOOKING AHEAD toward warm weather fashions and find that a major mode will be sports suits of printed cotton. Paper thin taffeta, made with brief jackets and pleated skirts.

NICE DAYS call for nice clothes. One nice suit has a frock of gray-and-white novelty suiting with white wool-covered buttons down the front. Wearing with it a swagger coat of the saffron yellow wool with rolling lapels of the greatest wooden.

OFF TO THE ORIENT go many designers for inspiration. So we have Chinese influence in rich brocades are worn by the smart women. Darling model in black, red and gold Chinese brocade makes a lovely dress when worn over a slim red or black crepe skirt.

FULL MEASURE in back marks the style of the new coats unless they be very slim and tightly fitted. A model in navy blue and white mixture tweed has a very full back, so much so that it swings out like a bell when the wearer walks on a wide armhole taper into tight wrists.

A GRAND COPY of a man's dress shirt is a blouse of white lace with a high ruffling collar, pleated bosom, pearl studs and all. This is worn with a man-tailored woolen suit and is ever so smart.

STRICTLY TAILORED is a cocktail suit of filmy lace, with notched lapels and everything. Satin binds the fitted jacket and marks the seams of the slim skirt. The blouse is of satin too.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

"Sally Rutledge" Starts Sunday In The Leagh Riot "Don't Get Personal" Now At The Capitol

Sound the trumpets, thunder the drums, Jimmy Dunn and Sally Eilers are together in a picture again. Their latest offering is "Don't Get Personal," a Universal now at the Capitol until tomorrow night.

This surefire team rose to stardom in "Bad Girl," won the Oscar, won the Photoplay Gold Medal and the Motion Picture Academy Award for the best performances of 1932. Now they go to town in a high comedy -that ripples with laughs and quakes with mirth.

Jimmie and Sally portray characters who do not want to fall in love. They fight off the world-old urge that makes the blood leap from the pulses. They are going to be different. In struggling against the inbred forces of Dan Cupid and Old Man Romance, they put up a barrier of comedy that shatters little lovers' quarrels burst into being, splitting bombshells of wisecracks. Every sequence crackles with the quality of their conversations and the crispness of their humor.

There is a third companion for Jimmie and Sally, a bulldog, modern musketeer. He is Pinky Tomlin; the same fellow who wrote "Object of My Affections" and he has created two new tunes for this picture. You'll like him as he singing "I Won't Take No for an Answer" and Wednesday "Barnyard Serenade." Join this happy-go-lucky trio, and all the rest of the good comrades in Belleville. Make up your party now to see "Don't Get Personal" at the Capitol Theatre. A personal tip — your friends will thank you for telling them to see this laugh riot.

Ladies Don't forget your beautiful piece of genuine Rockex Overware.

AT THE REGENT

"Bad Girl," Starring Dorothy Jordan and Ben Lyon, Coming Sunday At The Regent

Starting Sunday at the Regent Theatre, Belleville, the screen's favorite dancing sweethearts, Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers sway into the stratosphere of entertainment.

Critics declared "Top Hat" was better, and Astaire, Miss Rogers and Director Mark Sandrich, and a stellar cast have conspired in production of "Follow the Fleet" to make reviewers dig deep for new superlatives.

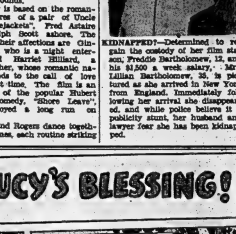
That old Rajah of Ragtime, Irving Berlin, has written seven new songs to let the world's nimblest Astaire, Miss Rogers, and a newcomer to the screen, the lovely Harriet Hilliard; and to provide the rhythms for the tantalizing toes of the king and queen of dance in the new RKO Radio screen show that opened at the Belle to thrilling capacity audiences on Saturday.

"Follow the Fleet" is a real down to earth' musical, employing a logical and meaty story, every day situations, and human characters. A battleship, a freighter, and the colorful city of San Francisco for realistic backgrounds.

The story is based on the romantic adventures of a pair of Uncle Sam's "buejackets". Fred Astaire and Randolph Scott ashore. The objects of their affections are Ginger Rogers, who is a night entertainer, and Harriet Hilliard, a school teacher, whose romantic nature responds to the call of love for the first time. The film is the adaptation of the popular Hubert Osborne comedy, "Shore Leave," which enjoyed a long run on Broadway.

Astaire and Rogers dance together three times, each routine striking a different mood and tempo, and each dance contributing new aesthetics to the curriculum of terpsichora. Ginger appears in her first solo dance in the picture, and Fred Astaire does a seven minute tap routine supplemented by 24 sailors, which is the novelty highlight of the film.

The leading players are supported by a strong and well-balanced cast including Astrid Allwyn, Mary Maricr, Tony Martin, Edward Burns, Harry Bertrand, Lucien Hall, Betty Grable, Joy Hodges, Jeanne Gray and others.



The Belle Latest News Flashes and "Robinson Crusoe Jnr." precede the feature attraction which consumes two hours in elaborate presentation.

"Follow the Fleet", altogether, is the last word in screen entertainment, a picture that no one should miss, when it is repeated again tonight, Tuesday and Wednesday, matinee daily.

Kiddies' Show Wednesday

On Wednesday morning at 10 a.m. a special 10c children's show will be presented consisting of Buck Jones in a splendid Western story, "The Fighting Ranger," Mary Jenny "Jen Gen" comedy, "Por Pete's Sake", and three of the best cartoons ever exhibited at one program in any theatre.

Twelve cute, cunning, real live bunnies will be presented, one to lucky girls and boys, chocolate Easter eggs will be presented to all kiddies attending this special Easter week show, at the Belle Wednesday morning at 10 a.m. Admission, children, 10c; adults, 25c.

KIDNAPPED?—Determined to regain the custody of her film star son, Annette Bartholomew, 13, and his $1,500 a week salary, Mrs. Lillian Bartholomew, left, is pictured as she arrived in New York from England. Immediately following her arrival disappeared, and while police believe it a publicity stunt, her husband and lawyer fear she has been kidnapped.

J. M. Beck Friend Of Great Britain

Washington, D.C., April 13 (CP)—The British Empire lost a good American friend when James Montgomery Beck, a former Solicitor General, died here yesterday of a heart attack. When the Great War broke out in 1914 Mr. Beck took the Allied cause as his own and his influence in the United States was strongly felt. In recognition of his services he was elected a Member of Gray's Inn, and was decorated by France and Belgium. In addition he was given the highest honors of eloquence in the Allied cause he wrote a number of articles and books and his essay "The Evidence in the case" was used by British propaganda agencies of all the Allies.

ACTOR'S ESCORT STRUCK ON HEAD

Blow Reported to Have Been Directed by Estranged Husband

Los Angeles, April 13—(AP)—The Los Angeles Herald and Express said today that Edward Forrest, San Francisco, an escort of actress Helen Twelvetrees, was the target receiving end of a blow aimed by Jack Woody, estranged husband of the screen star.

"The Woody-Forest brawl," said the newspaper, "centred about Forrest's Hollywood night spot. Woody dropped the handsome escort of his wife with a well directed punch in the eye."

The newspaper quoted Miss Twelvetrees as saying:

"Mr. Forrest and I are just good friends—we're known each other a long time. I don't understand why my husband would do such a thing."

TRAIN HITS CAR, OCCUPANTS LIVE

Driver Cannot Back up Car When Engine Hears Whistle

Hamilton, April 13 (CP)—A Toronto man and his wife and daughter miraculously escaped injury here before noon today when their car was struck by a speeding C.N.R. special on the Dundas Road crossing.

James Weaver, 364 Mortimer Ave., Toronto, was driving the car and Mrs. Betty, stopped right on the tracks as the train approached from the east. The engineer, apparently unaware of the Flying Spectacle's approach until it was approximately 100 feet away, started to sound his whistle.

Scared by the unexpected appearance of the train, Weaver tried to back his car off the tracks but he was unable to get completely clear. The locomotive struck the left front of the car, with the result that it turned right in but the three occupants were thrown clear and escaped.

The special, consisting of four cars and a diesel engine, was travelling between 50 and 60 miles an hour when the accident occurred. No reason could be learned for the car stopping on the track and he apparently did not hear the train until the last few seconds before the train was upon him.

Thomas Davidson, also of Toronto, was assisting Coulchurse as fireman on the special.

HURLED INTO AIR AS TRUCK DITCHES

Wrecking Truck Driver is Near Death at Hamilton

Hamilton, April 13—(CP)—Hurled into the air as the wrecking truck in which he was riding failed to make the curve at the Delaware highway at Duff's corners early today, Angelo Banda, 21, was fatally injured and a companion R. Lyons, escaped with minor bruises.

The two employees of a garage, had received a call to go to the aid of a motorist who had left the road, started up the highway towards Hamilton. As the truck made the sweeping curve at Duff's corners, lost control of the heavy machine and overturned several times.

Banda was rushed to the general hospital here where he died.

WALL STREET

New York, April 13—(AP)—A few of the Rails, Coppers and Specialties met with buying favor in today's stock market while profit taking held down the other sections of the list.

Sharp gains of fractions to a point or more, near the start of the fourth hour, included Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, U.S. Steel, Pennsylvania, Cerro de Pasco, Calumet and Hecla, Chrysler, White Motors, Chrysler, Phillip Morris, Curtis Publishing and Westinghouse Air Brake. Among losers of as much as a point were Bethlehem, Foor & Co., General Motors, Auburn, Douglas Aircraft, Western Union, Bell Telephone and Consolidated Edison.

Utilities are International Harvester, Bonds were quiet. The Commodity Division displayed indefinite trends. The United States dollar moved narrowly in terms of other currencies.

ENGLISH FOOTBALL RESULTS

London, April 13.—(CP Cable)—Sunderland captured the English Football League championship today when the Northern team trounced Birmingham 7-2 in a First Division encounter at Birmingham. Last year, Aston Villa was Sunderland's first champion-ship since 1913.

Three games remain to be played by leading clubs but Sunderland can only May 2, but Derby County, the runner-up cannot overtake Sunderland's points total, even a lead of eight. The County drew 1-1 with Grimsby.

Blackburn Rovers went under 4-3 at Liverpool and appear certain to play outside the First Division next season for the first time in the Club's history. West Bromwich Albion scored a 1-0 victory over Arsenal and is now five points better off than Blackburn. The Albion has 35 points and Rovers 30, a lead of eight. The County drew 1-1 with Grimsby.

The Second Division West Ham was forced to share the leadership with Manchester United and Charlton Athletic as the result of a 1-1 draw with Leicester City. Charlton Athletic is the champion of the South and Manchester United blanked Burnley 4-0. Both these leaders each have 50 points.

Bolton Wanderers kept 13-0 victory over Bristol Rovers, in which J. Payne equalled a three-month old Football League record by scoring nine goals. The Rovers remain in the Third Division, North section. Reading was beaten 1-0 by Crystal Palace and are two points behind the leader with 49.

No change occurred in the Northern Section where the three leading teams were defeated.

London, Ont., April 13.—(CP) (Canada)— J. Payne, robust Luton centre forward, "Bunny" Bell, "Idol of his teams' 13 goals against British Rovers in the Third Division, South Section English Football League game today. The Rovers were unable to reply. He equalled the record set by R. G. Ball, Tranmere Rovers, in 1930-31, when the Northern League Club swamped Oldham Athletic 14-4.

Livestock

Toronto, April 13 (CP)—The cattle division of the Toronto Live-stock Market opened active but unsettled market. No lambs were offered while sheep were steady.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch totalled 1,600 cattle, 130; hogs, 400; sheep and lambs, 7.

Monday's to good weighty steers sold steady at $4.75 to $5.75 while good butchers brought from $5.00 to $5.35; butcher cows ranged at steady prices from $3.75 to $4.00 with canners and cutters selling at $1.75 to $2.50. Bull sales were strong at $3.50 to $4.00.

The calf market held steady at $9.00 to $9.50 for choice quality vealers with common grades selling downwards to $5.00.

Hogs were unsettled at the opening of the trading and indications pointed to a lower market.

No lambs were offered during the early trading with only a few repeats on hand. Sheep sold steady from $2.00 to $5.50 a cwt. according to quality.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, April 13.—Egg receipts at Montreal last week continued the recent trend of showing increases over the preceding week and over the corresponding week last year. Butter arrivals were above a week ago but below a year ago. Cheese receipts were very small. The totals with comparisons, were posted Saturday by the Board of Trade as follows:

	Eggs Butter Cheese Cases Boxes Boxes
Last week	12,426 2,915 64
Week ago	11,585 3,468 231
Year ago	10,679 4,845 179

Prices on Montreal Harbour Board trading from Thursday's levels, the only variation being a slightly lower tone on fresh eggs arriving in the city.

The egg market ended the week at 19½c for A-large; 18-18½c for A-medium, 17c for A-small; 17c for A-pullets or C, on graded shipments arriving in carriers or l.c.l. lots.

The butter market was 23½c to 23c for No. 1 in cartons or l.c.l.

PENNANT RACES IN TWO LEAGUES OPEN TUESDAY

One Injury May Decide Outcome in National Loop

CARDINALS PICKED

Pirates And Giants Are Expected to be Dark Horses

By PAUL MICKELSON
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, April 13 (AP)—Two pennant race, so exciting and close, that one injury may decide its outcome, opens tomorrow over the National League baseball front with the St. Louis Cardinals and Chicago's spectacular Cubs one-two favorites to capture the prize they have held between them eight times out of the last ten years.

Bunting behind the favorites are New York Giants and Pittsburgh Pirates, who are expected to be hot on the trail or the flag. None of the circuit's other four—Brooklyn, Cincinnati, Philadelphia and Boston—is granted even an outside chance of winning.

Yet, as the teams near the barrier for the 154-game race, the setup is ideal for one of the League's greatest upsets. Lack of first class replacement material, however, is so. Every contender has one or more danger spots, that threatens to blow up its chances.

A consensus of the experts picks the Cardinals, whose hopes rest on the Dean brothers, Frankie Frisch and Pitcher Bill Walker's expected comeback. Of the four, Frisch undoubtedly is the danger spot. Should the Cardinal pilot, star third and baseman fall victim to an injury or be unable to play 100 or more games, the chances of the gas house gang would be reduced considerably.

Hurling Tourneys

The Cubs, a big game team almost nowhere with their unforgettable 21-game winning streak to win last season, appear well fortified for a winning bid, but the pitching is uncertain. Charlie Root can't be expected to come back with 15 victories again. That's too much to expect from a 37-year-old veteran. The Cubs may yet hold Pitcher Curt Davis from the Phillies for money and Outfielder Chuck Klein, but in the meantime Manager Charlie Grimm will find he gives his team more punch, is a worried man over the possibilities of one injury to his pitching staff.

Bill Terry, whose left knee is sore that no one expects him to play more than half the season, is the key man to the Giants hopes. With him, the Giants would be hard to trim now that they have plugged up the second base hole with Burgess Whitehead. Without him, the defensive stability and strength of the team is slower and less potent.

Pittsburgh rates to be the biggest surprise of the race. Not only do the Pirates have sufficient reserve material and a well-constructed pitching staff, but they have a first class catcher in Al Todd, obtained during the winter from the Phillies.

Second division looms for the rest of the clubs, with the Dodgers and Reds fighting it out for top place in that lower region.

Of the four, Brooklyn may be the big surprise. Since last season, when he had a day, with a broken leg sticked even the fans, Casey has been working hard to assemble a winning ball club. He has a pitching staff capable pitching staff, that may cause a pennant in the large second top to bottom before the campaign ends.

OLYMPICS TAKE BULLDOGS 1-0

Detroit Minor's Capture Obe Trophy in Three Straight Games

Detroit, April 13.—(CP)—The Olympics of Detroit have taken alongside the National League Red Wings today, with a happy city dig some idolizing.

Olympics won the International League championship last night by defeating Windsor Bulldogs 1-0 and gave Detroit its second title in as many nights. Red Wings won the Stanley Cup in Chicago Saturday night.

It was the second successive win Olympics took the championship and their 13th straight playoff victory. They brushed aside Bulldog stars in three straight for their place in the finals and will meet Bulldogs the same way.

Big Wilf Starr, who used to play for Red Wings, broke up the game late in the third period, 'until then Bulldogs had a slight advantage in play but couldn't break through the Detroit defence.

Starr fired his goal at 14.56 of the period. Then Olympics went into a strong defensive shell against a desperate Windsor attack.

They played fast hockey through-

Detroit Wings Defeat Leafs To Win Stanley Cup in Most Thrilling Game of Season

First Time Since 1931 That Team Has Won Cup and N. H. L.

GOALIES BRILLIANT

Conacher Held Scoreless in All Seven Playoff Games

(By Elmer Dolmage)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 13.—(CP)—Toronto Maple Leafs, the Madcaps of the National League, highest scoring team in hockey since Conny Smythe gave them power five years ago, prepared today for a last journey together. Stripped of pride, the Leafs are certain to be rebuilt.

When the Leafs went down to defeat here Saturday night and Detroit Red Wings captured the Stanley Cup for the first time, defeating Toronto 3-2, a crowd of 14,728 saw the last of the Madcaps. Great as they were in defeat this time, the Leafs were obviously only shadows. Their late ride together, a Western exhibition tour, starts today.

They always had a chance to win, to put over second straight surprise on the mighty Red Birds and salvage the best-of-five series, because they remained hockey's toughest warriors. They were that to the end, but Red Wings of Jack Adams were a superior hockey team.

Scoreless Duel

Twice National League Championa, once Stanley Cup winners from 1932 to 1935, and confident around Ming Clancy, the Leafs had recently a chance against one of the best-balanced, fastest teams to come along the title trail in seven years. But they were the most of that chance.

Tied after two games at Detroit, they landed with a great third-period rally Thursday night, that pulled them up to a 3-3 tie. In overtime they won their only victory of the series, 2-1. It was enough to bring out the second largest crowd in Canadian hockey history for the finals.

Under those auspicious circumstances, the Leafs and Wings put on a dazzling display of speed, that made Veteran George Hainsworth of Toronto and Young Normie Smith of Detroit, rival goaltenders the heroes.

It may have been Hainsworth's last game if it was, the famous Kitchener netman heard the crowd shout in acclaim to the end.

Goalies Are Brilliant

His third-period brilliance against the Wings, a magnificent performance while the Leafs had him outgarded as they sought the tying goal, was a fitting finale to the veteran, who is unlikely to be in a Toronto uniform next season. At his older end of the rink, Smith was just as brilliant.

Acrobatic Normie, a Toronto boy, yielded a single goal in the first period, when Joe Primeau burst through on him and shot from close range. Again, in the third, he was beaten by Bill Thoms who stickhanded through the entire Detroit team for a fine tally.

But the Red Wing attack on a stold, unflustered Hainsworth was better sustained after Primeau's goal was in the first period gave Leafs the lead. The champions never turned up the pressure. They made few wrong moves.

Bobbie Goodfellow caught a pass from Johnny Sorrell midway through the second period, broke the defence and tied the score. Less than a minute later Marty Barry cut down left boards after getting a pass from Herbie Lewis and swung sharply up to Hainsworth to put through another scoring shot.

Redheaded Pete Kelly, who was on the ice only eight minutes, lifted in a pass from Lewis for the third goal—the winning one—at 9.46 in the third frame. It was a disputed goal at last, though there seemed little room for argument.

Referee Calls Goal

When Kelly's shot from the edge of the goal crease failed to bring a flash of the red light, Referee Bill Chadwick quickly awarded the goal. Goal Judge, Charlie Fyon of Montreal, said after the game he knew the puck was in the net. He had tried to turn on the light, but couldn't make the gadget work.

While Charlie Conacher, Toronto's leading marksman, registered scoreless for his seventh straight playoff game, the hurricane Leaf attack was carried by Primeau, Harvey Jackson, Buzz Boll, Frank Finnigan, Bob Davidson, Jack Thoms, Primeau, pivot of the famous "Kids", Conacher and Harvey Jackson was playing his last game. So the "Kids" were four together, resassembled after duty during the war years ago. Times in recent months, for the year's most important game. And it was Primeau, who played brilliantly, was leader, playing one of the greatest games of his career. He plans on retiring.

Checked by Lewis, Conacher has no chance to score in any of the four games. Little Herbie did his job thoroughly and still had time to assist in two goals Saturday night.

Five Veteran Stars Of Rangers to be Sold

New York, April 13 (CP)—Five veteran stars of New York Rangers are definitely on the National Hockey League player market, it was learned today.

Clint Smith, Johnson, defenceman, Murray "Iron Man" Murdoch, Bill Cook, veteran right winger and Frank Boucher, veteran centre, who are now offered for sale or trade. Boucher "Dutch" Keeling Rangers greatest sharpshooter for the Quinlans, and Howie Morenz the one-time incomparable of centre ice streaks secured from Chicago Blackhawks last February, are the other pair managed Lester Patrick is reported willing to dispose of in his reorganization.

Patrick could not be reached for immediate confirmation as he is in Toronto, "on hockey business" presumably taking deals with Conny Smythe, head of Toronto Maple Leafs, with a good slated for drastic revision.

McDONALD LEADS' ALL MARKSMEN

Scored Three Goals in Eight Shots on The Target

(By the Canadian Press)

Detroit, Red Wings did less, but far more effective shooting than Toronto Maple Leafs in the Stanley Cup series which ended Saturday night in Toronto, when the Wings won the fourth game 3-2.

Shooting averages compiled by the Canadian Press today from official scoring records showed the Red Wings had a shooting average of .161, scoring 18 goals on 112 direct-on shots. The Leafs fired 133 shots and scored 11 goals for an average of .083.

Reed Malone, Detroit defence-man, led the marksmen with .375, scoring three times on eight shots, a remarkable feature of the survey was it showed McDonald's defence partner, Captain Doug Young, did not have a single shot during the series.

Here is a list of scorers with their shooting percentages:

"OPEN SEASON" ON THOSE TIGERS

Every Club in American League Will Fight Detroit

(By Earl Hilligan)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Chicago, April 13 (AP)—Open season on those Tigers starts tomorrow.

The roar of dyed-in-wool fans who may number upwards of 80,000 eight American League baseball clubs get another season under way with Detroit's champions and each of them will be gunning for the Detroit Tigers, champions of the World.

Tomorrow's inaugural has been especially availed by the sports fan because it will start solution of a few of the smokiest puzzles ever to get in the eyes of the "hot stove league" fans. Will the Tiger pivot proudly through the league jungle for a third straight year, or will its fangs be clipped by the Indians from Cleveland, the money-jingling Boston Red Sox or the once-powerful New York Yankees?

The opening day bill sends the Tigers against the Indians at Cleveland. The Sox entertain the little regarded Philadelphia Athletics in Boston.

The trouble-making St. Louis Browns travel to Chicago to take on the White Sox, and the Yankees open in Washington against the youthful Senators. President Roosevelt expected to be among the crowd.

If optimism of managers means very much, this year's race will be so hot the smoke may blind the batmen in the American League. Mickey Cochrane sees an "excellent chance" for his Tigers. Joe Cronin sees only Detroit standing in the path of the Dominion's pennant flag, and Connie Mack says with Winnipeg Monarchs.

The Senators are confident they will bring in either Washington or Cleveland "in the team to beat."

Grads Successful in Defending Title

Edmonton, April 13 (CP)—With the first game safely tucked away, Edmonton Grads were confident today of successfully defending their senior international basketball championship against the American School of Business quintet from Chicago.

Grads fought their way to a 34-27 victory in the opener Saturday night and another victory tonight will give them the best-of-three series in two straight games. If the Des Moines girls win a third game it will be played Wednesday night.

The visitors made a strong bid to end the reign of Grads, holders of the championship since 1924, in the second half but Grads outplayed their opponents to gain victory.

Dynamiters Defeat Sudbury 4-3 in Overtime in Second Game

FIRST TIME FOR B.C.

Hugo Mackie Scores Tying And Winning Markers

(By Hersey Hoey)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, April 13.—(CP)—The name of Kimberley Dynamiters was officially added to the list of Allan Cup winners today by the sixth club made history here Saturday, when they defeated Sudbury Falconbridge to give British Columbia's first Dominion Hockey title.

Successful in their final for the Senior Championship, Dynamiters added a fifth straight victory to their win 3-0 win over the Northern Ontario team last Thursday.

The Eastern champions took a game bid to save the Cup for their sector, fighting uphill to force the game into extra time.

Only 1,500 fans saw the closing chapter of the Intersectional classic —they gave Falcons a round of applause for their spirited stand. It was a wide-open game and only smart work by the two goal-tenders held the total-goal count as low as it was.

Old Joe Ironstone, a hero in defeat as Sudbury dropped the first game Saturday night, was the mainstay of the speedy Red-Shirts. Keeping pace with the veteran, Gwen Hornquist, young Kimberley goalie, turned in a spectacular performance, particularly in the second period, when Falcons massed a drive, which brought them two goals.

Hugo Mackie Hero

Here in many a Kimberley campaign this winter, Leslie Hugo Mackie scored the winning goal to signal for authorities to send the Allan Cup its first journey to the Rocky Mountains. Ken Moore, former Regina and Winnipeg star, made the tying goal. After losing his chance to beat Ironstone for the second time.

The overtime goal was Mackie's second of the game. The other Kimberley goals came from sticks of Jack Putney and Harry Brown. They Cranbrook first Sudbury goal, Dan Orson and Wilbur Hillier combined on the third.

Dynamiters made a strong bid to win the game and secured two goals before Grabinski solved the blocking methods of the canny Sudbury goalie. Falcons then entered the second period, the Easterners with the edge, and for the first time in the series in the second period, scoring with the count knotted 3-3. The third period went scoreless.

WESLEYS AWAIT SECOND CLASH

Think They Can Take West Toronto Team in Stride

Toronto, April 13 (CP)—Faced with elimination from the Memorial Cup series, Wesleys of Hespeler today awaited the second clash against West Toronto Nationals tonight confident they would down the strong Eastern Canada champions.

The teams meet here tonight with the Hespeler squad holding an advantage from a 5-1 victory last Friday which brought the Ontario championship to the province in 1935 and it is hoped to rake that standing with the aid of big time wrestlers in our midst.

With the two major leagues, the American and National, opening their 1936 season tomorrow afternoon, the International League is getting into action on Thursday, one day later than usual. The opening dates allotted in the "rich" loop are: Toronto at Syracuse, Buffalo at Baltimore, and Montreal and Albany. The four international League teams have practically concluded their spring training activities and are now awaiting the starter's gun.

"Shiner" Johnson—no person ever actually knew Shiner's Christian name—was recently named the new manager of the Peterboro entry in the 1936 O.H.A. season. A number of ex-Peterboro players were signed for the position including Al Heckman, Abbie Rose, Tommy Holyman, Shiner Johnson and Alex Rayner, retired G.O.R.L. referee. Fred and forecast Heckman declined the appointment on account of other liberations by the new Lifelock City baseball executive. Johnson was given the appointment because he was always a fighter on the field and will doubtless have the 1936 Petes whipped into a battling squad before opening day. It goes without saying, however, the new manager of the Petes will lead the umpires a merry chase, as he's a battler of the old school who received his education from Jake Goodman and that's quite sufficient to assure good crowds in Peterboro.

Regarding Shiner's appointment the Peterboro' sport scribe has the following to say—"The local veteran should be a good man for this important task. Shiner is too well known to baseball fans and needs no introduced in this column. They all remember him as a star senior amateur infielder of not so long ago with Toronto and Peterborough teams. He is an experienced coach and has been umpiring in the league lately. Probably no other Peterborough man knows the teams, players and tricks of the O.H.A. better. He was always a brainy, scrappy player and should be able to keep his players in there fighting throughout the schedule. We are glad to see Shiner as manager."

Up in Galt senior baseball was confronted with about the same problems as those which loom in Belleville today, namely, no responsible person would take office this year. When the players in Galt finally realized the seriousness of the situation and that when it was all over though Galt would be out of senior ball, the players held a meeting and voted unanimously to throw their lot in with any group of men who would handle baseball matters efficiently to sponsor a team. In other words the players decided to "play ball" with the management, with the result, that today Galt will back up a senior team and the Galt players would take a leaf out of the Peterboro' book—they might start the ball rolling towards the organizing of a senior team in Belleville.

According to those in on the know, the future of senior ball in Belleville will be decided within the next 24 hours. A letter explaining the drastic situation, and all of its drawbacks, etc., has been mailed to the four local service clubs with a plea for moral assistance. Failure to receive the co-operation on the part of the service clubs means curtains, operator No. 1 assures us.

Detroit, the city of champions, added two more titles to its long growing number of championships when the Detroit Red Wings won the Stanley Cup and the world's hockey championship, while the Detroit Olympics won the Obe Cup, emblematic of the International League championship, which gives the City of Detroit all of the major sporting titles available in the world today. As Shakespeare Jack Adams was heard to say—"Our Red Wings were too good, that's the answer."

Despite the fact the Kimberley Dynamiters won the Allan Cup, when they defeated Sudbury in overtime victory over Sudbury on Saturday night, the Hamilton Tigers given the appointment to represent Dominion hockey champions for 1936, that is in the minds of many.

Frank "Dutz" Smith announced today the Belleville Athletic and Yachting Club would honor their hockey team at a banquet in the Yacht Club on Wednesday night. The "sailors" champions of the Bay of Quinte League, will be out in full force.

George A. Harris, secretary-treasurer of the Queensbury A.C. and Promoter Jack Corcoran's right and left hand bower combined was in the city on the holiday looking over the Belleville Arena before the Queensbury A. C. opens their series of wrestling bouts in Belleville. Mr. Harris stamped his approval on the local plant, but requested a few changes for the comfort of the fans during the week programme contracted for. The big time' wrestlers have contracted with the Arena management for 30 weekly shows in Belleville during which the best wrestlers in the business will appear locally.

Accompanying Mr. Harris were John Katan and Dick Raines, two well-known wrestlers. "We intend opening in Belleville on April 21st and can guarantee you the best talent available in the wrestling circles. We do not intend coming into Belleville and putting on inferior shows, as that would naturally kill the game here permanently. You can tell the fans we intend giving them the very best. Naturally we will have to start at the bottom of the heap, but that is to say, we'll commence with good men and eliminate the losers each week, while the winners will be matched with better men as the season progresses," assured Mr. Harris.

Professional wrestling has always met with public approval in the Ontario and now that local grappling fans are assured of a better class of matmen the sport should be further elevated. Belleville stood fifth in the matter of attendance at wrestling shows in the province in 1935 and it is hoped to rake that standing with the aid of big time wrestlers in our midst.

A number of ex-Peterboro players were signed for the position including Al Heckman, Abbie Rose, Tommy Holyman, Shiner Johnson and Alex Rayner, retired G.O.R.L. referee. Fred and forecast Heckman declined the appointment on account of other liberations by the new Lifelock City baseball executive. Johnson was given the appointment because he was always a fighter on the field and will doubtless have the 1936 Petes whipped into a battling squad before opening day. It goes without saying, however, the new manager of the Petes will lead the umpires a merry chase, as he's a battler of the old school who received his education from Jake Goodman and that's quite sufficient to assure good crowds in Peterboro.

Regarding Shiner's appointment the Peterboro' sport scribe has the following to say—"The local veteran should be a good man for this important task. Shiner is too well known to baseball fans and needs no introduced in this column. They all remember him as a star senior amateur infielder of not so long ago with Toronto and Peterborough teams. He is an experienced coach and has been umpiring in the league lately. Probably no other Peterborough man knows the teams, players and tricks of the O.H.A. better. He was always a brainy, scrappy player and should be able to keep his players in there fighting throughout the schedule. We are glad to see Shiner as manager."

Up in Galt senior baseball was confronted with about the same problems as those which loom in Belleville today, namely, no responsible person would take office this year. When the players in Galt finally realized the seriousness of the situation and that when it was all over though Galt would be out of senior ball, the players held a meeting and voted unanimously to throw their lot in with any group of men who would handle baseball matters efficiently to sponsor a team. In other words the players decided to "play ball" with the management, with the result, that today Galt will back up a senior team and the Galt players would take a leaf out of the Peterboro' book—they might start the ball rolling towards the organizing of a senior team in Belleville.

According to those in on the know, the future of senior ball in Belleville will be decided within the next 24 hours. A letter explaining the drastic situation, and all of its drawbacks, etc., has been mailed to the four local service clubs with a plea for moral assistance. Failure to receive the co-operation on the part of the service clubs means curtains, operator No. 1 assures us.

Detroit, the city of champions, added two more titles to its long growing number of championships when the Detroit Red Wings won the Stanley Cup and the world's hockey championship, while the Detroit Olympics won the Obe Cup, emblematic of the International League championship, which gives the City of Detroit all of the major sporting titles available in the world today. As Shakespeare Jack Adams was heard to say—"Our Red Wings were too good, that's the answer."

Frank "Dutz" Smith announced today the Belleville Athletic and Yachting Club would honor their hockey team at a banquet in the Yacht Club on Wednesday night. The "sailors" champions of the Bay of Quinte League, will be out in full force.

"GLITTERING GIRL"

By MAY CHRISTIE

The stout lady beamed. "Why of course I remember, But she didn't introduce us to each other."

Vernon smiled back. How she would soon find out! She said quickly: "You were old friends, weren't you? Vernon, me, you and she?"

The two ladies exchanged glances. The thin one had a supercilious look upon her face as she remarked, sipping her coffee: "No, I shouldn't exactly say that Madame Melcheers was—our sort. Would you, Fannie?"

Just as Vernon walked on tenterhooks to get the stout one's answer, an elderly gentleman approached their corner, and asked the two older ladies if they would care to make up a table for bridge?

They agreed. But a fourth player must be found.

"Do you play, Miss—er—?" Vernon, to his amazement, found himself, but if you can stand my poor game, I'd like to play with you."

"Oh, none of us are any great shakes," good-naturedly declared the one called Fannie.

There seemed, thereafter, no opportunity for bringing up the further mention of "Madame Melcheers" that evening.

The game came to an end around eleven. "Naomi" and the elderly gentleman had won a few dollars each. Vernon settled her debt, and so did "Fannie." The party was about to break up.

"Naomi, though—" I'm simply not to rope them in for tomorrow morning. I'll suggest a run in the car."

But before she could do so, Naomi remarked to Fannie: "I'll just stop at the desk and remind them that we want a motor ready for not later than ten tomorrow morning. That'll give us time for the trip and be back for lunch."

It seemed they had planned on visiting some beauty spot. Vernon suggested that she would love to go along with them, and it would give her real pleasure if the ladies would come to her car?

"Please do. There's heaps of room. I feel at a loose end by myself."

What could they do but comply? Though Naomi, Who was not good at "picking up chance acquaintances," as she would have termed it, looked a little askance, the good-natured Fannie accepted the invitation.

When the ladies had retired for the night, Vernon went over to the desk, on the pretext of wanting to hear about the various places to visit within driving distance.

The night clerk was a pleasant young man. He gave Vernon the necessary information.

"I didn't expect you back so soon." His eyes rested on her admiringly.

She flushed a little. How to broach the subject of the telegram? Dare she come right out bluntly with a question?

"We were called back to town sooner than we expected," she said desperately. "You remember Mrs. de Bray—our guest—got a telegram four nights ago—it was four nights ago, wasn't it?—" my mother and I had an argument about the exact time she received it—"

The clerk looked somewhat mystified. "Mrs. de Bray got no telegram while I was on—not even a letter—"

Vernon smiled at him. "I wonder if you'd mind looking up the exact time the desk signed for that telegram? I want to win my little bet, you understand. Four nights ago around half past eight—name of Mrs. de Bray—"

Good-naturedly he complied with her request. He ran his finger down the hotel ledger.

"Sorry, Miss Tyson, but you're going to lose your bet. No telegram came for Mrs. de Bray while here. She must have been spooning you!"

Pretending to whistle ruefully, but delighted that her suspicions were being verified, Vernon went off to bed.

She slept well that night, despite the fact that she was far from home and on her own. She was healthily tired after the long trip in the open air.

Besides, the future looked bright—now. She was on the scent of the necklace. She dreamed she was with Terry Shannon—explaining everything about the "Prince" to him—telling everything—and Terry was kissing her.

"How I do call this kind and nice of you, my dear," declared Fannie Frenahan—that was the stout lady's name—as she leaned back comfortably in the gorgeously appointed limousine of the Vernon's next morning. "I'll tell you that's this day and age not many young girls are so thoughtful of their elders. Don't you agree with me, Naomi?"

German Doctor Gave Advice

Wounded Veteran Praises Dodd's

"I was badly wounded in France," writes H. I. Brennan, 407 Spruce St., Sudbury, Ont., "and ever since I came home in this country 12 years ago, I had been trying to get rid of the wound pain in my head. I gave up all hope until I happened to run into a German doctor and told him my troubles. He said to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. Am proud to say that they made a new man of me. I now feel younger. Dodd's Kidney Pills gave me back my health and strength." 5-6

Dodd's Kidney Pills

The thin friend—Mrs. Wallers nodded rather grudgingly. All Fannie's graces were swans. Vernon often thought.

But the countryside was lovely, the air fresh and bracing. Her bones that had been poorly upholstered by Nature were well set in the ever-stuffed limousine. Naomi began to enjoy the ride. Her host also relaxed.

Vernon had ordered her new chauffeur (the detective) to lower the screen of glass that divided him from those in the interior of the car. She wanted him to overhear everything that might be said by the ladies about the mysterious "Madame Melcheers", alias Mercédes de Bray.

To her relief, there was no hesitation about a change of name. She was overjoyed when Mrs. Frenahan herself brought up the subject of Mme. Mortius.....

"Did you tell me last night that Madame Melcheers was a guest of yours down here?" she queried suddenly.

"Yes, my mother asked her. Did—did you, my dear?" she queried Europe?

"Oh, So-so. Naomi and I ran into her in the various casinos. She and that husband of hers are pretty high flyers."

"We met them in Monte Carlo several times," volunteered Naomi Wallers. "Great gamblers, both of them. Fannie, you remember—there was something shady about the sudden way they vanished out of Monte?"

"Well, I wouldn't go so far as to say that," Fannie hedged. She looked dubiously at Vernon. It wouldn't do to knock the child's friends. "But I did hear the casino didn't like their system. Personally I'd nothing against Melcheers. He seemed a gentlemanly enough chap. She was nice enough, too—"

"Oh, you flew everybody. You're a fool!" exclaimed Naomi tartly. "Why, they're well-known adventurers, Fannie. You see him nearly without her. He works alone. You could have knocked me down with a feather when I ran into him here a few nights ago. He pretended to be so cool!"

"You saw him here? Here in this hotel?" Vernon asked quickly. It was evident that McGraw at the wheel was not missing one syllable of all this!

Naomi Wallers stared at her sharply. "Wasn't he accompanying his wife? You just said she was here as your mother's guest!"

Vernon drew a deep breath and took the plunge. She drew the incriminating passport from her pocketbook.....

"Would you both mind looking at this?" she asked. "See those two photographs? Please tell me if you recognize them?"

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Both ladies stared at the passport which Vernon held out.

Then each one nodded, mystified, and startled. It seemed a queer thing that it should be in the young girl's possession! "How did you get it?"

"Never mind how. It's important to have you verify those photographs as the man and woman you saw five nights ago in the hotel here?"

"Of course it's the Melcheers! That's as like Serge as two peas, and there's his signature to prove it!"

"It most certainly is Marie Melcheers and her husband," said Mrs. Frenahan, her small eyes opened to their widest extent. "But why do you ask us? Isn't it perfectly evident?"

"You say they are married? You met them in various places in Europe under that name on the passport?"

Both chorused an affirmative.

"And the repulation of the pair was anything but savory? Isn't it? Isn't there a very big belief they work apart because together they'd be recognized and kicked out of most places?"

"Yeah, Naomi! Don't be so sharp. You're speaking of friends of Miss Tyson's."

"Nonsense! If they're her friends, what's she doing with that passport, and questioning us about 'em?"

This seemed obvious. Naomi tartly proceeded: "I always thought they were crooks, but until my eyes fell on that passport just now, I never did think they were really married, even if they did pass themselves as husband and wife!"

"But they don't pass as husband and wife!" declared Vernon. "We know them as Mercédes de Bray—a widow or divorcee—and Prince Ivan Karinoff, an unfortunate Russian nobleman. Why, they've used another address Maritina as Madame Melcheers until you did, five nights ago, in the hotel here. She left that after that. Do you see the connection now?"

"Good heavens! What's their game?"

Naomi exclaimed excitedly: "But the Karinoffs have been a class distinction in Constantinople about fifteen months ago! He had no relatives. I know him well, and so did Serge Melcheers!"

"And you say your parents had these people as your guests?" gasped Fannie Frenahan. "Oh, my dear Miss Tyson, when you've roamed the Continent of Europe as long as Naomi and I have, you learn to be very suspicious. Don't go up with strangers—you've got to be careful!"

"Did Prince Karinoff said—"

"There's no Prince Karinoff," said Naomi firmly. "The title died out with the death of the old bachelor Prince in Constantinople, so tell you. He had few friends. Cracked a bit through his sorrows and losses. If this Melcheers calls himself Prince Karinoff, he has the right to—to—to—well, I don't see how terribly, you see—got me all tangled up so it looked as though I couldn't break loooose—as though it were going to cost my father a huge sum of money! I can't tell you more just now—it was a plot they hatched up between them—"

"Blackmail!" breathed Fannie.

Naomi sniffed: "Why, that's their usual game!

"Fannie and I drawn into a scandal!" stamped Naomi. "No thanks."

Fannie deprecated: "My dear, I'd like to help you, but I'd hate to get into the newspapers. You understand."

"You won't. I promise you, you won't. But I came all the way down here by myself, commandeering the family car and all, to get right to the bottom of the Karinoff de Bray-Melcheers affair! Now it's all tumbled into my lap, thanks to your kindness! They'd involved me terribly, you see—got me all tangled

To Vernon it seemed as though McGraw's ears—as well as her own—were twitching with excitement.

"Would you both be so very kind —if called upon, I mean—to repeat all this before witnesses?"

Fannie and I drawn into a scandal!" stamped Naomi. "No thanks."

Fannie deprecated: "My dear, I'd like to help you, but I'd hate to get into the newspapers. You understand."

"You won't. I promise you, you won't. But I came all the way down here by myself, commandeering the family car and all, to get right to the bottom of the Karinoff de Bray-Melcheers affair! Now it's all tumbled into my lap, thanks to your kindness! They'd involved me terribly, you see—got me all tangled up so it looked as though I couldn't break loooose—as though it were going to cost my father a huge sum of money! I can't tell you more just now—it was a plot they hatched up between them—"

"Blackmail!" breathed Fannie.

Naomi sniffed: "Why, that's their usual game!

UNWED GIRL ADMITS HOAX

Stole Charges Woman Obtained Babe to Dupe Doctor

Kansas City, Mo., April 13—(AP)—Jean Wray, unwed servant girl, told today her desire to find a home for her fatherless child provided Mrs. Nellie Tipton Mumich with a baby for an alleged $250,000 hoax.

The stolen, two year old baby, charged Mrs. Mumich obtained the baby to dupe Dr. Marsh Pitzman, wealthy and socially prominent St. Louis physician, into believing he was the father and she the mother.

The 17-year-old Newton, Pa., domestic said she came to St. Louis for her confinement last July.

The baby, a boy born Aug. 17, was taken from her a few hours after its birth. The next day, Mrs. Mumich, wife of a St. Louis physician and sister of a state supreme court judge, announced she had become the mother of a son.

Last December, Miss Wray won back the child in a suit in which the St. Louis court of appeals denied Mrs. Mumich's "false claim of motherhood."

Aerial Honeymooners Found Alive and Well

Ketchikan, Alaska, April 13—(AP)—Two aerial honeymooners who survived an airplane wreck and a week of cold weather without food or fire were safe here today after searchers had almost abandoned hope of finding them alive.

Suffering from hunger and exposure, but otherwise unhurt, Albert Almozino of Seattle and his 18-year-old bride of a month went found yesterday at Princess Bay, 60 miles south of here.

They were picked up and brought here by the coast guard cutter Cyane after the wreckage of their pontoon equipped monoplane was located by pilot Sheldon Simmons of Juneau and two observers.

Both were sent to a hospital, but they were in good spirits and expected "to be as good as ever" in a few days.

The two went six days without food and slept in soggy clothing after the plane was wrecked last Monday in attempting to land on the choppy waters of the bay. They swam ashore, but emergency rations and a rifle were lost.

War Upon Narcotics Demands Co-operation of Various Governments

Washington, April 13—(AP)—A plea for co-operation among governments as well as individuals in combatting the traffic in narcotic drugs was made today by Secretary of State Cordell Hull in a message to the World Narcotic Defence Association in session here.

"Time and experience have proved" he said, "that nations acting alone are unable adequately to protect themselves against the illicit traffic in narcotic drugs or even to control the legitimate traffic therein

11 Lives Are Lost In Canadian Accidents

Accidents throughout Canada over the long Easter week-end took 11 lives. Seven persons died as a result of automobile crashes and there were two drownings.

FASCIST GUARD ENTERS DESSYE

Rome, April 13 (AP)—Italian press dispatches from Wukisie said today the Fascist advance guard of the the northern army has entered Dessye, former field headquarters of Emperor Haile Selassie.

The press reports have not been officially confirmed.

11,718 ROLL EGGS

Washington, April 13 (AP)—The White House staffs today counted 11,718 children and parents at the egg rolling on the White lawn.

As a band played, Mrs. Roosevelt shook hands with hundreds of the youngsters and received a basket of yellow flowers from Doris Thorne, a Girl Scout.

FOUR BURN TO DEATH

Chandler Okla. April 13 (AP)—Four persons were burned to death near here last night when their rural home of Henry Main, 30, a works progress administrator worker, was destroyed by fire.

In addition to Main, the victims were his wife, Mrs. Ethel Main, 26, their daughter, Juanita 11, and Everett Campbell, 16, Mrs. Main's brother.

ARMAND RACINE WEDS

Windsor, Ont., April 13 (CP)—Armand Racine, prominent barrister here, who conducted the Royal Commission investigation into the administration of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway, today married Miss Fleurance Roy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A Roy, of Delmas, Sask.

The ceremony was held in Sacred Heart Church. The Rev. Father W. L. Dillon officiated at the Nuptial Mass in the presence of a small group of relatives and friends.

Says Seat at Bout Only Saving by Cut In Teachers' Salaries

Toronto, April 13 (CP)— A. C. Lewis of Toronto today told the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation only 75 cents a year or the price of "a back seat at a wrestling match" was the per capita saving in Toronto because of a reduction in teachers' salaries.

"When the teachers in Toronto were cut nine per cent., the per capita saving was considerably less than $1 a year," he said. "A teacher on a salary of $2,500 was cut nearly $230 to save about 75 cents per capita per year. The price of a back seat at a wrestling match. And this is the type of saving that is made in any municipality when cuts are made in teachers' salaries."

More than a score of university graduates were teaching in Ontario at salaries of $600 or less, some obtaining as little as $700 a year, he said.

6 Lake Vessels Have Been Sold

Port Colborne, April 13 (CP)— Consummation of a deal was made during the week-end for the purchase of six lower lake vessels of the Eastern Steamship Co. by the Norris Grain Co., of Winnipeg. The transaction involves an amount said to be approximately $300,000. The six vessels sold are the W. G. Wescott; the James Stewart, the D. L. Forbes, the G. R. Dumfee, the Shirley G. Taylor and the J. A. Holloway.

The vessels are registered at St. Catharines and will be used, it is understood, in the Canadian grain trade.

Gashed in Head During Celebration

Sudbury, Ont., April 13.—(CP)—With three deep gashes in his head, John Stasonik, 36, Russian, was in the hospital today and not expected to live after an alleged attack on him last night. Nick Jarvel, Blezard Township, was held, charged with assault occasioning actual bodily harm. He will appear before a Magistrate tomorrow.

Constable E. J. Chiasco said the men were celebrating Easter. Either a salt shaker or piece of wood was used to inflict the wounds, in the lonely shack of the victim, a pensioner from the International Company.

Unmarried, he has lived in Canada about 15 years.

Transport Driver Sought in Crash

Brantford, Ont., April 13—(CP)— Provincial and city police today still sought the driver of a transport truck that knocked down Elmer Beal, 32, late Saturday night on No. 2 highway about three miles west of Brantford and fractured his skull and both his legs.

Beal is in hospital at Paris, in a serious condition. He was reported slightly improved today.

After striking him, the transport truck went on its way before occupants of a car that was struck on the side of the road had an opportunity of getting its license number.

TRANSFERS MADE IN LOCAL C. N. POLICE

Appointment of Special Constable Richard Hearn, formerly of Niagara Falls, to the local division of the Canadian National Railways police was confirmed this week. Constable Hearn will replace Constable H. H. Booth, who has been transferred to the Toronto division.

WOUNDS IN THROAT ENDANGER POLANDER

North Bay, Ont., April 13.—(CP) —Frank Kocznyski, 38-year-old Polander, was in the hospital today with throat wounds. A large butcher knife, covered with blood, was found by police in his home. Kocznyski will recover in about two weeks, Dr. L. L. Cryes said.

Provincials Constables N. C. Small and E. A. Shepard investigated. They would make no statement as to whether they intended to lay a charge.

A neighbor, Eli Boucher, notified police after he had found the wounded man lying in bed in his shack.

6-DIE OF PNEUMONIA

Springfield, Mo, April 13.—(AP) —Six persons died of pneumonia in Springfield over the week-end in what physicians termed the worst epidemic of influenza and pneumonia since 1917. Hospitals were crowded.

EXTRA PRECAUTION FOR HEALTH'S SAKE

Pope Pius is Approaching Eightieth Birthday

Vatican City, April 13 (AP)—Pope Pius, approaching his eightieth year, is taking increased precaution to preserve his health.

The most quiet Easter the Vatican has observed in many years gave evidence to this fact, the Pontiff's health preventing him from celebrating the Easter Mass in St. Peter's yesterday, in accordance with the custom he re-established and followed for many years.

The Pope said a mass in his private chapel, while Cardinal Pacelli, Papal Secretary of State, celebrated the Easter Mass, and received only immediate relatives yesterday afternoon.

His Holiness has given up all exercise, to maintain his strength, and has abandoned almost all his automobile drives. Even though his strength has declined, he has performed his close attention to the Papal works.

The Pontiff's effort, Prelates said, was to to prolong his busy life as long as possible in laboring for the church.

Dead Child Borne In Mother's Arms To Toronto Clinic

Hamilton, Ont., April 13 (CP)— Mrs. W. Short unknowingly carried her dead baby into a clinic for treatment here Saturday. The mother left the baby, five years of age, with friends while she went shopping. She did not examine the child when she returned to bring it to the clinic. Pneumonia was given as the cause of death and the mother was absolved of all blame.

Italy Will Snub Meeting of Staffs

Rome, April 13 (CP)—Italy today was believed determined to snub the meetings of the French, British and Belgian general staffs next Wednesday in London.

Angered by British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden's declaration that Great Britain is indifferent to Italy's presence at the Locarno conference table, Premier Mussolini was reported to have decided on even greater aloofness than hitherto from both League and Rhineland negotiations.

Can. Steel Corp. May Be Purchased

New York, April 13 (AP)—Dow, Jones and Company said today that the United States Steel Corporation is negotiating for the sale of the Canadian Steel Corporation, Ltd., a subsidiary.

Likely prospective purchaser, it was stated, is E. R. Rider, who was vice-president of the Dominion company but he is representing a third interest which eventually will own the plant if the sale completed.

Officials of U. S. Steel termed the report "premature" and would make no statement confirming it.

Canadian Steel was organized before the Great War during a time of high tariffs, but since the tariff was lowered the Steel Company ceased became an important producer.

The principal producing unit, the Ojibway plant, is at Windsor, Ont. In recent years it has been closed.

LEPAGE AND AUDY HOLD LEAD ON BIKES

Montreal, April 13 (CP)—Henri Lepage and Jules Audy, with nine other teams close at their heels, held a one-lap lead in Montreal's semi-annual six-day bike race this afternoon.

The French-Canadian pair had pedalled 377 miles and seven laps and held a point total of 290.

Second placers were the team of Walthour and Berk.

White Hope Boxer Deported from Detroit

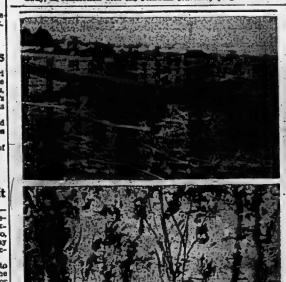
Windsor, Ont., April 13 (CP) — Philip R. Munroe, winner of the recent White hope heavyweight boxing elimination contest at Toronto, was deported from Detroit Saturday by United States immigration officers.

Munroe, on his way to Chicago to meet his manager, with whom he planned to proceed to Hollywood for a fight, was taken from a westbound train by immigration officials Saturday morning. He was told to wait in Windsor and appear Monday before a board of review which would consider his case.

British Commission Favored by Veterans

Windsor, Ont., April 13 (CP)—Setting up of a special commission in Canada, by the British government, to study the conditions concerning imperial veterans and their dependents residing here, is requested in the petition the United Veterans Forum asks the city council former soldiers' committee to present to Lord Tweedsmuir, when His Excellency visits Windsor May 5.

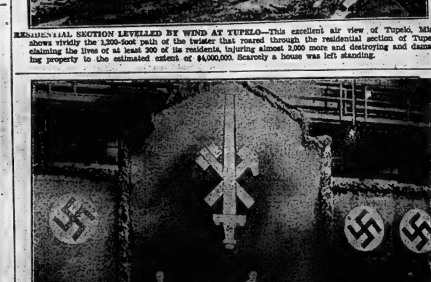
WESTERN CENTURY CLUB MEET



London, Ont., April 13 (CP) Nearly 300 delegates from 26 Western Ontario 30th Century Clubs were in convention here this afternoon to organize a regional association in affiliation with the Ontario 30th Century Clubs Association.

DUCE'S KISS FOR HIS FATHER'S LIFE—Benito Mussolini recently publicly proclaimed Italy's gratitude to a mother and son whose heroism prevented the supreme sacrifice on a battlefield in Ethiopia. As interested spectator is Premier Julius Gombhos of Hungary, who is also the Hungarian Minister of War.

PICKWICK COMING TAKES TO ROAD AGAIN—The mayor of Rochester, England, drinks the health of the members of the Dickens' Fellowship as they arrive in the Pickwick coach. The mayor is in his robes of office (black hat), as the coach, immortalized of Charles Dickens, and famous author, arrives in town. Members of the Dickens' Fellowship, in period attire, were passengers in the coach, which was driven by Bertram Mills, from Golden Cross House, four hours away, in connection with the Pickwick centenary program.



"THEY SHALL NOT PASS!"—Quite unimposing is this heap of sand and this silt in the rock (BELOW) and the confusion of peak and vale (TOP) in a heavily guarded field in France. They mark, however one of the almost impregnable forts in France's famous Maginot line. The slit faces in the direction of German territory. In the event of attack the innocent-looking silt would spit a deadly and efficacious machine-gun fire capable of stopping an enemy advance. Because of censorships, guards, etc., it is rare indeed that photographs such as this can be brought from France. All along the frontier France has erected thick steel bars, some six rows thick with barbed wire between. These make tank attack impossible. Motor cars passing through must do so at high speed here, to prevent the taking of pictures. This one was obtained, nevertheless, and is believed to be the first of its kind taken from the tabooed area.

BOWMANVILLE PUPILS DEMAND RETURN OF PRINCIPAL—Senior fourth pupils at Bowmanville public school have gone out on strike in protest against the dismissal of Principal Johnson. The principal was asked to resign by the board of trustees because it was charged he was too lenient in disciplinary measures. Groups of students with banners are shown ABOVE.

RESIDENTIAL SECTION LEVELLED BY WIND AT TUPELO—This excellent air view of Tupelo, Miss., shows vividly the 1,200-foot path of the twister that roared through the residential section of Tupelo, claiming the lives of at least 200 of its residents, injuring almost 2,000, more and destroying and damaging property to the estimated extent of $4,000,000. Scarcely a house was left standing.

DISUSED SHAFT USED IN ATTEMPT AT RESCUE

Lower Regions of Mine Unaffected by Cave-in, Reported at Moose River

Old Shaft is Being Opened up to Reach 3 Entombed Men

10 HOURS' WORK

Relief is Held Men Are Still Alive 141 Feet Under ground

Moose River, N.S., April 14 (CP)—A call for more men and mining equipment was issued today by J. F. Manservey, Provincial Mines Inspector directing rescue work at the Moose River mine where the three Timmins men are believed to be imprisoned 141 feet below the surface.

Twelve experienced men from the Waverley and Wentworth coal mining districts were proceeding to the scene in answer to the call. A complete power hoist and pumping equipment needed in the rescue work was rushed of the mines. First aid equipment and a pulmotor were being sent from Halifax for the treatment of the families of the imprisoned men.

The three, Dr. D. J. Robertson, Herman R. Magill and Alfred Goudling, all of Timmins, have been trapped by a cave-in for more than 36 hours.

Second Shaft Opened Up.

Holding out hope that they still live, miners are opening a second shaft to reach them, but progress has been slow.

Foreman J. D. Sandegren, directing digging operations, went down into the channel and reported he had come up to report there was evidence the men had not yet reached lower regions, but he added it would be another 10 hours before they could be definitely sure they could reach the men through this channel.

Fresh puffs of smoke issuing from the fire-fighting crews' hose nozzles were the only indication they still lived in the depths of the mine. Foreman Sandegren said the fresh smoke is a signal from the imprisoned men.

One of the men, Goulding, was known to be interested in first aid work, especially signalling, and, Mansergeon argued, Goulding was sending a message to the men in the workings and assure them all was well below.

Electric Plant Taken In.

A portable electric light plant was rushed here from Halifax last night to aid the rescue operations.

"If we had 1,000 men and $1,000,000, we couldn't do more than we are doing," Sandegren declared after he had been instructed that no expense was to be spared in an effort to reach the trapped trio.

Lois the daughter of Robertson and Mrs. Magill, wives of the Toronto surgeon and barrister, will arrive at the mine to await the efforts of the rescue crew. Three weeks ago Mrs. Robertson met her son while with her husband and together they went to see a sample of gold which she took back to Toronto.

Wreathe Smoke Signal

Wreathe smoke is believed to be a signal from the depths telling that three men were safe. Fresh supplies and fresh timbers over the caved-in shoots had been hauled to the mine as rescuers redoubled their efforts to bring the men to the surface.

"I am sure by what they say," veteran miner P. D. Henderson, foreman of the rescue crew, said, "that they are alive, the three, Dr. D. R. Robertson, Herman R. Magill, barrister, and Alfred Goud, as he brought refuse to the rockfound cavities when the crash came Saturday night.

He was far more hopeful o' finding the men alive today than at any previous time in the search for life in the depths of the gold mine.

Still Level Not Reached.

"I have had time to reason it out," the mine foreman said, "and from experience said, "and I believe the structure here is such that a cave-in would not necessarily block the 141-foot level."

The men, if alive, would have an abundant supply of oxygen, he said. Henderson was certain the smoke puffs were signals from the imprisoned trio. There were seven wooden boxes at that level which they had fashioned to attract attention. The fact that the smoke anyhalo came up yesterday for a few hours and again this morning added to this belief.

CAPT. FLANDERS' MOTHER DIES

Brantford, Ont., April 14 (CP)—Public and other applications have today attempted to locate Captain M. Flanders, hero of the 16th Division of the British Imperial Army in India, who is on his way to this city. His mother, who had not seen her son in 13 years, died this morning at Paris, Ont. Capt. Flanders, the father, Ula Flanders, who conducts a meat market here, was anxious to get in touch with his son.

Drug is Developed To Combat Pneumonia

Pittsburg, April 14—The Mellon Institute of Industrial Research reported advances in the war against pneumonia and development of a new type of tuberculin test and its diagnosis of tuberculosis.

Dr. R. R. Weidlich, the institute's director, listed "hydroxyisocupreine" as the most important drug that has been found up to the present" in combatting pneumonia. He added investigation with this field showed the drug has high pneumococcic activity."

The report said the drug "has also been tested in 26 clinical cases which have demonstrated a very high tolerance in the human for the drug, absence of any visual effects, and a high proportion of recoveries from serious pneumococcic infections of all types.

Dr. Weidlich's report added that investigators also have carried on artificial immunization experiments with tuberculosis bacillus and discovered a new form of the germ shedding further light on its life history.

The report said the drug "has also been tested in 26 clinical cases which have demonstrated a very high tolerance in the human for the drug, absence of any visual effects, and a high proportion of recoveries from serious pneumococcic infections of all types.

Dr. Weidlich's report added that investigators also have carried on artificial immunization experiments with tuberculosis bacillus and discovered a new form of the germ shedding further light on its life history.

The report said: "This new bacillus is capable of producing a tuberculin that is different from the tuberculin derivable from the human bovine or avian bacillus. The breeding of this organism may therefore aid in the diagnosis of tuberculosis."

KING IS PATRON OF RIFLE ASSOC.

Continues Donations of $50 Pounds For King's Prize

BY THOMAS T. CHAMPION
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, April 14 (CP)—The King has consented to become Patron of the National Rifle Association, and the Duke of Gloucester is President.

King Edward is continuing the donation of £250 for the King's Prize.

There could be no doubt, Lord Ootiesloe said at the N.R.A. general meeting, that the most predominating factor in making the Association what it was today was the encouragement rifle shooting for the Empire was the fame and reputation which the King's prize had.

The Duke of Gloucester, as a boy, had won the cup for the rifle office of President, which the King had held as Prince of Wales. He would continue to hold the cup which the King, as Prince of Wales used to win. He had a sample of Wales' prize. Its title would now be changed to "The Duke of Gloucester's Prize."

FLOODS THREAT BRANDON AREA

Assiniboine River Level Rises Twenty-Five Inches

Winnipeg, April 14—(CP)—Steadily rising waters of the Assiniboine River lapped at bowlying sections of Central Manitoba today, bringing concern to city and rural residents in the vicinity of Brandon.

Water gauges at the wheat city registered a rise of 25 inches during the past 24 hours. Civic authorities provided accommodation in unoccupied houses for a number of families forced to vacate their homes in the city's north-side flat area.

Acres of low-lying land east of the city were reported under water as residents moved to higher ground. The high-flowing Assiniboine River is in Southern Saskatchewan gave impetus to the flood menace.

MANUFACTURERS WITHDRAW

Washington, April 14 (CP)—The Automobile Manufacturers Association, trade organization of the giant motor industry, has resigned from the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Neither group would comment today, but informed business circles said the motor manufacturers were not satisfied with the Chamber's support of Federal bus and truck legislation.

LUMBER WORKER IS QUESTIONED IN NAMUR CASE

Search in Ruins For Third Body is Unavailing

LOCATION OF CABIN

Omer Girard is Member of 'Crucifixion Sect'

Montreal, April 14 (CP)—Omer Girard, self-confessed slayer of Lolanthe Lecalic, camp worker, is being detained here by provincial police for questioning regarding the death of two aged men and the disappearance of a third in Namur, Que.

Namur, Que., April 14 (CP)—The search for Mrs. Delphine Lecalic, believed to have perished at the same time as her husband, Joseph Alfred Dudevoir, and Leon Lalonde, in the fire which razed the Lecalic home where the bodies of the two men were found today in Lac Jaune, half a mile distant, and the hills west of the house, by Detective H. Lefebvre, of the provincial police.

Provincial Police Lieut. Gaston Dudevoir, brother of Alfred Dudevoir, said he had been told of the woman.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Dudevoir might have run out of the house toward the lake after the murderer entered, and that the assailant, catching up with her might have dragged her back into the lake after murdering her, was advanced as one reason why the bodies were not discentrating around Lac Jaune and the hills, police said today.

Another reason given was that the cabin where a man wanted for questioning, Omer Girard, lived, and the day of the fire Joseph Dudevoir, Leon Lalonde and Girard left half a mile from the Leclair grounds, on a direct route over the hills.

Girard.

Girard, a comparative newcomer to the Belgian-founded Protestant community, was widely known on Montreal's north shore as a religious group called the "Crucifixion Sect." His brother, Orville Girard and a man named Gaumont organized communities of followers for religious exercises or entertainment under auspices of the group.

Girard came to Namur with winters ago, went away during the summer, then returned last autumn.

Shortly after their arrival the Girards and Gaumont became the acquaintances of Leclair and Dudevoir, strict adherents of the Latter Day Saints movement and the only ones in the district.

Devotional Meetings.

Ovila Girard, leader of the little group of devotees, was said to have professed allegiance to the Latter Day Saints, but Gaumont was to have gone with Gaumont and his brother to Saturday night devotional meetings at Gaumont's home, at Ovila was a preacher he led the exercises. The arrangement was said to have ceased when Leclair learned of the Girard other activities, reported to have included fortune-telling and dancing, which he regarded as "sacrilegious" under the strict doctrines of his own communion.

Cottage Built By Girard.

Omer and his young wife lived a mile and a half from Namur in a cottage Girard had built with lumber and materials furnished by one of his rural converts. Over the front door of the house is hung a picture the printed inscription "Vive Jesus, Vive Sa Croix, Vivil Jesus, Vivil His Cross). Underneath this board is a rough wood cross bearing the words "Jesus De Nazareth."

On March 11 Ovina Girard and his wife left Namur for Montreal. They soon left about the same time.

April 3 was the day of the fire. Omer borrowed a .22 calibre rifle from a neighbor, explaining he wanted to shoot some muskrats, which were around his house.

FARM BOYS, GIRLS WILL BE TRAINED TO AGRICULTURE

Hon. Dr. Simpson Tells O.E.A. Stress Placed on Sewing, Cooking

MANUAL TRAINING

Physical Training And English Will Play Larger Part

Toronto, April 14—(CP)—Minister Duncan Minister Simpson announced here today at the opening session of the Ontario Educational Association, announced changes in the curriculum of rural public schools so that rural boys and girls will be trained "more or less in direct relationship to the life of the community."

Stress would be placed on agriculture, sewing, cooking, manual training, music, art, physical training and English, the Minister told the throng of teachers and school trustees at the formal opening in Convocation Hall of the University of Toronto.

"We are going to enlarge the course of study in rural sections," Dr. Simpson said. "Much more literature will be given over to the teaching of agriculture, sewing, cooking, manual training, bookkeeping, music etc. In conjunction with the teaching of the more practical subjects will go the emphasis on English."

Mr. Hardy's equipped teachers would be required for the carrying out of this scheme, said Dr. Simpson who spoke after an address by Premier Hepburn who gave way to university and civic officials.

NATURE VIOLENT TAKES 1,300 LIVES

Floods, Storms Cause Heavy Human Toll in U. S. in 1936

New York, April 14 (AP)—Nature, attacking with every means at its command in one of its greatest offensives in years, has caused 1,300 deaths in the United States since January 7.

An unusually cold winter took a heavy toll, and spring has brought heavy floods which drowned hundreds. Southern tornadoes and wind added the disaster roll.

The Associated Press survey showed at least 543 persons died from causes related to the severely cold weather, 300 from floods, 200 from lightning, and 314 from floods. Tornadoes at Tupelo, Miss., and Gainesville, Ga., and the floods at Pittsburgh, Johnstown, Pa., and Wheeling, W. Va., took the greatest toll.

The American Red Cross estimated that besides lives lost, major and minor disaster losses totalled $50,000,000, affected 622,060, destroyed 6,585 homes, and damaged 44,826.

Property damage ran into hundreds of millions of dollars.

IDLE-TO-WORK TASK PARAMONUT

Dominion Government Will Spend $75,000,000 in Short Period

Ottawa, April 14—(CP)—Unemployment relief and means of getting the people back to work are paramount considerations of the Dominion Government in the next few weeks, involving plans for the expenditure of some $75,000,000 by the Dominion alone.

Establishment of the National Employment Commission, plans for highways, public works and other projects of activity, farm improvement and agricultural rehabilitation and direct relief all enter into the picture.

Meanwhile immediate necessities in the way of direct relief are being carried on but with statutory authority. The Relief Bill was not passed by the Senate last night before Parliament rose for the Easter recess, and since last March 31 when the old Act expired, the Government has had no power to spend money for relief purposes.

C. C. F. PLANS FOR ELECTION

Toronto, April 14 (CP)—The Provincial Council of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation plans immediate action to prepare for the next Ontario election, it was learned today following a lengthy session of Council.

Motorists Drink from Alcohol-Gas Blend Forecast

American Chemical Society Hears Spirited Debate on Merits of Alcohol as 'Power' Blended With 'Gas'

Kansas City, April 14 (AP)—Motorists going to their gasoline tanks for an intermediate drink, if alcohol is blended with gasoline, was forecast today by Dr. Gustav Egloff, of Chicago, in a paper presented in a debate on "power alcohol" before the American Chemical Society.

A fight over the merits of this "power" fuel, which is good grain, or grain and molasses, or wood from farm products, was brought before the society by a symposium. Both sides cited experiments, one to show this mixture gives better performance, the other the opposite.

Explaining drinking at the gas tank, Egloff stated:

"Alcohol could be obtained from alcohol-gasoline blends in any amount at any desired time.

"It is readily separated from a blend by adding" by shaking with water. Any gasoline taste and odor may be removed by charcoal activated carbon. The cost of removing the taste and odor would be about five cents per quart. Every ten gallons of 10-per cent alcohol gasoline (10 per cent alcohol and 90 gasoline) has potentially eight quarts of 190-proof liquor."

Leo M. Christenson of Ames, Ia., associated with the Farm Chemurgic Council, spoke for blending; Ethanol is the grain alcohol he proposes making from farm products.

"Used in the form of blends," he said, "ethanol is not now a competitor or a substitute for gasoline, but an ingredient of superior fuel, compounded with various materials and processes used to prepare gasoline suitable for use in modern high compression engines."

Christenson and Dr. J. O. Morrell, both of Chicago, stated:

"Actual road tests made using 20 per cent alcohol-gasoline fuels have shown a lowered efficiency in motor performance. This lowered efficiency might be overlooked by the average motorist but the initial increase in the alcohol-gasoline cost in comparison with gasoline cannot be overlooked. The yearly increase cost of the motorists' fuel bill would be over $1,000,000."

FREDDIE'S MOTHER REACHES COAST

Her Trip to United States is "To Protect My Child"

Los Angeles, April 14—(AP)—Mrs. Lillian Bartholomew looked forward today to a reunion with her curly-haired child after a trip from a 6,000-mile "mother's duty" journey long 10 days ahead of the legal battle for custody of Freddie, 7, today of him.

The meeting was to be arranged today or tomorrow, through attorneys for Mrs. Bartholomew and the boy's guardian aunt, Miss Mylliocent Carpenter.

For several days there had been concern for Mrs. Bartholomew's safety, expressed by the lawyer she dodged in New York and by her husband in England, after the boat docking last week she assumed another name for her trip here by airplane.

"My trip to this country was prompted by child," I want my boy. He belongs to me and I am entitled to him. This is all connected somehow to keep him away from me."

Mrs. Bartholomew quoted from her Attorney, Leonard J. Meyberg. "Worn Out" from the trip, she kept to bidding after a conference with him.

POTATO FAMINE BY FIRST OF MAY

P. E. Island Has Only Potatoes in Maritimes

Charlottetown, April 14—(CP)—Canada's potato famine will be absolute potato famine before May 1," President M. C. McNeily of the Prince Edward Island Seed Growers' Shippers, said today in commenting on a report from London, Ont., that that province was up against a potato shortage.

President McNeely declared the island had the only potatoes in the Maritimes and unless the next crop is a failure, there will be no famine.

Last year farmers of the "Garden of the East" had a heavy surplus and at this time were selling only six cents a bushel but this year, prices ranged from 45 to 60 cents a bushel and the Shippers' President forsaw a still higher price.

Over supply held the prices down so producers turned to the seed end of year that farmers of this province turned more to mixed farming in 1935.

Mother of Five Must Face Death Appeal Refused

London, April 14 (AP) — The Home Secretary today refused clemency to Mrs. Dorothy Waddingham, 34, nurse and mother of five children, who was given sentence to be hanged Thursday.

Mrs. Waddingham was convicted of Feb. 27 of killing a patient of her nursing home in Hastings. The Criminal Appeal Court dismissed her appeal last month.

47 WORK YEARS LIMIT SUGGESTED BY ROOSEVELT

Youth Urged to Become Pioneers in Social Betterment

UNEMPLOYMENT ISSUE

Question is Raised as to Advisability of Limiting Work Years

Baltimore, April 14 (AP)—Throwing out the suggestion that the active working years of every breadwinner be limited to 47 years, President Roosevelt had placed before the United States today a broad outline of the New Deal's position on the major problem of unemployment.

Amid the cheers of supporters who had gathered for a Democratic rally after an all-day Democratic parade last night, Mr. Roosevelt called on youth to be pioneers "especially now in trying under control the forces of modern society."

Developing one of his pet themes in a discussion of continuing large-scale unemployment, the President said it probably would be attacked "from every conceivable angle." But it was his conception that limits on the wage-earning life span that aroused much discussion and speculation today.

Work For 15 to 65

Raising the question whether it is not "possible and right to limit the working ages of men and women," Mr. Roosevelt said:

"Work out for yourselves what would happen if all the boys and girls of 14 and 15 and 16 years who are now working in industry, found it possible to stay in school until they were at least 18 years old. Now many jobs would that open to the young people of the country? What would happen to the older people from 45 to 65?

"In the same way, ask yourselves how many jobs would be created if the great majority of people who are now over 65—to take a figure at random—were in a position to retire on pensions for the balance of their days on earth."

OWEN SOUND B.C.I. DANCING SCORED

Minister Says He Would Soonest Send Daughter Into Beverage Room

Owen Sound, Ont., April 14 (CP) —Rev. John Dodds would sooner send his daughter into a beverage room for a glass of beer than to Owen Sound Collegiate to be taught the Collegiate dance, Rev. John Dodds said:

"I know nothing about the Wendel case and am certain my presence in Owen Sound is not the occasion in which you are reported to be engaged."

"I am learned some members of the grand jury felt all the points Mr. Wendel mentioned had not been satisfactorily explained, and should be investigated further before a "no bill" is voted, freeing the man from charges, counsel and attorneys and representatives of the office of District Attorney W. F. Wendel, Toronto, indicated they hoped the "no bill" would be voted as they went to bed. The verdict could be taken to Brooklyn to search for the "absconder."

Among witnesses summoned to appear are Ellis H. Parker, Burlington, provincial detective chief, who obtained a "confession" from Wendel; Mrs. Ethel Wendel, New Jersey; and James S. Kirkham, Toronto, chief of the provincial detectives, who filed the murder complaint against Wendel.

Wendel's counsel, Anthony M. Hauck, Jr., of Hunterdon County, announced he will not place the kidnap complaint made against Wendel by Mrs. Haugmann before the Hunterdon Grand Jury when it convenes.

Hauck, who was one of Hauptmann's prosecutors, said he would not be the nominee of the Mercer investigation.

JAFSIE WILL NOT APPEAR AT PROBE

Says He Knows Nothing of The Lindbergh Case

Trenton, N.J., April 14.—Paul F. Wendel, the former Trenton stenographer, denied today he knew details of the Lindbergh baby kidnapping, but in a two-and-a-half hour session, was isolated from other prisoners in Mercer Jail Monday on the eve of the Grand Jury's scheduled re-opening of the case.

Wendel, Bradley said Wendel against whom a charge of kidnapping is pending, but who is still pending, was transferred from the seat wing of the jail to the hospital wing "as he would be where it was more private."

Wendel's attorney, denied by officials, that Wendel had been threatened by prisoners because of his reported identification of an accomplice in the kidnapping of the infant son of Colonel Lindbergh.

Wendel's identification was made by his reported identification of an accomplice in the kidnapping of the infant son of Colonel Lindbergh.

The fact the Grand Jury has subpoenaed Jafsie to appear as a witness for today and Wednesday is taken to indicate the new investigation of the Wendel phase of the Bruno Richard Hauptmann case will not be extensive. Also the inquiry "discontinued" two weeks ago.

The Grand Jury will not hear Dr. John F. Condon, self-styled Lindbergh ransom intermediary, who was asked by Allyne Freeman, the prosecutor, to appear Wednesday.

Dr. Condon, who identified Hauptmann as the man who was given $50,000 ransom, sent Freeman a telegram saying April 1:

Says He Knows Nothing

"I know nothing about the Wendel case and am certain my presence in Owen Sound is not the occasion in which you are reported to be engaged."

"I am learned some members of the grand jury felt all the points Mr. Wendel mentioned had not been satisfactorily explained, and should be investigated further before a "no bill" is voted, freeing the man from charges, counsel and attorneys and representatives of the office of District Attorney W. OWEN SOUND BOY Scores Send Daughter Into Beverage Room

Owen Sound, Ont., April 14 (CP) —Rev. John Dodds would sooner send his daughter into a beverage room for a glass of beer than to Owen Sound Collegiate to be taught the Collegiate dance, Rev. John Dodds said at the Second End Baptist Church, Sunday night.

Aiming particularly at a folk dance recently performed at the Collegiate, Rev. Mr. Dodds said:

"Dancing, regardless of what kind, is destructive to the morals.

"It is the fact that the evening places of all kinds of immorality.

"It is time the mothers of this city realized the fact that their girls are being taught to dance at the Collegiate, sending them on the road down to Hell.

"The dance is the most intimate contact the devil has and is based on everything that is wrong.

"Dancing originated at the Hell-holes and saloons of Germany and France and is based on passion and desire."

Cupid's Bow Mouth Creeps Into Art Of Modern Church

Detroit, Mich., April 14 (AP)—The Rev. Dwight Lloyd of the cupid's bow mouth and simpering expressions has crept into modern church art, a highlight of discussion on the characters of true worship, Father Thomas McGlynn, sculptor, told the annual luncheon meeting of the Detroit Study Club there.

Father McGlynn, whose art studies were pursued in Rome and Paris, said lack of the old world, calls most examples of modern ecclesiastical art "sentimentality." Art must be continued, in its proper representative form would stimulate true religious sentiment and bring new life and vigor into the church.

"They miss the man in the reproduction of our Lord, today. They miss the man in the holy sanctity is something virile," he said. "Modern church art is lacking in life, originality, and dynamic character—in a word—it is dead."

City and District News

TEMPERATURE RISES TO OVER 80 DEGREES

While temperatures mounted steadily to a mark well over 80 degrees, residents of the city and district enjoyed their first taste of summer today. Bright sunshine and soft, warm weather, a condition almost equal to a day in June.

BLAZE IN GRASS ON VICTORIA AVE.

For some time this season fireman of the local department have responded to a brisk grass fire which rippled through the tall weeds and grass on the south western limits of the City at ten o'clock this morning. A second alarm to 194 Victoria Avenue was caused by overheated stove pipes. No damage was reported from either alarm.

WOODS ALIVE WITH BOY HUNTERS

Robert Reid, 4 young army of boys and youths have taken to the woods and fields of the district, in a numberless array, armed with air guns and the more deadly rifle and 22 rifle. Many of the boys are residents of the area west of the city where the greatest number of juveniles have been observed, and it is reported, shooting promiscuously at targets and moving objects. One well-known farmer complained today that one of his best had been found riddled with shot.

AGENT SETS SALES RECORD

In recognition of his excellent sales record with the company in this central district, Mayor Cecil A. Reid received word from the head office of the Great West Life Assurance Co. that he has won a complete trip to Bermuda and return on all expenses paid. One hundred and fifteen representatives of the company have qualified for this free trip.

We expect to sail from New York on April 30th and will return on the 9th," stated Mr. Reid today.

RAKING OF LEAVES URGED ON CITIZENS

With city trucks now active on the work of spring cleaning through the city, the initiation of co-operation by householders to rake dead leaves and other debris from the lawn to the curbs in front of their homes from where the trucks may load and cart it away.

"All we ask," requested the office of the city engineer today, "is that the work be done at once so we can get it over with."

FISHING TOURIST ARRIVES EARLY

The fishing season will start early for an 8 foot lone company of tourists who hoisted passing through main section of the city today, loaded securely to top of the large car bearing New York registration. There was a large canoe, shiny in new paint and accessories for the journey was occupied by five persons, all busy in an easterly direction.

Up to the present no special tourist movement has been reported by the local Chamber of Commerce, although several queries regarding this district have been answered.

CHLORIDE CAUSES DISCOLORATIONS

Polish as much as they wished, caretakers of the city hall during the past few weeks have been unable to get the wide expanse of brasswork on the heavy main doors of the building shiny or keep it shined.

As fast as the gloss was put on the brass with polish and elbow grease, a heavy spray-brown film would immediately replace the shine.

The trouble has been traced to the emanations from a drum of chloride of lime standing on the second flight of the entrance. The drum is in the last drum of sewer which have been given out to local contractors for disinfecting homes in the flood area.

BIRTHS LEAD DEATHS IN CITY

Births lead deaths in this city during the month of March by just one, according to vital statistics prepared for the month at city hall. During March total births registered 17 male and 17 female. Deaths listed were 17 male and 16 female. Only six marriage licenses were issued by the city clerk during the month.

PATROLS OF GULLS ONLY LIFE SIGNS ON WATERFRONT

Odd Sound of Ship's Carpenters, However is Heard

HIGH WATER YEAR

Gulls patrol the water front but as yet the slow circling of the birds on their daily hunt for waterborne scraps give the only sign of activity along the docks and boat houses winter bound for so long.

Only here and there is the sound of the hammer heard as ship's carpenters and mechanics tackle the necessary repairs on the boats that still lie high and dry in their winter moorings. Timbers must be bored and sounded for weak and decayed spots, masts must be stepped again, and further secured by extra heavy stays that are to come; trees and rigging and sails and planks examined for replacement or repairs. Diligently the seams must be tested and caulked for the season's use. So long, however, biting winds and uncertain weather have retarded the possibility of the use of the paint brush and the stretching of sails after their winter rest.

With the last of the ice now gone from the upper harbor, the sporting boys have yet to be released before the fire of the craft are kindled. Along the banks of the harbor, part of the flotilla of punts still lie beached. Several of the smaller boats are yet covered with winter wrappings, slatted against the onslaughts of ice and snow. Only the unwieldy and heavy fishing boats have so far been given their first taste of the cold water, but these are yet to be joined by the white glory of sails and the scurrying of motor boats as the sprinted races have no part.

A year of unusual high season is expected to be marked by renewed interest among ships and sailors. The initial race of sailing which again came into its own in 1935 has been taken up by a number of homes throughout the city other amateur boat builders have set their hands to the task during the winter and ribs and planking steadily grown into the finest possible sailing craft and power boats. As a new schedule for the older sailors of the South End Athletic Club have taken over the voluntary task of organizing the rudiments of racing to youthful navigators.

Yet the harbor season has not yet been officially opened. The first Sunday in May is the date set to baptize its appearance, but, according to the secretary of the local Harbor Commission the season is not to be open at about the end of this month.

Three Churches Observe Easter in Shannonville Parish

The parish of Shannonville had its three Easter morning services, the Rector beginning at Kingsmere, then Shannonville and at eleven o'clock, Point Anne. At each church there were large congregations. At Point Anne there were many Communicants; Mr. Wagner was soloist in the Communion Service by Rev. Mr. Geen, a former resident of the parish, who was also the preacher at his service. Col.-Geen and others from Belleville were at the service. The preacher chose for his text, 1 Chapter Revelation, 17-18 Verses: And when I saw Him I fell at His feet as dead and He laid His right hand upon me saying unto me 'Fear not, I am the first and the last, I am He that liveth and was dead and behold I am alive forevermore, Amen and have the keys of Hell and of death.' St. John's Church, looked very attractive having been cleaned, brightened and newly carpeted.

CONGREGATION BIDS FAREWELL

Banquet Given in Honor of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brown

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brown, prominent members of Rokeway Street United Church, who are leaving the city to reside at Wooler were honored last evening by the Renegade Club and by the congregation on the eve of their departure from Belleville.

A banquet arranged in their honor by the Renegade Club of which Mr. Brown is president, was held at seven-thirty in the Dundas Street rooms, forty guests being present. The beautifully decorated tables with mauve and paler colour scheme carried out in crepe paper and baskets of flowers were centred with Easter lilies, while pussywillows were used in profusion throughout the room. The delicious menu was under the convenership of Mrs. Percy Parr of the Club.

Grace was said by Mr. A. Greatrix and Rev. R. K. Stevenson was chairman for the evening. A telegram of toasts and ring songs, during the repast was read by William Oliphant, on behalf of the Club, who expressed the general regret felt at losing such popular and active members and presented to Mr. and Mrs. Brown a pipe and tobacco plate. Both replied thanking the Club for their thoughtfulness and speaking of the pleasant associations during their membership in the organization.

At the conclusion of the banquet the Club members were joined by about one hundred of the congregation. A splendid program was given, for which Mr. Newman acted as chairman. The numbers included vocal solo by Mr. James Cordle, "O Mate o' Mine"; a duet by Mr. and Mrs. K. C. Maynes, "Little Mother of Mine"; a reading by Mrs. J. Cordle, "Ma and Jim", and a vocal solo, "Ocean Lullaby", by Mr. and Mrs. Cordle. Mrs. S. P. Haguse and Mr. H. Atkinson, Mrs. Hubbs and Mrs. Dancan acted as accompanists.

On behalf of the congregation Mr. and Mrs. Brown were then presented with a handsome silver tea service on silver tray, while the gift of a Bible and Hymnary was presented to Reginald Mc. Harry Brown and Mr. Talbot Ketcheson made the presentations and Mr. Jas. Hudgins in an address, referred to the keen interest taken in the work of the church by Mr. and Mrs. Brown. The former is a member of the Official Board, Secretary of the Sunday School and Superintendent of the Sunday Club, while the latter is a teacher in the Sunday School and a member of the W. A. and W. M. S. Gracious replies were made by the honoured guests and all the singing of the very happy evening the gathering sang "Auld Lang Syne" and "Blessed Be the Tie That Binds".

REV. DR. WILSON IS LAID TO REST

Solemn Tribute Paid Memory of Outstanding Minister

The funeral of the Rev. Dr. J. P. Wilson, late of Belleville, who passed away at Cleveland, Ohio, on Friday, took place on Monday afternoon from the residence of his son, Dr. Cameron Wilson, Napanee, to Grace United Church, of which at one time, the late Dr. Wilson was pastor, a large number of friends from near and distant places had assembled in the church to pay their last tribute of esteem for the late Dr. Wilson and sympathy for their bereaved sorrowing relatives, the members of his family who are left to mourn his loss.

An impressive service, in which the choir of the church assisted, was conducted by the Rev. R. D. Hicks, the pastor of the church; the scripture lesson was read by the Rev. R. B. Fisher; the Rev. Dr. E. W. Baker of Belleville, offered the prayer, and the address was made by the Rev. Dr. James Semple, President of the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church, and pastor of Bridge Street United Church, Belleville.

At the close of the service the funeral procession proceeded to the Napanee East Cemetery, where interment took place, the service at the graveside being conducted by the Rev. S. T. Richards.

The pallbearers were Rev. S. Osborne Napanee; the Rev. H. Pascoe, Napanee; the Rev. W. Woodger, Cobourg; the Rev. R. Ketcheson, Toronto; Dr. W. H. Fletcher, Odessa, and the Rev. G. T. McKenzie, Bath.

Y's Men Hear Easter Theme

Holding their eighth consecutive one hundred percent attendance record for the year, Y's Men's Club convened in the Y.M.C.A. to hear a talk on "Easter" by Rev. Canon A. G. Sinclair, pastor of the Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, who the speaker of the evening and replaced Rev. Dr. Eastbrook as being "Dawn or New Ideas" for the approaching season.

During the meeting moving pictures of the Y's Men's International meeting held at Denver Sept. 29 to 1935, were shown on the silver screen and the pictures being shown at all Y's Men's Clubs throughout the United States and Canada. Many of the scenes aroused big interest among the individual Y's Men's clubs attending the meeting at the same point in 1936.

Following the picture show, through the courtesy of Alex Gordon, who made the permission to use of the projection machine, Dewey Bowsted as social chairman, while President Ken Morris outlined the club's programme for the ensuing few weeks.

CRUSHER STARTS IN NORTH QUARRY

With ten men employed, work of erecting the bins and other machinery at the crusher in the city quarry north of the city was being carried on this morning in preparation for the start of crushing which is expected to come this afternoon. Considerable work will be supplied the men in crushing fine stone which will be used to repair road damage to streets and properties. Contracts have had been supported in the quarry owing to the flooded condition of the pit.

KINSMEN CHIEFS MEET CLUBMEN IN GET-TOGETHER

Belleville Organization Reports 42 Flood Families Helped

NATIONAL V. P. HERE

In an atmosphere warmed by good fellowship, fraternalism and camaraderie, another Belleville Kinsmen's Club held one of their most successful get-togethers at the Queen's Hotel last evening on the occasion of the special visit of National and District representatives of the organization, including Monty Madden, National Vice-President, James Norris, District No. 6, Secretary and Jack Maddock, Governor of District No. 6, guest speaker of the evening.

In opening the meeting, president of the local organization Carl Hill introduced the representatives of the Club. Member Chas. Wood in a brief report told of the relief that had been accomplished by the Club in caring for those who had been affected by the recent flood.

Flood Assistance

"Altogether we have cared for 42 families, as regards clothing, food and bedding," said Wood, "and an appeal made to residents of the city," reported Mr. Wood, "and Mr. Jack Haig and Mac Haig we are indebted for the assistance that has been given us in the matter," added Mr. Wood in his report.

Mr. Jack Maddock, district ppast and Secretary of District No. 6, of Ottawa, in a few brief remarks paid a high tribute to the manner in which the local club has carried on since its inauguration a few years ago.

"Ever since this club has been formed we have watched its progress and have been well satisfied. All we can do now is congratulate the members on the splendid manner in which their duties have been carried forward, and I feel sure that the success that has marked its meetings," added Mr. Norris.

District Governor

Monty Madden, National Vice-President, and District Governor, Ottawa, in a few words of greeting, to whom fell the honor of introducing the guest speaker of the evening, Jack Maddon, No. 6 District Governor. Oddly enough, the activities of Mr. Madden during the past several years of his association with the organization.

"Mr. Madden was originally a member of the Ottawa Kinsmen Club. Then he went to Ottawa. He found that the Kinsmen movement represented there, and immediately set about the work of organizing a Kinsmen Club in Ottawa. There are now four offices and last year was the outstanding club in the district," said Governor. In 'Dick' you have a man who combines all the good qualities of a leader," said the speaker.

Kinsman Cleo Collins acted as sergeant-at-arms during the evening.

Club Congratulated

In his congratulatory remarks to the local Club, Jack Maddock, who comprise the executive, Mr. Madden declared his trip from Ottawa to Belleville was a pleasure. He praised the large turnout of members on this occasion. The activities of the local organization in assisting needy families of the city in the flood, nothing, the District Governor paid special tribute.

"Not only is the Belleville Club no other work this year, then that which stand at the head of Kinsmen clubs in Canada," lauded the speaker.

"Tonight we are bringing the Kinsmen Club of Toronto to the district which comprises that area of Ontario which has been settled by Kits yourselves, the other clubs are also young men imbued with spirit and vision, and also a desire. There are forty-eight clubs in Canada with another one at present being organized in Toronto, which will make three Clubs for that city," declared Mr. Madden, sketching the reason for the existence of the Kinsmen Club.

"The objective of these Clubs is Canada for Peace and the Kinsmen for Canada," he declared. "We need Canada feel 'service conscious'. We are bringing men to increase our membership and bring to the younger men the realization of the need for joining up. Let us go to these meetings because we have a purpose. Let us have some particular thing in mind; let us lead the Club, instead of the Club leading us."

"Kinsmanship," stated the speaker, "is difficult to define." The growth of the present organization, it was further elaborated, began in Hamilton some years ago when a body of young men banded together for the service of their community, and were united with an inflexible bond for the mutual benefit also of each other. Since then the growth has been gradually steady and sure.

Value of Club

"What do you expect to get out of the Kinsmen's Club?" asked the speaker. "Better acquaintanceship, and a fellowship which is not felt in other clubs. Also a better and closer understanding of each other; an interest in each other's affairs. This reaches all through the Clubs, no matter where they are. There is a great deal to be gained by associating with the other clubs as well as the members which comprise the Clubs in the city in which you reside," he declared.

Mr. Les Pearsall, in thanking the speaker, declared it very opportune for Mr. Madden to make his visit at this particular time and illuminate those ideals of the local and district Clubs. The vote of thanks was seconded by chairman and president Mr. Carl Hills.

In moving a vote of thanks to all of those who had assisted in the work of entertainment, Kinsman Jack Haig introduced Mr. Leo Rigg as one of "the best Kinsmen in the ranks." one who was willing at all times to further the interests of the club the insofar as he was able. "I am happy to move this vote of thanks," declared Kinsman Haig. This was also suitably seconded by President Carl Hills.

During the evening Dr. Austin Walters extended his welcome to the new members and visiting guests.

Community singing was led by Past President Wm. McIlmoil, assisted by Leo Rigg, on the piano. A contribution to the evening's entertainment was made by Kinsman Leslie Lemmer, on the violin, assisted by pianist Clifford Templer, who also presented a well-received duet and duffet selection on the piano.

Kinsman Cleo Collins acted as sergeant-at-arms during the evening.

PENSION IN TRUST IS VIEW OF COURT

Aged Tyendinaga Man Accused of Intoxication

Patrick Berry, 81 year old Tyendinaga resident, appeared in Magistrate Butler's local police court today charged with intoxication. Berry was fined $2 and costs but case being remanded until Friday for trial.

"This man is in receipt of the Old Age Pension, I understand, and it has been brought to my attention by Chief Kidd that his pension should be handled in trust," stated Magistrate Butler at the opening of court. "Perhaps if we enlarge the case and notify the agents of Tyendinaga something can be done along those lines," added Crown Attorney Dornan.

Reserved judgment in the case of a charge of reckless driving laid against Ernest C. Millard, Sidney, was returned in favor of the defendant and the charge was dismissed without costs. "Although he received warning at the railway crossing and saw the wig wag in operation, the accused says he had passed the crossing some 50 feet before the train passed. There were no other motor vehicles on the road, so I'll have to find the accused not guilty and dismiss the charge," concluded Mr. Worship.

"The next time he tries such a trick we'll find him in the morgue most likely," added Crown Attorney Dornan.

Mr. Charles A. Payne, K.C. represented the accused at his trial which was held one week ago.

With her face covered by means of holding her coat collar close to her chin, Mrs. Ethel Ann metzgar in star style, a Trenton woman appeared in a motor car Belleville "I can't pay all of my fine today, but will have it in a week's time," the woman told the court in a muffled tone. Mrs. Metzgar pleaded guilty to the charge of speeding. "Unless ten people are in court on Friday I'll dismiss the charge," warned His Worship before he terminated today's court.

Stirling and District

Stirling—Nearly one thousand music lovers from all parts of the district gathered in St. Andrew's Church, Campbellford, on Friday night when a choir of fifty voices assisted by Wishart Campbell, "Golden Voice of the Air", Mrs. Malcolm Haig, of CHOT, Miss Margaret Dickson and Miss Dorothy Ferguson, pianists, broadcast a concert of Mr. Charles R. Allen formerly of Stirling, Andover Presbyterian Church, Stirling, presented the famous Maunder cantata, "Olivet to Calvary" in a most impressive and delightful fashion, Presenting the production there was a brief and very enjoyable recital by the visiting artists, which included vocal offerings by Mr. Wishart Campbell, Mrs. McLean Haig, Miss Sager and Miss Dickson, Mr. Malcolm Northrop, well known violinist of Peterboro, offered solos. Groups of numbers accompanied at the piano by his daughter, Miss Harry Northrop, displaying most unusual qualities in her art. Capt. W. K. Rumlender, (retired), thrilled the large audience with his fine baritone rendition of "There is a Green Hill Far Away" by (Gounod) with Mr. Allen at the organ. Wishart Campbell offered "The Holy City" in a manner that swept the audience into the proper atmosphere to receive the Holy Message. Enthralled through it a most delightful hour under the leadership of Mr. Allen, who is well-known to Stirling for his ability as a musical director. The production of Maunder's cantata were taken by Wishart Campbell as tenor soloist, Miss Sager and Miss Dickson were respectively the soprano and alto of the largest crowds to fill the auditorium took advantage of all available seats and were turned away for starting was approached, at 8.15 over one hundred and fifty people were in their places some having waited for forty-five minutes. The presentation was one that displayed careful and frequent rehearsal under the leadership of a capable instructor.

Directing the fifty voices through the soft choruses in subdued clearness, the full choruses in a manner a ringing volume that made the rafters tingle with the mob chorus of part two "Betrayal and Condemnation". It was a musical treat worthy of all in attendance, and those who came from great distances to hear it were amply rewarded. Among those present from Stirling—Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rice, Mr. and Mrs. H. Francis, Mr. and Mrs. Harper Nolting, Mr. and Mrs. Ross Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Whitehead, Mr. and Mrs. Ruttiner Sandwell, Mrs. Lloyd Ketcheson, Mrs. H. W. Rowland, Mrs. Musgrove, Miss Retta Musgrove, Miss F. Clark and Pauline Jackman, Messrs. William, Ernest and Gib. Donald Weed, William Ketcheson, William Dunn and Arthur Duncan. Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Ostrom, Brighton, formerly of St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, were also present.

Stirling Oddfellows Visit Frankford

On Friday about thirty-one members of the Stirling I.O.O.F. motored to Frankford to the invitation to attend a district rally of their fraternity which was held in that centre. Four degrees were placed on a large class of candidates by the Stirling Lodge degree team under the leadership of Degree Captain, Harry Stirling, assisted by the rest of the Second Degree. The gathering was in session from 2.30 p.m. until 7.30 p.m. At 10 p.m. at 10 the visitors were entertained with refreshments at a banquet which was catered to by the ladies of the Hamilton Rebekah's Lodge. Among those from Stirling who made the trip were:—Past Grands, Messrs. H. Carlisle P.G., George Carlisle, P.G., Ross Carlisle, Percy Ashley, P.G., Burt Sarle, P.G., Alex. Mitchell, P.G., Ed. Mills, P.G., J. B. Thompson, P.G., Percy Farrell, P.G., R. A. Murphy, P.G., Arthur Everett P.G.; Wilbert Patterson, P.G.; Wm. Anderson, Burt Rogers, Theodore Rose, Percy Thrasher, Roy Walker, Charles Oliver, George Thompson, Ernest Johnston, M. Fraser, Robt. Williams, Percy Ostrom, C. Rumble, E. T. Ketcheson, Wesley Farrell, W. Warren, Earl Fox, Mr. William Patterson, Mrs. Wilbert Patterson, Patterson drove over from Danville to take part in the ceremonies, also being members of the Stirling Lodge. The party left Stirling early morning by bus and returned to Stirling at 5 a.m. Saturday morning.

The residents of Stirling were aroused from their beds early on Saturday morning, when fire completely destroyed the blacksmith shop owned by Mr. Wm. Mosier. The fire was discovered Postmaster F. W. Smith who immediately turned in the alarm. The fire fighting gained headway before the local Dept. arrived that any attempt to save the building was useless. The Fire brigade under the direction of the commander of the fire succeeded however, in preventing the flames from spreading to the surrounding property and the citizens were aroused by the reflection of the blaze in the sky which could be seen for miles and in a short time hundreds had gathered on hand to watch the fire department carry on their work. No one seemed to be able to give any clue to what started the fire which left only the bare framework of the building standing. The exact amount of damage has not been ascertained.

Sunday with Passion Week Services

Throughout passion week a series of special evangelistic services were held in St. Mark's Presbyterian Church, Madoc, with a group of special speakers taking part. The services were conducted by Rev. Hunter of Madoc, with Rev. J. A. Kofford being the guest speaker on two occasions. The attendance throughout the services was quite large and interest steadily increased as the week progressed. On Monday evening, Arthur Duncan assisted in the musical part of the meeting, having offering two sacred solos and the message was brought by Mr. Kofford.

Special Easter Services

Special Easter Services were observed in all Stirling Churches on Sunday with appropriate music being offered by the various choirs. At Good Friday St. John's Anglican Church held a three hour service commencing at twelve noon and lasting until three in the afternoon. Special addresses were given on "Words From the Cross" and appropriate music by the choir including a group of hymns by Miss Mary Hall. She with Mrs. H. H. Alger at the organ, On Easter Sunday Services began with the celebration of Holy Communion at seven-thirty a.m. and a children's service at 10 a.m. and a service of choral commission at eleven a.m. All these services were conducted by Rev. A. G. McConnell, rector of the Parish.

St. Paul's United Church

At St. Paul's United Church two unusually large congregations were greatly benefited by special Easter services both in the morning and in the evening, with special Easter music being offered by the choir under the direction of Mr. G. L. Clute, musical director. The morning service was opened by an address on the subject "Jesus the Name of Jesus" by Anthem "He is Risen" by Gounod and Miss Betty Conley soprano, with Miss Mary Conley at the piano. A special Easter message was brought by Rev. Mr. Hunter, Madoc, following the choir offered two Anthems "Hallelujah" by Stinger, and "Why Seek Ye the Living" by Cooke, Mr. G. L. Clute sang as a solo "Open the Gates of the Temple" Miss Pitman at the organ. Rev. J. A. Rowland delivered a special Easter message.

St. Andrew's Church

Large congregations attended the services held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church at both morning and evening when the choir offered the following music: morning "How Calm and Beautiful Morn" by Gounod, "Hallelujah Chorus" by Handel, "Christ Arose" by Stainer and "Rolling Away" with Arthur Duncan as soloist. Miss Betty Conley took part in both, Rev. J. A. Kofford ministered to the congregation. Mr. Hooper was the morning service with the solo "He is Risen". During the offertory Miss Betty Conley rendered a special organ arrangement of "Hallelujah Chorus". The evening service the choir continued with the Easter music offering "Hallelujah" by Arthur Duncan assisted with a solo "The Holy City" and Rev. J. Macbride of the Bible Christian Church, Sunbrae was the special speaker and gave a most interesting address.

CAMPAIGN IN AID OF BLIND

One of the greatest social works of this age is the attention paid to the welfare of the blind by the Canadian National Institute for the Blind. As a result those people who have been deprived of one of the great advantages of life are able to make their contribution and live out their happy lives of usefulness.

In Belleville Committee tonight holds the meeting which will open the campaign for a collection to carry on the work. Belleville has done well in past years and will again carry out its obligation to society in this regard.

It is hoped that there will be a large number at the Collegiate library tonight to hear Captain E. A. Baker, O.B.E., M.C., Croix de Guerre, B.Sc., managing director of the Institute, himself blinded as a result of war service. He will speak on the work of the Institute.

FRONTIER COLLEGE

What the Frontier College is accomplishing in serving the men of the camps is one of those romances which cannot fail to cheer those who have the welfare of all classes at heart, who see progress abroad in the world among men, and who desire to fit men better to carry on their part in this age. Its labourer teachers share in the day's work, teach foreign-born labourers, instruct English-speaking labourers, and direct camp activities of a healthy citizenship. There could be no finer expression of true citizenship than the ideals these members of the staff seek to inculcate. They work in very fertile soil.

The task is a vast one. Under normal conditions there are 120,000 men employed in the various camps of Canada. By the side of the labourers are these labourer-teachers who shape the future of men and who instil a true spirit of citizenship as these university-bred men with broad human qualities work among the others, assume the same occupations and try to expand the interest of their fellows in true Canadianism of outlook.

This healthy leadership enrolled 3,616 men in classes of study last year, benefitted 15,790 workers in isolated camps by general classes in land settlement, current events, hygiene, thrift, naturalisation and topics of general interest, and placed 63,009 books and magazines at the men's disposal.

This work depends entirely upon the support of the public spirited among the people. The service rendered the men in camps is without cost to them.

Last year 97 labourer-teachers were placed in the field and these men worked with pick and shovel with the strongest of the camp men and created those contacts which alone lead to vital human relations. During the winter these teachers laboured in zero weather with the other labourers.

There is need in isolated camps as in few other places, for the best among Canadian educators to mix and mingle with them, who are at all times kind and prone to be resentful. Such can need friendly counsel and advice and this can be given by one who companions with them as a labourer employed in a common task, Dr. E. W. Beatty, principal, points out.

Evidence of the high value placed upon the Frontier College is that within the past few days the college has been asked by the Federal authorities to place representatives among the migratory men assembled this year on various works and extra-gangs.

Other facts presented to the annual meeting were:

The number of adult pupils this year was 3,616, average age of pupils 29.4 years, and 49,786 pupil hours were studied.

Citizenship

Foreign-born men who took out papers 9; Foreign-born men who made application 48.

Reading Supplies

Daily newspapers in French and English 93; Shipments of Literature to Camps 459; Contents of Consignments: Books — (Biography, Travel, History, Fiction) 4,058; Magazines, all kinds 57,412.

Recreation and Entertainment, promoted by Labourer-teachers — Softball, swimming, horseshoes, hockey and occasional field days.

Local concerts, including community singing, dramatics, and minor plays— in which campmen, themselves, take part.

The attendance at these games and concerts is unrecorded, but in the aggregate mounts into many hundreds.

The turnpike road to most people's hearts, I find, lies through their mouths, or I mistake mankind.—Wolcott.

For the sake of health, medicines are taken by weight and measure, so ought food to be or by some other rule.—Skelton.

One should eat to live, not live to eat.—Franklin.

Extracts from articles of the day, news events and general notes from the press of the world, as reviewed by the Intelligencer's Toronto Office, Canada Cement Co. Building, Phillips Square, Montreal, each day.—Superintendent: Wm. Lamplighter.

From too much love of living,
From hope and fear set free,
We thank with brief thanksgiving
Whatever gods may be,
That no life lives forever;
That dead men rise up never;
That even the weariest river
Winds somewhere safe to sea.

FASHIONS OF FIFTH AVENUE

EASTER SUNDAY were radioed by the National Broadcasting Commission, special commentators being used. Sights and sounds of the famous avenue where fashion suns itself and proudly disports new gowns and fixin's on Easter Sunday and other days were transmitted through the ether by a walking radio station, a radio technician attired in top hat, tails and all the accessories of a proper Easter outfit. In the topper was concealed a radio transmitter, very small but effective, and a tiny pole peaped just above the hat carrying the antenna—a microphone was carried in his hand. He gave a running description of what was to be seen on the famous Fifth Avenue as the folks were coming out of the churches and carried on to the more and more fashionable Park Avenue where even the 'chows are snooty with blue ribbon pride. Various persons of importance in the fashionable world were interviewed and spoke briefly in the microphone, while the gowns being worn in the parade were described by a lady fashion expert. In the parade were many dogs, on leash, and the fashions as applied to canine pets and husbands were also described. One unique note of the fashion broadcast centred in the tidings that New York ladies of the Four Hundred are wearing vegetables for corsages and costume ornaments, such as bunches of carrots, peanuts, etc. (is a peanut a vegetable!) The weather on Fifth Avenue was reported as chilly with an overcast sky and many costumes were covered with coats. Many men braved the chilly wind in top hats and canes, but derbys and fedoras answered. Among the crowds on Fifth Avenue was noted a distinct cosmopolitan strain, men and women of all nations, even Indians, cowboys, midgets, and dark-hued natives of various parts of Africa, for the Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey Circus is at Madison Square Garden, and the personnel of the show wouldn't miss such a sight as Fifth Avenue on Easter Sunday if they could make it at all, even though the circus gives a Sunday matinee in the big city.

ONE OF THE MOST INTERESTING GUESTS ever entertained by Belleville is in the city today (Tuesday) Capt. E. A. Baker, O. B. E., B. Sc., M.C, Croix de Guerre. This year the Order of the British Empire was conferred upon Capt. Baker by His Majesty the King. Capt. Baker lost his sight as the result of wounds received in the war where he served his King and Country with great courage and resource. Even the loss of sight did not dampen his courage, rather it strengthened it and on his return to Canada he served two years with the Ontario Hydro Commission in the operating department. Capt. Baker is now Managing Director of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind and is doing a wonderful work. He will address a meeting in the library of the Collegiate Institute this (Tuesday) evening when Belleville citizens interested in the work for the blind and admirers of such brave resourceful Canadians as Capt. Baker will have an opportunity to make his acquaintance.

EIGHTEEN HUNDRED BOX CARS NEED WASHING, being Canadian Northern Railway cars on exchange with United States lines which were caught in flood waters in the United States, submerged and subjected to mud baths. These cars have been returned by the United States lines, dirty and dishevelled but ready for business just as soon as the mud is removed. Seems as if our Yankee Cousins showed sloppy manners in not cleaning the cars they borrowed, before returning.

Analysis

He came home late for supper. He was a professor of chemistry, and she was a wife who tried to have a good meal ready for him every night. When he was late her cooking would be spoiled and he would start to find fault.

He was late again tonight. The supper was cold. The argument was on. The family finally broke down crying. But he was a professor of chemistry.

"Stop crying! Your tears have no effect on me. What are they? A small percentage of phosphorous salts, a little sodium chloride. All the rest, water. Bah!"

ENTOMBED IN MINE— Chief surgeon at the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, Dr. David E. Robertson was entombed in a gold mine at Moose River, N.S., after a cave-in. E. R. Magill, part owner, with Dr. Robertson, of the mine, and Alfred Spadding, timekeeper both of Toronto, were also imprisoned.

TWO WORKMEN LOSE LIVES

Niagara Falls, N.Y., April 14 — (CP)—Two workmen lost their lives by electrocution in industrial plants here yesterday.

George Rubes, 50, of Lewiston, N.Y., touched a 11,000 volt line in his battery plant and Austin Macdonald 46, of Niagara Falls, Ont., came in contact with 440 volts at the Niagara Smelting Works. Both died instantly.

TRANSPORTATION GIANTS VIE FOR TRANSATLANTIC SPEED RECORDS—Transportation, by air and water, has improved beyond man's ability to comprehend. And with improvement comes competition for speed and records follows. So much so that today there is a three-cornered ocean race between a supership of the air and two superships of the sea. Back in 1819 the Savannah, the first steamship to make a transatlantic voyage, puffed away from Savannah, Ga., and 27 days later landed in Liverpool, England. Soon the Queen Mary, the British superliner will point her bow toward New York and arrive there in four days and a few hours. The French liner, Normandie, recently altered will be the Queen Mary's competitor on the water. Meanwhile, in the air, the LZ129, known as the Von Hindenburg, will be in the race as the first commercial transoceanic airliner. Contrast the new giant of the air with an early type Zeppelin, shown ABOVE. This new Zeppelin is much speedier

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper pop started to smoke with his feet up, saying to me: Dont you think you could call off that bridge date tonite for Pete sake?

Now Willyum the Hewess are expecting us and we're expecting to go so why expect the impossible? ma said. I couldn't dream of calling it off for any excuse—less than sickness, and I'm quite all right and you're certainy the picture of health with that cigar, she said, and pop said, Then I wish I felt as well as I look, I dont think I can go any more of this.

Meaning the cigar, and he layed it on the ash tray, saying, Where's the thermometer Not that I think it's anything serious, but you know the old saying, It's a wise man who knows his own temperature, he said.

Now Willyum it's probably just something you've imagined, I know how unreliable you are about your own health, ma said. I'll get the thermometer just to prove you're wrong, she said.

With she did and pop put it in his mouth, and after a while he took it out again and looked at it, saying, Yee gods, 98 and 3 fifts.

What, why that's impossible, ma said, and pop said Take a look for yourself.

With she did saying, That's what it reads, and it's an expensive thermometer. For goodness sakes you cant take a temperature like that out of the house. I'm going to call up Maud Hewe immeediily, she said.

With she did, saying, Is that you, Maud? I called up to tell you, by the way, Maud, what's the normal healthy temperature of the average person? O, really, oh and is that? Nothing, never mind I called up to tell you we'll be rite over, we're starting now, she said.

Which they did after a short argument with pop doing the listening.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

April 14th, 1916.

Mr. G. W. Sulman, M. P. P., Chatham, Ont., spent yesterday in the city with his brother, Mr. Charles N. Sulman.

Citizens of Belleville and vicinity were treated to a diversity of weather today. It rained, hailed, snowed and thundered. The snow fall was sufficient to cover the ground. The general impression is that fine weather will now follow.

Mr. John K. Fairfield is home from Rochester, N. Y., to spend a few days.

Mr. George Wilder of Montreal, formerly of Belleville, is visiting relatives in the city.

The distinguished character actor Cyril Maude, will appear at the Griffin Opera House this evening in a five part photo play entitled the "Greater Will".

30 YEARS AGO

April 14th, 1906.

Mr. Ernest Ford is home to spend Easter.

Mr. Matthew Cook of Chicago is visiting relatives here.

Mr. S. E. Carman has returned home after a trip to Jamaica.

Mr. Harry Burgoyne of Toronto is home for the Easter vacation.

Mr. Harvie Reistle is spending Easter with friends at St. Catharines.

Mr. George T. Hayne of Maitland, is visiting his parents at their home on Bleecker Avenue.

Mr. Thomas Stevenson of Toronto, is home to spend Easter with his parents.

Mr. Ed. Ashley of Kingston spent yesterday here.

Messrs. Fred Thompson and Fred Parks of Oshawa are spending the Easter holidays in the city.

Mr. Stanley Coon is home from Niagara Falls to spend Easter.

Mr. Arthur Northrup of Montreal is here to spend Easter.

40 YEARS AGO

April 14th, 1896.

Mr. A. W. Vermilyea has returned to the city after conducting revival services at Kingston.

Mr. Peter Washlen, county surveyor, was in the city today.

Mr. A. Morden left today for Montreal where he will take a position on a Government dredge.

The ice on the bay was breaking up today owing to the strong southerly wind.

Mr. J. L. Biggar has bought the Holton lot on the west side of George Street, south of Bridge Street, and will erect a handsome residence there.

A wheel club has been organized to be known as the Y.M.C.A. Wheel Club and the following officers have been elected: Captain E. M. McMullen; First Lieut., R. Ashley; Second Lieut., Fred Burrows; Sec.-Treas., Mack. Jamieson.

50 YEARS AGO

April 14th, 1886.

The ferry steamer made regular trips today.

The work of scraping Front Street was commenced today.

Arbor Day, the first Friday in May, will be observed in the city schools.

The average attendance at the public schools in this city for the month of March was 1092.

Mr. Arthur Fanning shipped 11 fine horses to the New York market today. He has purchased "Little Walker" from Mr. James McGuire and Dr. Abbott's fine mare for Mr. George McBride of Gedenburg.

Ald. Hanley commenced to erect a fine frame residence today for the Rev. D. P. Bogart, rector of St. John's Church, on Murney Hill, just opposite the residence of Mr. J. W. Dunnett. The building will be unlike anything in the city and will cost $4,000.00.

JONAH AND THE WHALE HAD NOTHING ON THIS LAD!—Alfred Zohi of St. Joseph, Mich., who had an experience comparable to that of Jonah, is shown here pointing to the dent low of a street sweeper that swept him off the street and into its interior when his bicycle skidded and threw him into the path of the sweeper. It was necessary to dismantle the machine to extricate Alfred.

SCOTT'S SCRAPBOOK

by R. J. SCOTT

Hitler 'Somnambulist' to Russia 'Preparing European Conflagration'

Moscow, April 14 (CP-Havas)—Chancellor Adolf Hitler, "somnambulist preparing a European conflagration," is about to conclude secret negotiations for a military alliance with Japan, and is surreptitiously pouring enormous quantities of his arms into Austria to aid in a projected major Nazi "Putsch," the Journal De Moscou, political, social and economic weekly, declared today.

It warned the Nazi leader also has designs on Czechoslovakia, the Soviet Union and Lithuania, and said sanctions against Italy for its war of aggression were not "useless" but too mild.

QUADS TO MOVE TO NEW HOME

Daily Quartette at One Birth Hope For Better Conditions

Saint John, N.B., April 14 (CP) —When Canada's only quadruplets move from the home that has sheltered them during the past four years to another house within a few days, they'll be hoping that fortune will smile on them as it does kindly in their new surroundings.

The quadruplets, three girls and a boy, children of Mr. and Mrs. William Mahaney, Saint John, have discovered there's a great difference between being Canada's only quadruplets and the world's only quintuplets. Accordingly, for years, the "quads", 13 years old last Christmas Day, are being forced further into the background with the news Dr. Dionne's Callendar.

Their father out of work, facing eviction from their home, the quadruplets expected a cheerless Christmas-birthday last December. Their story was told in newspapers across Canada. Kind-hearted folk came to their rescue. The four, Edith May, Kitty Lynn, Lyola Christine and John Douglas, were aided.

Now the $150 fund is almost exhausted. From Bridgewater, N.S., where Mrs. Mahaney was born, has come an offer for the children to take part in a concert this summer. They can sing, dance and recite and they would be paid part of the proceeds. Their mother is not yet undecided whether or not to accept the offer.

CITIZENS CHASE AND CATCH YOUTH

He And Two Others Will Appear Before Chief Constable

No arrests were necessary in Belleville during the past 24 hours. Local police authorities were, however, assist in the recovery of a Cleveland bicycle stolen by Smithfield resident early afternoon. It was described as a blue colored double-framed bike.

Three youths of a tender age were observed in the act of trying to gain entrance to a garage at the rear of BT West Bridge Street early last evening. Neighbors, Messrs. Yeamley and McKinley, gave chase and apprehended one of the youths. Later the names of the trio were obtained and they will be asked to appear before the Chief Constable this afternoon. One of the kiddies, not quite as fleet-footed as his two accomplices, eluded the police they were only searching for some apples they knew to be stored in the garage they were endeavoring to gain entrance.

Eleven transients were given warm sleeping quarters at the police station as they stopped in Belleville last night on their respective journeys easterly or westerly as the individual course directed. On male visitor accidents were reported by the highway patrol.

Trenton and District

Young—Pulford

Trenton, April 14 (Special)— An Easter wedding took place at Grace United Church when Mellie, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pulford, Shuter St., was united in marriage to Mr. Orval den Young, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Young, Mill St., Glen Ave. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. George Campbell. The bride looked charming in a gown of powder blue French silk lace with tie net and a matching turban. She carried calla lilies and fern with streamers of white ribbon. The bridesmaid Miss Mary Pulford, was a becoming gown of orchid taffeta with lorbon to match. She carried a fan shaped bouquet of pink and white orchid sweet peas tied with a white chiffon picot ribbon. The groom was attended by Mr. T. W. Meyers. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride, at which immediate friends and relatives gathered. A toast to the bride was given by Mr. George Tice, of Belleville. Mr. and Mrs. Young will reside on McLellan Ave.

Joseph Alyea

An aged and highly respected resident of York Road, Northumberland County in the person of Joseph Alyea died at his home on the York Road Friday. Mr. Alyea was in his eighty-third year and had resided on the York Road for forty-four years. He was born in Prince Edward County in 1853, the son of Mr. and Mrs. David Alyea, who were pioneers of that county. Prior to his short fatal illness Mr. Alyea was very active and was often seen at work on his fruit farm. He is survived by one son, his wife, Mrs. Lonnie Alyea, one daughter, Bertha and one son John, both living at home, a granddaughter, Rosemary also survives. The funeral took place yesterday afternoon and interment was made in St. George's Anglican cemetery. Rev. Mr. Smith conducted the service at the home and graveside. The pall bearers were H. Lafferty, H. Flindall, J. Sisty, B. May, S. Hendricks, H. Pool.

Capt. E. A. Baker, Managing Director of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, who will speak tonight at the Collegiate in the interests of the Institute and of the local campaign.

Capt. E.A. Baker O.B.E., M.C. Will Speak Here Tonight

Belleville Committee Will Inaugurate Campaign for Blind

Following is a biography of Capt. E. A. Baker, O.B.E., M.C., Croix de Guerre, B. Sc., managing director of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, who will speak tonight at the Belleville Collegiate, opening the local campaign for funds to support endeavour for the blind:—

Born in Collin's Bay, Ontario of United Empire Loyalist stock, Captain Baker obtained his early education in this vicinity, later graduating from Queen's University in Electrical Engineering in the Spring of 1914. At the outbreak of war he enlisted with the Sixth Field Company Canadian Engineers, and proceeded overseas as a lieutenant with this Company. He was wounded at Mount Kemmel, early October, 1915, completely losing the sight of both eyes. He was promoted to the rank of Captain and awarded the Military Cross and Croix de Guerre. After being discharged from hospital, Captain Baker entered St. Dunstan's Hostel for blinded sailors and soldiers, London, England, and on his return to Canada was engaged for approximately two years with the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario, in the Operating Department. In 1918 at the request of the Director of Vocational Training, Captain Baker took charge of all training and after-care arrangements for Canadian blinded soldiers under the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment. From the date of Captain Baker's return to Canada in 1918, his interest in his fellow blinded soldiers, took a keen and active interest in the problems of the civil blind of the Dominion. As a result of keen interest aroused among sighted friends the Canadian National Institute for the Blind was organized and the Dominion Charter procured on March 30th, 1918. The objects of the Institute are "To Ameliorate the Condition of the Blind in Canada and to Prevent Blindness". In September, 1918, Captain Baker became officially connected with the Canadian National Institute for the Blind as General Secretary, having up to that time been a member of the National Council. The Canadian National Library for the Blind was amalgamated with the Institute in the early stages of organization and from small beginnings the Institute now has organizing services extending across the whole of Canada and Newfoundland, including industries, library, home teaching, pensions, relief, general service and prevention treatment and propaganda. The National Office is located in Toronto and Divisional or Branch Offices in Vancouver, Edmonton, Calgary, Regina, Winnipeg, Montreal, Halifax and St. John's, Nfld. In 1921 Captain Baker's official title was changed to that of Managing Director.

In the New Year Honours of 1935 conferred by His Majesty King George V, Captain Baker was made an Officer (with) of the Order of the British Empire. In January 1935 Captain Baker was appointed Chairman of the Soldier's Aid Commission by the Government of the Province of Ontario. He is a member of the Dominion Executive of the Amputations' Association of the Great War, Secretary-Treasurer of the Sir Arthur Pearson Club of Blinded Sailors and Soldiers and a member of the Forest Hill Village School Board.

S. A. Baker entered St. Dunstan's January 3, 1916, left July, 1916.

What to Plant, Not to Plant Farmer's Dilemma in 1936

"It's the guessing season for farmers right now", commented A. O. Staples, farmer-resident of the district of Madoc, as he speculatively eyed a bag of new seed corn at a downtown seed store yesterday afternoon.

"About this time of the year it always is", further elucidated Mr. Staples, the greater part of whose life has been spent in the profession of wresting his living from the soil.

"And this year it's going to keep us all guessing. What to plant and what not to plant, I mean."

"Last year a lot of them thought there'd be a glut on the potato market. So there weren't so many planted. Potatoes were pretty scarce in some sections. But even then the prices didn't go up—much. Now we've got to figure on this year's. Some'll grow alfalfa; some others'll grow oats and clover, and again they might go into truck gardenin'. It's a guess work all through."

Farmers of the district, it was explained, may set down certain expected prices for their produce this year, but after all it will be only guess work. Weather will be one big factor. If it's dry, then the crops won't come up so heavily; if it's too wet, they'll be drowned out. If it's just right then the quantity of produce raised will govern prices and things will be cheaper.

This year, will in all probability be a year of higher prices for fruit in the orchards of the section, it was intimated by one rather orchardist. Ravages of mice and rabbits which have girdled thousands of young trees throughout the district have been especially noticeable this spring, following a severe winter with an abnormal depth of snow. Faced with the alternative of going hungry owing to their natural heritage being covered with the snow, both rabbits and mice will, several hundreds of the orchards of all varieties.

With the land at present in excellent condition, well watered and free from frost, the season should be one of heavy growth, but what prices may be expected can only be surmised at by mere guess work, unless contracts have already been signed with manufacturing companies of the district, who arrive at their prices over a period of average years of production.

LATEST LIE ARRAIGNED

Ottawa, April 14 (CP)—Anatole Latrelle, 26, of Ottawa, was arraigned today in Magistrate's Court and charged with armed robbery in connection with the $1,257 daylight holdup March 26 of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

Latrelle's arraignment came as a surprise to the public. He was been held since April 6 on a charge of vagrancy. Police said they were confident of seizing soon one or more men suspected of participation in the robbery.

Mixes, Drinks Poison In Presence of Friends

Sarnia, Ont., April 14—(CP)— William Holmer, 54, blacksmith of Bombay village, today took a dose of poison and died in convulsions a few minutes later. Holmer, living with a brother-in-law, mixed up a glass of "soda and water" in the presence of relatives and it was not until he warned them that he had taken the glass they discovered a poison had been put in it. He is said to have been despondent.

evening's enjoyable entertainment. Novelties and balloons were distributed among the guests. Two five dollar gold pieces were presented as door prizes and these were won by Mrs. Frank Kelcher and Mr. Paul Orlando.

EASTER SERVICE AT ST. JOHN'S MISSION

The Easter service at St. John's Mission, Herchimer Avenue, Sunday morning at 11 a.m., was well attended. Shrine's Easter anthem, "He Is Risen" was beautifully rendered. Miss Gladys Mannings presided at the organ, due to the recent illness of Miss Jessie Redner. The flowers on the altar were placed by Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Means, Herchimer Avenue, in memory of Mrs. Jones and Mr. Sam Means, who was killed at Vimy Ridge.

TABERNACLE W. M. S.

The regular meeting of the Tabernacle W.M.S. was held on Thursday, April 9, with a good attendance. Invited guests were present from Carmel and Allen's. Mrs. Gerow graciously welcomed the guests and hoped they would find their visit profitable and enjoyable. The meeting opened with hymns, "Christ the Lord is Risen Today" and "Alas and Did My Saviour Bleed," followed with prayer by the president and the Lord's Prayer in unison. Mrs. Hogle read the secretary's report and Mrs. Fisher gave the treasure's report.

A piano solo given by Miss Fern Stafford, Carmel, was very much enjoyed. Mrs. (Rev.) Naylor gave a very interesting and instructive talk on the 3rd chapter of the Study Book, Hymn, "Low in the Grave He Lay" was sung.

Mrs. Spafford, of Allen's, was the guest speaker and gave a very thoughtful address using for some of her thoughts the following Scripture, "Seek those things which are above." Mrs. Spafford's address was very much appreciated. Mrs. Gerow opened the worship service with "Must Jesus bear the Cross Alone?" and prayer by Mrs. Gerow. Scripture reading was read in unison. Mrs. Fyvie sang "There is a Green Hill Far Away" accompanied by Mrs. Wright. Hymn, "Savour Again Lord Thy Dear Name We Raise" and the Benediction brought the meeting to a close. Following this the Tabernacle ladies entertained the visitors with a cup of tea.

SAVED FROM DEATH—Claiborne Foster, well-known actress, who was saved from death when Tornado-Spain, Trinidad, when the two-ton Pan-American clipper ship Brazilian Clipper nosed over in the Gulf of Paria. Two passengers and the flying steward were drowned, 16 passengers and, six members of the crew saved, including three Toronto men.

SHANNONVILLE W. A.

The Jiggs' Supper given by the W. A. of Shannonville United Church on Thursday evening, April 9th, drew a good crowd. The hall was prettily decorated for the occasion, the color scheme being carried out in yellow and white. Jiggs and Maggie stood at the door to welcome everyone. Jiggs seemed in a very jovial mood in spite of a black eye for which Maggie was no doubt, responsible. Maggie looked in very good health and appeared sweet and pleasant.

The supper was well served and much enjoyed. Jiggs' favorite dish of corned beef and cabbage being one of the main features of the first course. Rev. Clark acted as chairman and all joined in singing "O Canada" and "The Little Brown Church in the Vale." Mr. Harry Wagner, of Belleville, assisted by three young ladies of the same place, delighted the audience with guitar music, furnishing several numbers. Lorne Redmond, a pupil of Mr. Wagner, sang two solos, playing his own accompaniment on the guitar. Miss Ila Roberts gave a humorous reading entitled "Maggie and Jiggs at the Golden Gate." A Hawaiian March, played by Mr. Wagner, brought the program to a close. Thirty-six dollars was taken in at the door and ladies' were much pleased with the success of their efforts and wish to thank all those who helped in any way for their kindness

14 Ounce Baby, Now Plump and 18, First 'Looked Like Bird Out of Nest'

Overbrook, Ont., April 14 (CP)—The Ottawa district's smallest baby, who weighed 14 ounces at birth and was wrapped in cotton wool, cradled in a small, narrow cheese box and not inside an oven 18 years ago, is celebrating her birthday today.

Miss Nellie Wright is now an attractively plump brunette, not overly tall, who has ambitions of becoming a nurse. If matrimony doesn't cash her first.

The baby looked exactly like a bird that had fallen out of a nest," her mother said today. "She was about the smallest thing I had ever seen. She arrived on Sunday, the first day of daylight saving, and Dr. Andrew Davies wrapped her up in cotton wool. At 11 o'clock he said that he did not expect she would live until his next visit. At two o'clock he came back again and pulled back the wool, she looked at him, then yawned; he could scarcely believe his eyes."

"I fed her with an eyedropper and a special preparation the doctor gave me. Mrs. Lalonde, the fireman's wife, who was helping me could not touch her at all. We did not try to dress her until she was four months old; all she wore were cuticles of folded handkerchiefs her father had bought at a fire sale."

The baby never gained normal weight as a child, though she now weighs 99 pounds.

She now has a beau who insists that he was a still smaller baby and weighed only a quarter of a pound at birth, but he has no proof. He is about as tall as she is, five feet, two inches, and celebrated his 18th birthday a month or so ago. Aside from what might be called professional jealousy, this is the only matter on which they disagree. Nellie insists that the title of "smallest infant" is hers.

ZION W. M. S.

Mrs. Percy Ray entertained the ladies of Zion Missionary Society at her home on Wed. April 8. The President presided over the Devotional period in the absence of Mrs. Floyd Shatfield. After a hymn Mrs. Tufts offered prayer. The Scripture reading taken from Mark 16:1-8 was read by Mrs. Percy Ray. During the business meeting it was decided to hold a "Mystery Social" to be remembered at Easter. Roll Call followed, the keepsord for the "Mystery Sociality", Mrs. Ray. Miles gave the Treasurer's Report. A special prayer for Miss Mary Ann was offered by Mrs. H. E. Denyes. The topic "Ilonan" was taken by Mrs. Percy Ray.

A very interesting personal letter from Mrs. Dr. Ralph Hayward (China) friend of Mrs. Ralph Sills was shared with the members and told of conditions in China. Mrs. F. Searles and Mrs. Cecil Ketcheon sang a duet. Mrs. Hawley, delegate to the Presbyterial, gave a splendid report and a vote of thanks was moved by Mrs. Searles, seconded by Mrs. Denyes. The meeting closed with hymn 380 Prayer and prayer by Mrs. Searles. Mrs. Ray served a dainty lunch while a social half hour was spent.

The Inside Story

I know both mother and Mary Ann, so I got the inside story, though Mary Ann was too excited to quite the contrary, she was been jealous.

Little Billy, Mary Anne did not like to hear anyone praised but herself not even her family and a friend or classmate, Mary Anne immediately broke in with, "I'm better than so good, why she can't even——" etc. Shattered and disillusioned by the good manners of a little friend Mary Anne had brought home from school, Mother decided to see what the child was at home.

It was then that Mother decided that she and Mary Anne had better go into conference. First, she explained to Mary Anne that because she or anyone praised Helen Foster's piano playing, it did not necessarily mean that no one could or ever would play as well as Mary Anne, or manners were not just as good.

"I'm better," Mary Anne said with a toss of her head, "I can play——"

"No," said mother, "you haven't, and anyone you mustn't say so you mustn't think so."

Caused by Jealousy

Mother then went on to explain to Mary Anne in simple, direct language that all her boasting was caused by jealousy, that she had gotten herself in such a state of mind that she couldn't even think anything pleasant about anyone. Mother told her such twisted habits of mind grew, and how increasingly unlovely and unlikeable they would make her.

She must, beginning tomorrow, mother said, say three nice things about someone, anyone and not one word of criticism. "Now, Mary Ann, quite feel it at first."

"But if I don't think it, it will be a lie," Mary Anne said.

"It may be a little lie at first," mother said, "but soon you will see, it will be the truth."

And mother offered a prize if Mary Anne could keep it up for a month.

And Mary Anne kept it up for a month, partly because she thought maybe mother was right, partly because she wanted the prize. It became easier and easier each day, until, when the month was over, Mary Anne went on praising indiscriminately and has grwn nice.

Teach Child To Praise Others

It Will Help Him to Win Respect of His Friends —Crunelle

By LISA CRUNELLE

ONE OF the nicest things about Mary Anne everyone said, was her generosity. She did not give away clothes and trinkets, stand 'round and never pass a beggar, but here was the much more difficult way and always giving the other fellow full credit for any good quality or small ability he might possess.

On account of this quality, Mary Anne was very popular, as well as trusted. Because, she refrained from catty remarks and often put in a good word for those who were being treated, she won the secret respect of her schoolmates and built up a sort of immunity, too. When Mary Anne left the roof, no "cracks" were made at her expense.

But this pleasant situation had not sprung full-grown from the head of Neptune. On the contrary, Mary Anne's generosity was the result of some considerable training, and not a little determination both on her part and mother's part.

Eyes Protect Against Abuse

Until something happens to her eyes, a woman takes it for granted that they need no special care. She gives them time to discarding them, gives little thought to table lamps and well-shaded lights. Touched with pigment, lashes are made dark and glittering, surrounding lissome eyes tapped with a mesmerizing cream. Well and good. But the important matter is vision, which is often impaired by abuse.

Medical men say that the human eye is retrograding. There are more imperfections, more individuals need glasses. It's something to think about, you girls who darn stockings and sew in a light, read until early hours in the morning, peruse your newspaper on a moving train.

The eye is a miniature camera. The pupil is the sensitive plate, and the iris serves as a curtain. With every improvement of the head, must accomodate itself to distance. Every waking moment the eye undergoes only a quarter of hours sleep. But there are ways of giving the eyes relaxation. When doing close work stop now and then, go to the window and look far away. Then you will enjoy the change. They will gain refreshment, be ready for the next period.

In many ways eyes can register a protest, ask for kinder treatment. When strain is present there may be one of many symptoms. Take heed if there is a sense of fatigue after a short term of reading, a desire to close the eyes and rest them. They are wearing out.

Perhaps there is a constant feeling of discomfort with lids itching, burning or smarting. Something wrong. Better decide to the eye specialist. Severe pains in the back of the head that come and go may be warnings that all is not well with the nodal lanterns. Sensitiveness to light. Inflammation of the lids, nervous twitchings of the eyelids are all signs that should not be disregarded.

When eyes are normal and healthy there is no discomfort, no feeling of strain.

Best exercise for reading is twelve inches. Pick up a book and note at what distance the type is clearest. Have some member of your family take measurement. It is an interesting test.

When printed words blur it is possible that the eye needs glasses lamps need glasses.

Nothing will change the shape of the eye because the lids are endeavoring to help in the adjustments of vision. The eyes will look smaller. Lids may be swollen, puffs may appear in the shadow under the eyes. We mention these beauty defects because beauty defects are serious matters to a woman. More important it would seem than health. At least to some.

CENTRE MISSION BAND

Centre Mission Band was held on Wednesday April 8. Robert Reader took the chair and the meeting opened with a hymn followed by the minutes of the last meeting. Robert Cairns read the Temperance Reading and Margaret Bellcread "Word from Africa". Quiet music was played by Miss Giles and the Call to Worship was answered with the Response. Mrs. Dehaney read the Worship Story followed by a hymn. Whitfield Dehaney led in prayer. Ruth Haveney then read the Scripture reading followed by the Roll Call, answered with the "Memory Verse. The Mission Band quartette sang after which Miss Giles read the Story from the Study Book. The all offered very much. The collection amounted to 170 taken while all joined in singing "Jesus Loves Me". Pennies dropping. Phyllis VanAyre and Ruth Reader were appointed by the Mission Band hymn for this year. The meeting closed with prayer by Mrs. Dehaney.

DOCTOR REVEALS STARTLING STORY of what 774 average people did to help KEEP FROM CATCHING COLD
● To a doctor long noted for his work in practical research we put this question: Can Pepsodent Antiseptic prevent colds? We asked him to find the answer in his own way. To take as much time as he needed. Spend as much money as was necessary. In a series of tests, the doctor worked for 2 full winters, with 774 people in all . . . These people lived together. Were together. Ate the same foods. But one-half of them gargled twice a day with Pepsodent Antiseptic. The other half did not.
THE DOCTOR'S REPORT
Results prove that Pepsodent Antiseptic is remarkably effective in fighting colds. For the people who did not gargle with Pepsodent Antiseptic had 60% more colds than those who used Pepsodent Antiseptic.
So, of the people who used Pepsodent Antiseptic, relatively few caught cold, but those who did got rid of their colds in as little as one-third the time required by those who did not use Pepsodent Antiseptic.

PRESENT PRIZES TO SCHOLARS AT MASSASAGA

On the last day of school before Easter holidays at S. S. No. 6, Amelasburgh, Massasaga, a pleasing feature was the presentation of prizes for the sewing and cooking training classes. These prizes were given by Mr. Lewis Post, one of the trustees of the school, and consisted of a fine watch for the boy whose manual training was considered best, and a fine piece of dress goods for the girl's sewing considered neatest. The judges for the manual training were Mr. T. A. Nightingale and Mr. John E. Walker, the other trustees of the school, while Mrs. Walker and Mrs. Nightingale judged the sewing.

After all names had been removed from the work, the judges gave the prize for manual training to Arthur Vallean, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Vallean. Nominations while the prize for sewing was awarded to Mary Lu Lester, daughter of Mrs. Roy Lester of Massasaga.

The manual training awarded first prize was an ornamental Jardinere stand and the prize in sewing consisted of a hemstitched and embroidered towel on huckaback linen and also an embroidered luncheon cloth. The judges in their remarks to the pupils paid high tribute to the workmanship of the prize winners and also commented on the excellence of the work of those who did not win prizes, intimating that it was no easy task to select a winner. Tribute was also paid to those who were not fortunate enough, to win because of their sportsmanship in being good losers.

Great credit is due to the trustees of Massasaga School and their wives for their interest in the work of the school and especially to Mr. Post, the originator of the idea, of giving prizes to stimulate interest and competition in the subjects mentioned. A promise of further prizes on Dominion Day, whereby each class in the school taking those subjects would be judged separately was given by the trustees during the visit.

The list of prize work will be exhibited at the Ontario Educational Association convention held in Toronto during Easter week, and will be in charge of Mr. Post, the delegate from Massasaga School.

The sewing classes are under the supervision of the Junior Room teacher Mrs. Grace A. Anderson while the manual training classes are conducted by the Principal Mr. Roy O. Dulmage.

Centre and Victoria W.M.S.

The Centre and Victoria W.M.S. held their April meeting at the home of Mrs. Ralph Stafford, Redenerville. In the absence of the president (Mrs. L. Brickman) through illness, Mrs. Roy Giles opened the meeting with the call to Worship, followed by a hymn. This was followed by Psalm 8. The minutes of the last meeting were read, and it was decided to hold a social evening in Centre Church with Mrs. (Rev.) Farnsworth as guest speaker. It was also said that quilt blocks be ready by the May meeting. Miss A. Brickman gave the Devotional leaflet, "The Spirit of Jesus at Work." Mrs. Herb Palmer read Scriptures from Philemon, Mrs. Rev. Muller sang "There were ninety and nine." A leaflet "The moments of the Days" was read. Miss A. Brickman sang a solo. Mrs. Fred Townsend gave a very interesting synopsis of Chapter 4 of the Study book. Miss K. Giles and Mrs. Melvin Pulver brought back interesting reports from the Presbyterial meetings held in Belleville. The prayer by Mrs. Roy Giles closed the meeting. Easter envelopes $0.85. Collection $3.37.

War Inventions Modify Civilization, Says Currelly

Toronto, April 14 (CP)—Europe owes much of its civilization to technical inventions and improvements developed primarily for destructive use in warfare, declared Prof. G. T. Currelly today at a meeting of the Ontario Educational Association Auxiliary Section.

Architecture underwent a radical change after the Greeks and Romans developed the Chinese bow-bow into stone and dart-throwing ballista, he said.

The stirrup, originating in China and introduced to Europe by the Huns, was largely responsible for the development of the feudal system, Prof. Currelly asserted. Overthrow of feudalism was due to the introduction of gunpowder, invented by the Chinese not for war but for artificial firecracker display.

Invention of glazed pottery was responsible for the doubling of Ireland's population alone from 1760 to 1830, he said.

STOLEN MOTOR FIGURES IN CRASH

Police Pursue Investigation As to Who Was Driving Car

Police were called to investigate motor accidents yesterday following complaints about a hit and run driver at the upper end of Front street. Mr. Hamilton, manager of the Ideal Fish Store Front St., complained to the police that his car regarding the left rear fender and wheel of his parked automobile having been smashed. Already had another motor vehicle which had been stolen in the scene of the accident.

Const. Taylor later obtained information relative to the description of the motor car alleged to have struck Mr. Culbodeau's car auto. Eye witnesses informed the authorities that a motor car bearing licence plates X-5679 had struck Mr. Culbodeau's car while backed out from the curb. Later an automobile bearing licence plates X-5679 was found abandoned on Pinnacle Street. It was later identified as the property of Mr. W. A. Parker, 220 Charles Street, Mr. Parker was approached regarding the incident, however, he informed police that he had motored had been stolen earlier in the afternoon and he was about to report the complaint.

When found parked on Pinnacle Street, Parker's car showed signs damages and body scratches on the right rear side, police stated today. Further investigations are pending.

Artificial Fibre 2,500 Miles to Pound

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Science Editor)

Kansas City, April 14—A spring planting the United States from New York to San Francisco would unroll from a single one-pound ball of new rope good fiber developed by the American Chemical Society here.

With this artificial staff, a young man for the first time has control of cellulose down to fineness of diameter. The new fibre is about nine-tenths that of the cotton fibre and would unwind to a length of 2,500 miles a pound, compared with 1,000 miles a pound for rayons previously developed.

Dr. Ernest H. Benger, general assistant director of the chemical department of E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Company, said that these latest fibres are so fine that a square inch of them alone could be concealed in the palm of one hand.

This accomplishment, he explained, is one more step in the direction of making clothes better and less costly. The new fibres, he said, are due to improvements in machinery, in chemical solutions and in getting the important part of the cellulose products from which the artificial threads are made.

NEVER IN JAIL BEFORE, SAY BOYS

"There were 50 bicycles stolen in Belleville last year, of which we recovered 49," Chief Ellis informed the local police court this morning, when Vincent Redding, 17, and Ernest Lloyd, 20, both of Mountain View, appeared charged with the theft of Redding's bike, to which pleaded guilty as charged. Magistrate Wills remanded both for sentence until Friday.

"This practice of stealing bicycles must be curbed," prompted Crown Attorney H. J. Coleman K.C., after the pleas of guilty had been entered.

"Have you ever in jail before?" queried His Worship of the two.

"No, sir," replied Redding.

"Well, I'll remand you to the Central Prison until Friday," concluded His Worship.

Redding was charged with the theft of Gordon Day's bicycle, while Lloyd was accused of stealing a bicycle, the property of Stanley Wilson, Coleman Street. The two youths were arrested by Plainclothes Officer Fred Lund in possession of the bicycles in question on Sunday evening, only a few moments after the reports of the bicycle thefts had been registered.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, April 14—Prices of eggs to the retail trade were reduced one cent per dozen yesterday by the wholesale jobbing houses. The reductions followed a similar change in the case of fresh arrivals in the city. The butter market was quiet and inactive with a shade easier tendency. Potatoes and poultry were unchanged and quiet and cheese was unchanged at the Board of Trade as 967 cases of eggs, 196 boxes of butter and no cheese.

On the egg market graded shipments arriving in cartons of No1, No2 were 19 1-2c mainly for A-large, 19c for A-medium, 18c medium or B, and 17c for C or A-pullets.

The butter market was mainly 29 1-4c per lb. for No. 1 in cartons or 1-1 lots.

Livestock

Toronto, April 14—(CP)—Cattle opened steady on the Toronto livestock market today after an active opening session yesterday. The end section of the market was also steady while calves and lambs were strong. The cattle holdover was 600 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion livestock branch were: Cattle 1,000; calves 200; hogs, 1,500; sheep and lambs, 250.

The cattle continued fairly active at the opening with prices generally holding steady. A few choice weighty steers sold up to $6.25 while the best butcher cattle brought from $5.00 to $5.75. Choice heifers sold from $4.75 to $4.25. Butcher cows ranged from $3.75 to $4.00 with canners and cutters from $2.25 to $2.75 and bulls $3.50 to $4.00.

Calves were active selling from $8.50 to $9.50 for good to choice with common to medium grades ranging from $5.50 to $8.00.

Hogs continued unsettled during the early trading and could establish no prices. Yesterday's prices were down at $8.00 F. O. B., $8.25 off trucks and $8.75 off cars.

Lambs, carried over from Monday, sold at the highest figure for the year. A few lots of feed-lot lambs ranged from $10.00 to $10.25 while the bulk sold strong with good light grades bringing from $9.00 to $9.50 a cwt.

Do you need the extra dollars that slip away between pay-days? This simple arithmetic question will give you the answer. Add up the value of your insects - stocks, life insurance, etc. Divide the total by 200. The result is a high estimate of the monthly income your insects would bring your family, if you were not able to provide for them.

Invested in our new Continental Life insurance plan, those slippery dollars can make ample provision for your family, as well as provide an income for your own later years. Mail the coupon below, or our representative will gladly give you particulars.

BROKE TRIANGLE — Throwing patrons of a gay, crowded Chicago night club into a wild scramble, Mrs. Betty Martin, 32-year-old blonde, fired a fusillade of shots at her husband, Andrew, who, she said, was there with another woman. He died soon after in a Chicago hospital. "I wanted to fix him so he wouldn't treat other girls as he did me," Mrs. Martin sobbed in explaining the shooting which climaxed a whirlwind courtship and marriage that lasted just four months.

SEEDS

FOR CULTIVATING

DOLLARS

As you turn the pages of this newspaper, dozens of seeds are scattered over your mind.... That's a good-looking car .... I'd like to have that radio.... What a pretty dress.... I think I'll try a can of that soup. Some of these advertisements may not interest you at the moment. Others will fall on fertile ground, take root and bear fruit in some wise future purchase.

Speaking of seeds reminds us: Have you bought yours for the garden yet? It isn't too early to plant some of them now. How about the slip covers for the porch chairs? Then there's that new spring hat. And the special soap-sales for your spring cleaning. Look up these items in the advertisements before you buy.

Advertisements help you to weed out waste, both in your time and your money. They draw a straight line between your cash and the correct counter. Cultivate the habit of reading them regularly. They bring you a harvest of much useful information.

8 AMERK CLUBS GET STARTING GUN 154 GAMES AHEAD

One of Most Interesting Flag Chases in Years Looms

30,000 TO ATTEND

Army of High-Priced Talent Seen on Diamond

By EARL HILLIGAN

Associated Press Sports Writer

Chicago, April 14—(AP)—A dynamite-charged American League race gets the starting gun today.

Eight clubs get away on a grueling, 154-game stretch which looms as one of the most interesting flag chases in years. Packed with possibilities and questions to be answered, the 1936 junior circuit campaign may provide a big battle in which pennant hopes may be blasted sky high before the halfway post is reached.

Eighty thousand fans may attend the four openers if the weather is favorable.

Detroit clashes with the Indians at Cleveland, with Schoolboy Rowe the Tiger's pitching selection and Mel Harder on the mound for the Tribe. St. Louis, with Knoth or Andrews seeming then up, opposes the Wild's Sox in Chicago, with John Whitehead the Sox opening mound choice. Lefty Gomez goes for New York as the Yanks meet the Senators in Washington. His opposing opponent will be Buck Newsom. Al Benton Dietrich will be on the hill for Philadelphia against Wes Ferrell of the Red Sox.

The fans will see an array of high priced talent. Detroit, seeking a third straight flag, presents Al Simmons in centre-field. If the $75,000 outfielder hits, the Tigers may make the race a breeze.

The big question-mark centers on Tom Yawkey's cheque book payout the way for a pennant for his Red Sox. The club with the $300,000 payroll stacks up on paper as a potentially great outfit. Joe Cronin, Wes Ferrell and Lefty Grove may not repeat their 40-games per, performance of last season, and if they should fall down it isn't likely Boston will be a threaten.

The New York Yankees won't have Joe Di Maggio in their starting lineup because of an injury the $75,000 rookie suffered in spring training. If Joe comes through however, his play may be the spark that might send the Bombers to the top of the heap.

Cleveland's pitching looks great and the Tribe is very much in the race. Bucky Harris expects his Sens, as he calls into the first division and the White Sox and Browns are much improved over last year.

Alex Morrison says:

It's a hard thing for most golfers to realize that they are only a part of their regular distance at the start of the season. Evidence of this fact is plain enough on the course and practice ground.

Driving ranges afford the best check on distance. The sponsor of a New York driving range recently called to my attention the number of balls dropped short of the first marker. As a rule few balls stop short of the second marker, which is about 250 yards from the tee.

Players don't allow for the handicaps such as kinks in their muscles and the cold, heavy air which keeps the ball from travelling as far as it does in midsummer. Worse yet, they press to make up for the lack of distance and succeed only in getting less.

If you find that you are getting less than your regular length, don't worry. Accuracy comes first. Play with warmer weather and when your bags played enough to get the kinks out of your swing.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Today is the big day of baseball in this major league. The six sixteen clubs, that compose the two major baseball loops, face the season's campaign of bettering their 1935 accomplishments, that is all except the Detroit Tigers, who won the highest award in the American national pastime last year. Weather permitting attendance records are expected to be shattered before sundown today. As is his custom Grantland Rice, sport columnist of the New York Mirror, makes his annual prognostication as to how the American and National Leagues will finish and his reasons for picking them in the order he expects them to cross the wire in October. At any rate here's Dan's predictions as published in his column recently—

AMERICAN LEAGUE

1. Detroit—Still the best ball club in the game. Though they're world's champs, they haven't rested on their oars but have added considerable strength during the off-season. CHILDREN GUESTS OF ROTARY CLUB

Smart Program Carried Out By Young Folks as Joe Shortt Directs

Children's Day at Rotary comes once a year, on Easter Monday. On that day Belleville Rotarians bring the pride of their flock to the Hotel Quinte, entertain them and are entertained by them. Monday the dining room of the Hotel Quinte was filled to capacity with a gay throng of proud Daddies and excited juniors of both sexes. There was a special menu of roast turkey and fixin's, cranberry sauce, plum pudding and ice cream, and all that goes with a gala dinner. Then there were balloons and every balloon carried within it the name of a Rotarian who had a present for the one who carried the balloon. Pavers of chocolate bunnies and eggs and until fruits in various guises were distributed — it sure was a gay and gala occasion.

President Bert Boyce presided at the first part, then turned over the gavel to President-elect Joe Shortt who carried on with a smart program presented for the most part by the young folks. President Boyce welcomed all present in his customary affable manner and voiced the hope that all present would be privileged to meet again at a similar event in a year from now. Fellow Spalding introduced and welcomed the male visitors, and then Chairman Joe Shortt took charge and put the program over with a bang.

Rotarian "Bill" Morrison, Superintendent of the Ontario School for the Deaf, on the program for an address, presented instead Mary Edwards of Brantford and Glen Wilson of Kitchener, two of the pupils, who demonstrated the excellent results obtained by the school in recitations of nursery rhymes and hymns. Miss Kathleen Morrison also recited several poems of her own composition which revealed decided talent. Marion Walker, 8, pupil of Leona Biggs, gave a difficult piano solo in splendid style. Anne Hogle created amusement with a well told tale of an auction of bachelors who refused to pay the bond tax and were bought by old maids for souvenirs. A dancing number by Mary and George Forester was practised and cleverly presented, and Master Ronald Smith demonstrated excellent tabling ability with a guitar solo.

A decided hit was made by the "silesouri Mountaineers", four lads with plenty of musical and entertaining ability, a violin, a banjo and two guitars, accompanying their rollicking hilly-billy song, while Donald Cruse, vocal soloist, contributed an original and amusing song hit. "Do be sure you're right and then" "ravin' on go" and will be heard from in future. Bryan Kreuk, Walter Taylor, Donald Cruse, and Thomas Wilkinson, comprise the Missouri Mountaineers", and appear in costume.

A funny skit was presented by three Rotarians, Jack Guthridge, Peter McGuire, and Ross McNeil, with Joe Shortt directing. The sketch demonstrated how to cross railway crossings at any and all times with perfect safety.

Sandy Burrows and Leo Biggs had charge of the musical part of the program and put plenty of pep into the program.

RACE FOR PEACE IS LEAGUE AIM

Quick Conciliation is Sought Before Crushing Victory

(By Joseph K. Sharkey)
(Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press)

Geneva, April 14. — (AP) — The League of Nations, undertaking a race to conclude quick peace in Ethiopia before the Italian armies can effect a swift victory, opened negotiations on Tuesday for a settlement of the East African conflict.

The Spanish post-diplomat, Salvador de Madariaga, chairman of the League Council's Conciliation Committee of 13, took up the task of urging the belligerents to enter early direct parleys.

Baron Pompeo Aloisi, Italy's Geneva spokesman, leaving Rome today, was expected by League sources to bring a definite statement by Premier Mussolini of the terms on which he would make peace.

COME BACK OF EX-BOSS CALLES OF MEXICO ENDS ABRUPTLY—The fumbled wreckage of the locomotive, 12 coaches and car and two wooden passenger coaches, in which 46 persons were killed near Paso Del Macho, Mexico, when the train, crossing a bridge, was dynamited. These cars fell into the ravine 40 feet below. Responsibility for the bombing was placed on General Plutarco Calles, once "boss" of Mexico, by minor Mexican officials. Calles, a powerful political president, was banished to the United States, and is even above as he landed at Brownsville, Texas.

Marmora and District

Personals

Marmora — Good congregations attended the Easter services at St. Andrew's United Church and St. Paul's Anglican Church on Sunday. At St. Andrews' choice Easter blooms including lilies, tulips and narcissi decorated pulpit, choir and organ. Two anthems were rendered at each service with Herbert Heumann playing violin selections and accompaniments. Over a hundred partook of Communion at the morning service at which the pastor for Rev. C. W. Hollingsworth preached upon the significance of communion and also drew out Easter thoughts in using the text: "This do in remembrance of Me". In the evening the pastor delivered another impressive address based on the Centurion's Confession "Truly This Man was the Son of God."

At St. Paul's Anglican Church celebrations of Holy Communion were held at 8 a. m. and 11 a. m. and evensong at 7.30 p. m. Daffodils, Iris and tulips adorned the altar and the organ was decorated with lilies. The flowers, in memory of the late Mrs. F. S. Peters who died about a year ago was the gift of her sister and brother who resided in Montreal. The communicants numbered in excess of seventy. At the second celebration, fully robed, Maunders Sitting in F was used. The congregation assisted with the choir in the singing of familiar Easter hymns. Rural Dean A. L. Caldwell's appropriate Easter address was entitled "The Red Letter Dawn of Resurrection". During the offertory, Miss Barbara Wright played a beautiful violin solo "Christ's Resurrection" by A Von Ahn Carse. At Evensong, Mr. F. Gray rendered the hymn "Low in the Grave He Lay" and during the offertory, Miss Ruth Thorndyke of Millbrook sang "The Stranger of Galilee". The rector preached on the text upon which the immortal hymn "Abide With Me" is based. As the children's service at 10 a. m. the mite-boxes yielding twenty-two dollars were brought in. At Holy Trinity in the afternoon Holy Communion was celebrated. At the Sacred Heart Church High Mass was sung at 10 o'clock by Rev. Father J. J. Kealey. The altar was beautifully decorated with voley lights. Easter lilies, daffodils and tulips adorned the sanctuary and altar. The choir sang impressive excerpts from Leonards' Mass and the Choral Mass in E Flat, with solo parts by Miss Vera Shannon and Mr. Harold Auger. During the offertory the joyous Easter hymn "Regina Coeli" was sung by the choir. Evening devotions were held at 7.30 P. M.

Western Provinces Fear Spring Floods

Winnipeg, April 14.—Residents in scores of cities and towns in Manitoba and Saskatchewan guarded against floods this night as rising temperatures melted the Winter's accumulation of unusually heavy snowfall.

Brandon, 140 miles west of Winnipeg, appeared the most seriously menaced as waters of the Assiniboine River lapped the top of Brandon's dykes. Sandbagging crews in the low-lying north side evacuated their homes.

The late break-up of ice in the Assiniboine and Red Rivers at Winnipeg brought fears to river-bank dwellers and accelerated a rush began last week by part of scores of home owners to take out flood insurance.

Indian Lives in Open As Forefathers Did

Canton, N.Y., April 14 (AP)—Elton Parker, rawboned 32-year-old Seneca Indian, today told how he survived a week in the Adirondacks Sierra without a blanket or matches and with only the food he could forage. A hunting knife was his only weapon.

Parker emerged from the woods with photographic proofs of his ordeal. He had wagered $50 with John Kerr and William Keyes, Star Lake hotel proprietor, that he could live seven days in the woods under the same conditions met by his forefathers.

FOG TIES UP TRAFFIC

Erie, Pa., April 14 (AP)—Ice and fog stopped traffic in Lake Erie today, observers reported as ice field extended many miles east and west of Erie Harbor.

ARABIAN EMPIRE BEING REALIZED

Dream of United States of Arabia to Include Self-Government

Paris, April 14 (AP)—A proposal for a United States of Arabia, Nationalist sources said today, is being promoted by Britain.

The dream of an Arabian empire, composed of most of the kingdoms, mandated territories and protectorates forming the Arabian Peninsula, was believed by many Nationalists to be moving rapidly toward fulfillment.

The Paris newspaper Le Journal, asking what was behind the movement for Arab unity, said:

"The idea comes naturally that England, after taking advantage of division of Arab unity, decrees it opportune to unite them at a time when Italy has shown itself stronger than London believed.

The plan of England, unlawful, as expressed by Nationalists, was one of a loose confederation, virtually free from European domination, and with the exception of their own rules and governments.

Favorable signs were seen in recent events—particularly those of greater unity among the Arabs, meeting of friction between Moslems and Christians, and a disposition on the part of European powers to withdraw to some extent from the levant.

The United States of Arabia would have a population of 23,000,000 and an area of more than 1,000,000 square miles, including all of Asia Minor's peninsula across the Red Sea from Egypt, and the seats of Italy's campaign on conquest.

The Empire envisioned by Arab nationalists would include Syria, the Lebanon Republics, the Arabian Sandjak Hejaz (Kingdom of Hejaz and Nejd), the Kingdom of Iraq, the Iranian Province of Kuwait, the Sultanate of Kuwait, the Sultanate of Oman and possibly Transjordan, mandated by Britain, and Aden, British protectorate.

Obituary

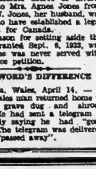
LATE MRS. F. W. GODDARD

There passed away in Bowmanville, Ont., Lena Edith Smith, beloved wife of Frederick W. Goddard, daughter of the late John J. A. Falle and Mrs. Falle of Belleville, Ontario. The deceased was a resident of Bowmanville for the last twenty-four years, where she was highly respected.

She was an active member of the Women's Association and the Women's Missionary Society of Trinity United Church, a Past Matron-Matron of the Durham Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star and Past Matron of Lodge No. 441 of Bowmanville General Hospital.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Armstrong of Trinity United Church at her late home in Bowmanville on Thursday afternoon, April 9th.

The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful. Interment was made in Bowmanville Cemetery.



DIVORCE PRECEDENT SET

Winnipeg, April 14—The setting aside by Mr. Justice J. D. Montagues of the Court of King's Bench here of an absolute decree of divorce granted Mrs. Agnes Jones from Thomas J. Jones, her husband, was believed to have established a legal precedent for Canada.

The reason for setting aside the decree, granted Sept. 5, 1933, was that citation was not served with due process.

BLOOMFIELD BOYS MEET MISHAP

Cutz And Burns Suffered on Way to Scene of Car Tragedy

PICTON, April 14.—(Special)—Tragedy seemed to follow motoring in Prince Edward Co., on Good Friday. Four Bloomfield youths started late in the afternoon in a Chevrolet coupe to visit the scene of the morning's tragedy, where Miss Marion Stinson, was killed when she failed to make a doogive turn, near Christ Church, Hillier. The boys were Messrs. Kelley, East, Cahoon and Horsbeck. When they struck the railroad crossing at Hallowell station, at six o'clock, their car telescoped, Cahoon sustained a head cut, a broken bone in his hand, and so said burn on his leg. Horsbeck had two ribs broken, and suffered from slight concussion. They were removed to their homes where a doctor attended to their injuries. The other two lads suffered from bruises and shock.

Mr. Clarence King, manager of the Collegiate hockey team, winners of Picton and District Hockey League, was completely taken by surprise on Wednesday evening, when the boys of the team presented him with a fishing rod, reel and line, at a banquet held at the Royal Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Purtelle of Croyden, Ont., were taken up residents in Picton, where Mr. Purtelle is employed by the Picton Furniture.

Mr. Arthur Goodwin and Miss Grace Goodwin motored to Toronto on Thursday and spent Easter with Mr. and Mrs. Howard Goodwin.

On Thursday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Clair Newman entertained at a dance in honour of Mr. Newman's friend Fred S. Newman. About one hundred members of the younger set enjoyed dancing in the spacious old Newman home on King Street. Music was beautifully dispensed with shaded lights, flowers and streamers. At midnight a delicious supper was served in Mr. and Mrs. Clair Newman's spacious dining room, and dancing was resumed. A very happy evening was enjoyed by the young people.

Mr. Ira Shaw of Picton was an Easter visitor in town, where he called on many old friends.

Friends are glad to know that Hilliard W. Gaskin who has been so seriously ill is somewhat improved.

Mrs. Fred Shannon, who underwent a major operation at the local hospital last week continues satisfactorily.

Mr. Jim Haight of Toronto spent the week end with his wife and two sons, Mr. and Mrs. Greg. Haight, Wellington.

PRODUCERS PLAN EMPIRE MEETING

Would Discuss Trade Agreements And Proposed Levy

Peterborough, Ont., April 14 (CP) —An Empire Conference of producers in Canada, Britain and Dominions is planned by the recently formed Canadian Chamber of Agriculture, Dr. Hugh Cleland, secretary, said here today. It would be held in Canada or Great Britain, probably before the next Imperial Conference.

Australian farmers have notified the Canadian chamber they will be represented, Dr. Cleland said. Delegates would discuss the proposal of Lord Bledisloe, president of the Council of Great Britain for a further levy on foreign farm products with the Dominion being given a preference.

Such a levy would be used to create a fund for shippers, fruit growers and other producers in Canada benefit, Dr. Cleland said. The United Kingdom government had intimated its intention of adopting the National Farmers' Union suggestion, he added.

A conference of Canadian producers is also proposed by the Chamber if the Supreme Court of Canada renders a decision unfavorable to the Natural Products Marketing Act, under which some 21 schemes are now operating in the Dominion. The conference would draw up a marketing policy to be submitted to the Canadian government.

SKULL IS FRACTURED

Guelph, Ont., April 13.—(CP)—Allegedly involved in a street fight in the west end of the city, Basil S. Moran was in hospital today with a fractured skull, his condition said to be critical. Police refused to discuss the case, beyond the statement that Moran was in a fight.

Montreal, April 14 (CP)— Dr. Elsie Roy Dafoe of Callander, Ont., physician to the Dionne quintuplets, will be tendered a civic reception on his arrival here today. He will address the annual meeting of the Province of Quebec Society for original studies in Child Welfare. Members of the Montreal Association have invited Dr. Dafoe to another guest at a dinner in his honor.

"GLITTERING GIRL"

By MAY CHRISTIE

Vernon thanked her. She fell silent. What a queer, gullible place New York was, when people of such background and history as the Melchiorris were accepted so easily!

x x x

Eleven o'clock that night found Vernon safely back in the apartment in the Hotel Splendide. Her father welcomed her warmly, but her mother was peevish over her mysterious absence.

"It's unnatural, the way you treat me!" Sadie's small eyes roamed restlessly and inquisitively from her husband to her daughter. "There's a compact between the two of you to keep me in the dark! Neither of you trusts me with your secrets."

It was the long, tired sigh of Sadie Tyson that could not be refused upon—she would talk her head off on this private matter to anybody that would listen to her!

"Mother, dear, you'll know everything shortly now. Dad has told you all he can. I've definitely got on the track of the necklace."

Sadie looked up, head. "Then why, might I ask, haven't you taken Prince Karinoff into your confidence? He has been very nice and gentlemanly as could be, and kindness is my pet. Why, you silly girl, don't you realize the man's in love with you, and wants to marry you? Isn't his title anything to you at all?"

Vernon longed to shout back at her: "Nothing in the world! The man's a fraud—a thief—a blackmailer!"

Discretion restrained her. Everything would be made known to her mother soon, and poor Sadie would be thankful never again to hear the name of Karinoff.

"I'm tired, Mother. I'm going to bed. Please don't ask me any more questions tonight, either of you."

But Vernon slept badly, despite her long drive in the open. For Terry Shannon apparently had not even tried to communicate with her during her absence....

x x x

Morning brought a telegram from Hot Springs from kindly Princess Frankie. "HOW HAVE BEEN WORRIED ABOUT YOU SO HAVE PENELOPE AND NAOMI TO LUNCH HERE ONE DAY SOONER AND WE SHALL ARRIVE AT FOUR O'CLOCK TODAY FRIDAY AT THE HOTEL PETERBANO."

Mrs. Tyson was still peevish. She lingered up a little after breakfast and when a box of beautiful red roses arrived from Prince Karinoff, addressed not to her tiresome, spoiled daughter, but—to herself!

"There's someone around here who appreciates me, anyway!" She ordered two large vases from the housekeeper's office, and made a great fuss of arranging the flowers.

"I've asked the Prince to drop in for tea at five today, so maybe you'll have enough respect for your mother's wishes this time, and be here then!" she snapped at Vernon as the latter was getting ready to go out on another mysterious mission.

Vernon quickly agreed.

How astonished poor Sadie would have been were she to follow her daughter down to the lobby of the Splendide and overhear her telephone message to the private detective!

"I want you to be here shortly before five, this afternoon, McGraw, and stay downstairs near the lower entrance. You have that photostatic copy of the passport that I gave you? You'll recognize him by the picture. Give him about five minutes to get upstairs, then follow, and wait outside the door of apartment 37C. If he attempts to leave before I let you know, stop him, remember!"

From there, Vernon emerged on Park Avenue into bright sunshine. A doorman handed her into a taxi. She directed the driver to take her to the Customs House down on the Battery.

"Will you kindly show me in what department the Inspector of Customs can be found?" she asked of an official when she had reached her destination.

After, several waits, she found herself in a room with three desks in it, in a row, at one of them she addressed herself.

"This is a confidential matter, If you will look up your records you will be able to see whether or not, on the third of October of 1929, a valuable diamond necklace from Europe was 'declared' by its owners on entering the Port of New York."

"Huh? What name?"

"Melchiorri."

After some questioning, the official went off to another section of the building. He returned after a short interval.

"Step this way, please."

With beating pulses, Vernon complied. This was a crucial moment in her investigation. What would it bring forth?

After considerable searching in heavy ledgers, she was definitely informed that no diamond necklace had been "declared" on that date, Nor had any party called Melchiorri —or Karinoff—brought any taxable jewelry at any time into the Port of New York!

After her exciting and successful mission to the Customs House, Vernon did not immediately return home. She knew that her mother's pinkish eyes would read all kinds of meaning into her excitement. And until the appointed hour of five this afternoon, she did not want Sadie to know anything of her "cerebral discovery....

In the crisp November air, she walked swiftly, chin up and head high, along by the waters of the Battery. Great ships rode at anchor in the sunshine. Here were life and movement.

How glorious to be aboard a big liner, on a wonderful honeymoon—headed for Europe!

How glorious to go right round this globe with one you loved—to see glowing tropical countries and new customs and peoples!

With Terry Shannon at her side —forgetting everything about that lying Prince Karinoff, whom, she realized—

(CHAPTER XXIX.

If her mother only had been different—had more discretion—more reticence—Vernon would have told her everything this morning. Her conscience really had given her twinges when Sadie had again brandished the Prince's title in her face! It seemed wrong to permit her mother to dwell in idle dreams about this world-be hignank. How utterly anchored she would be were she heard the truth!

But her mother would have one comfort, anyway, that the scandal would not break. That it would not be permitted to leak out to the newspapers.—What other people thought self said was of paramount importance to Sadie Tyson. It always had been so. And, for back on Vernon could remember.

Well, one couldn't change people. One must make the best of them. Utterly different in character and outlook from her mother, Vernon was yet much attached to Sadie.

Hungry-looking men down by the waterside begged money for food from her. She h[illegible] something to each one.

Life was so sad for some, she reflected. So ray for others. Not that the people on Park Avenue didn't do enough for charity—almost every ball and big entertainment had the unemployed as its beneficiaries.

Yet the frivolity of so many people's lives, their self-exception in a so-called good time, their purposeless ways, struck Vernon now forcibly. In the daily whirl of Park Avenue, with its continuous luncheons, cocktail parties, bridges, dinners, theatres and dances, one hadn't time to think. A kind of drugging sapped one.

Vernon's warm and kindly heart went out to the ragged, hungry men and women.

She surprised more than one of them by slipping into their hands a few dollar bills. Presently she found a little crowd about her, and—shy and rather alarmed—hailed a taxicab and drove off uptown.

"To Central Park." Once there, she told the driver to go slowly, up towards the reservoir. She was in no hurry, it was noon. She leaned back in the cab, and idly watched the men and women riding horseback on the bridle path.

Man rode here quite frequently. Perhaps she might get a glimpse of her! She decided to dismiss the taxi, and stroll in the bright November sunshine, and think out the best way of getting in touch with Terry.....

It was a few minutes later that she saw him—tallness—virile and handsome on a big dappled gelding. He was talking and laughing as he rode beside a trim little figure in a natty gray riding habit, seated sidesaddle on a chestnut colt.....and with a pang at her heart, Vernon thought that her cousin, Nan Rankington, never looked prettier nor more appealing....!

So he had been with Nan, these days? He was falling for Nan's bright charm, her gaiety, her ready wit.....? His previous attitude of amused tolerance had gone, and this had taken its place.....?

It was as though a cold weight pressed against her chest as she stood, wide-eyed, at the couple.

A wave of her hand—a cry—and they would see her—

But she felt numb and mute. She could not bring herself to signal to them.

The end of the bridle path was here, and they must turn. She would hurry away among the trees —not interrupt them.

But something galvanized her to the spot. It was as though her feet had no power in them.

Nan was the first to see her, standing there. Oh! Certainly Nan saw. But she wheeled her colt quickly around! Her true eyes were back absorbedly in Terry's face. She gave her colt the rein that she had seen her cousin.

Scarlet flooded Vernon's cheeks. Nan wanted Terry all to herself. She resented Vernon's intrusion.

A queer little stifled call escaped her lips, drawn from her heart like wonderful blood from a wound. Though Terry could not possibly have heard it, or how it was, he suddenly looked round in her direction, as though telepathy had passed between them.

"Why, hello there!" he called out. But the expression on his face had changed, she noticed. The gaiety had instantly slipped from it, and in its place was, as they looked at her, was a cool, quizzical expression.

Prince Karinoff? That night spent at the Prince's flat? What had Nan said or insinuated? It flashed through Vernon's mind that Nan was none too scrupulous—that she would stop at nothing to "win in love and war!" Nan would walk over the heart of her best friend to get what she wanted—and she knew it!

"Oh, it's you, is it?" Nan said coolly now, the compelling smile fading from her pretty face as she raised her plucked and darkened brows in expression that was scarcely welcoming. "Imagine you out here all by yourself! Where's Prince Karinoff? I thought he would be out on his sight for a moment—that you and he were inseparable."

Vernon found her voice. This was a deliberate barb. She took up the challenge.

"You thought nothing of the sort. You know he's settling in the world to me." She turned to Terry, coaxingly—an airy smile: "You know Nan's a great adept at exaggerating."

Nan's eyes flashed. "Oh, you can't fool us, can she, Terry? The Prince is with you all the time. Why, you were out with him all night after the [illegible]!"

"Says the pot to the kettle!" mocked Vernon. "My dear little cousin, you were in no condition to remember or even know what any of us did that night. Isn't that so, Terry?"

He looked uneasy, as men always will in the midst of a feminine battle. He thought it scarcely in keeping with Vernon's apparently sweet nature, that she should now refer to Nan's regrettable condition following the Pageant. It was hardly sporting of her.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

"Dorothy's Quest" and "Dancing Feet."

The gay musical romance of a young radio dance instructor and a wealthy society girl masquerading as a hostess in a cheap dance hall provide the basis for a tuneful and hilarious musical comedy which opens at the Capitol tomorrow.

The picture is "Dancing Feet," a Republic production adapted from the novel by Bob Sloan. Featured in the cast are Ben Lyon, Joan Marsh, Eddie Nugent and Isabel Jewell.

The young debutante is pretty Miss Marsh, and the story recounts her adventures after she quarrels with her grandfather, leaves home and secures a position as hostess in the Dreamland dance hall. There she meets Eddie Regent, a wise-cracking young man with an ambition to become a radio dance instructor.

Complications ensue when she is discovered by her irate grandparent and her erstwhile fiance, played by Ben Lyon, and the Wellington Phillips mansion is a colorful radio tap dancing sequence, featuring a number by Eddie Nugent and Isabel Jewell.

On the same bill "Timothy's Quest" —

"Timothy's Quest", the new Paramount picture at the Capitol theatre, brings to the screen the popular story of a waif's search for love. Young Dickie Moore portrays the title role.

The film re-creates all the "colzy" people of Pleasant Valley from Miss Wiggs, Miss Bishop and Jabe Doolittle, to the villainous Doc Gudd and the impish Seamathe.

Eleanore Whitney and Tom Keene interpret the young lovers in the little New Hampshire village for whom "the course of true love never runs smooth," until Timothy comes to their aid.

In addition to Dickie Moore, the child players are Virginia Weidler, Sally March and Bennie Bartlett.

Ends today that hilarious comedy "Don't Get Personal" with James Dunn and Sally Eilers.

AT THE BELLE

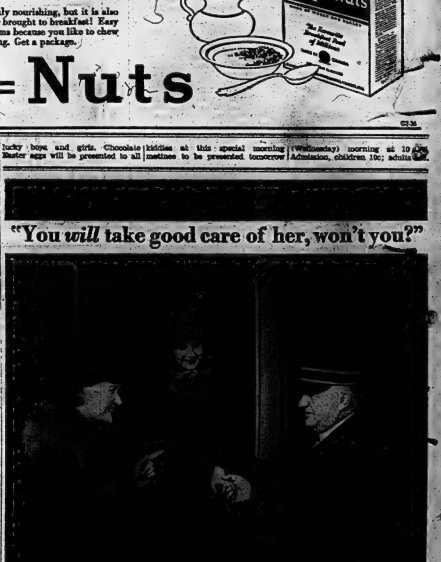
Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers Scoring in Fifth Big Romantic Musical

"The Navy's on, shore leave" means merrymaking and romance in any harbor city, but it herald's pandemonium in the port of San Francisco. And the unrestrained excitement brought by the tidal wave of blue to the Bay City has now been translated into song, dance, comedy and tangled love by Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers with the help of Irving Berlin in "Follow the Fleet", now in its third day of a sensational four days' engagement at the Belle Theatre.

The singing stars seem before the dreadnaughts hit the Golden Gate, with Astaire serving up Irving Berlin's "We Saw the Sea" aboard a battleship steaming toward adventure and love ashore.

Romance and comedy swing into the theme when Astaire meets Ginger Rogers in a "dime dance" sailor's rendezvous and when Harriet Hilliard, radio star and sensational new screen discovery, in the role of Ginger's repressed schoolteacher sister, loses her heart to Randolph Scott, a "dozen girls in every port," pal of Astaire's.

The wedding gifts rise to two entertainment high spots and lead inevitably to both glad situations that are spiced by seven tunes by Berlin, who has done the entire musical score. Astaire and Rogers do their first of three team dances in the strains of "Let Yourself Go." Miss Hilliard, a beautiful newcomer, warms a lesson on feminine wiles to Ginger and goes after Scott in a romantic campaign that makes use of the beauty and love song which made her a star of New York and London hands and national radio programs. Her screen debut song is "Get Thee Behind Me, Satan," her second, "Then Am I, But Where Are You?"



Mark Sandrich, who guided Astaire and Rogers in "The Gay Divorcee" and "Top Hat" had again directed them in "Follow the Fleet", a musical gem of marvellous melody, romance and mad dancing to be repeated again tonight and Wednesday, matinee and evening. It is heartily recommended!

Kiddies' Show Tomorrow

Tomorrow morning at 10 a.m. a special Easter Holidays Kiddies' Show will be presented at the Belle Theatre, consisting of Black Jones in a splendid western feature story, "The Fighting Ranger," a funny "Our Gang" comedy, entitled "Forbidden Babies", and the year's three best cartoons.

Twelve cute, cunning, real live bunnies will be presented free to lucky boys and girls. Chocolate kiddies at this special morning (Wednesday) morning at 10 a.m. Easter eggs will be presented to all matinee to be presented tomorrow (Admission, children 10c; adults 25c).

"You will take good care of her, won't you?"

IT'S Joan's first trip alone. Mother just couldn't refuse Auntie Maud's lovely invitation . . . but she can't help worrying, either.

Thoughtful Auntie knows the answer; as soon as Joan arrives, a Long Distance call will banish Mother's fears. Long Distance is an ever-ready comfort. It's easy to use, speedy, and the cost is surprisingly small.

'Quints' Born to Gypsy On Farm in Rumania, 2 are Boys, 3 are Girls

Mother Had Just Reached Field At The Time

REPORT UNVERIFIED

Dr. Dafoe of Canadian 'Quints' Fame Hears Rumanian News

Bucharest, Rumania, April 15 (AP)—Officially unverified reports that quintuplets had been born to a gypsy on a farm near Rodna, in the Rhine district of Transylvania, were received here today.

A newspaper reporter vouched for the circumstances.

He said the children—two boys and three girls—were born to Mrs. Maria Lingurara, 36, shortly after she had gone to work in the fields.

There was no doctor available and the woman's husband, Alexander Lingurara, assisted in the delivery.

The mother was said to be recovering well.

Dr. Dafoe Is Pleased

Montreal, April 15 (CP)—News of the reported birth in Rumania of quintuplets set off quintuplet talk received today by Dr. A. R. Dafoe with "the greatest interest."

The North Country physician who was attended the famed Dionne quintuplets since their birth almost two years ago, said he wished the babies of a 35-year-old mother "the best of luck," and expressed the hope they would live up to the life long healthy grip we have at Callander."

"Well, now," he said, as he absorbed his flattered listeners into his head, "isn't that nice. But the report is so incomplete that we will have more details about them. However, I'll be watching for further reports. I hope they are given good care and that they survive."

Dr. Dafoe added:

"It's a most unusual thing, you know; happens only once in about 60,000,000 births. So you can see how unusual and how exciting it is for everyone to learn about such cases."

He declined to comment on the new quintuplets' chance for survival.

"Just say," he shouted as a companion fed him off to board the crowded train, "that I received the news with the greatest interest, and that I wish them all the luck in the world."

BROTHERS MEET FOR FIRST TIME

Members of Family Had Been Adopted From C. A. Society

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., April 15.—(CP)—Two brothers, one 34 and the other 36 years old, met for the first time at this city recently. Each had come to look for each other and took steps to locate other members of the family they have never seen.

Italian airmen, who have carefully observed all regions between Addis Abeba and the Italian northern front during the last few days, informed Marshal Badoglio no Ethiopian detachments were sighted, dispatches said.

DAFOE FORESEES LOW MORTALITY

Observation of Dionne 'Quints' Will Prove Valuable

Montreal, April 15 (CP)—Dr. A. R. Dafoe, the chubby little physician who brought the Dionne quintuplets at the mere mention of quintuplets, felt today for Quebec City after cancelling a visit there to the Canadian Crippled Children's Association.

"What good will it be now about the Dionne sisters whose lives he saved that we should learn? Others were premature infants to their present day lives — as 22-month-old girls," he said in the full bathos of his self-importance and receive all their instructions in Montreal.

From their treatment and care it will be possible to obtain valuable aid in reducing Canada's infant mortality rate, the doctor told more than 1,000 delegates attending the annual meeting of the Crippled Children's Association.

Statistics showed in 1932 that "one of every five full term babies do not survive their first year of life" said the doctor. And it was during this year that the Dionne quintuplets were gained from treatment of the Dionne children might prove valuable aid in reducing the mortality rate

The doctor acknowledged him as a famed physician, Dr. Dafoe whisperered to a reporter leaning over his shoulder that he had not yet talked told of the dancing reports of the Dionne quintuplets.

"Perhaps," he admitted, "you heard about the fall Dr. Dafoe got, but that's what we call in surgery use it for a form of exercise."

To Join Staff of Nurses

Dr. Dafoe, father of three old fashioned, French-Canadian dame was nominated by Nurse Leila Bailey of children line up and start keeping day-care. But it soon develops into jumping, kicking and "rough house" up with their usual tumbles. But the nurses are there to supervise and be promising dancers."

"There will be many problems which must be met in future regarding the education and the further care of these children," the doctor warned. "But these problems will have to be met as they arise with the best of my ability and with the help of God."

There was one thing certain, Dafoe said, friends of the quintuplets would never be guilty of any form of experimentation. But from observers, Dafoe said, the experiment would be a wealth of opportunity to study the building blocks from which the physiological development of a group of identical quintuplets."

HELEN TWELVETREES WINS HER DIVORCE

Los Angeles, April 15.—(CP)— A quick decree of divorce was granted today for Helen Twelvetrees, blonde movie actress, from Jack Woody, business man. The film player's testimony that he abused her with unseemly familiarities was corroborated by stother actress, Ena Gregory, Woody's secretary, and others.

Miss Twelvetrees and Woody were married March 25, 1931, at Rio Vista, Mar. Calif., she said. They separated last January 31.

Custody of Jack, their three-year-old son, was given Miss Twelvetrees.

Fred Lumb, Curler, Sets Club Record

Kingston, Ont., April 15.—(CP)— Unique victory was set up this season by Fred Lumb, veteran member of the Kingston Curling Club, when he skipped his rink to the club championship.

It was the third time, that skip Lumb had led a rink to the club championship and the fourth time, that he figured on a championship rink in the history of the club no other player has ever been four championship rinks.

Time and time during the past season, were presented last night.

TWO FUR BUYERS HIT OVER HEADS WITH REVOLVERS

Brutally Beaten And Robbed on Side Road

CAR FORCED TO DITCH

P. Goldberg and Norman Greenspoon of Toronto Victims

Toronto, April 15. —(CP)—Two Toronto fur buyers, Norman Greenspoon and P. Goldberg, were slugged over the heads with a revolver forced to drive up a side road, brutally beaten, and robbed of $250 early today after an automobile forced their machine into a ditch on the highway east of Toronto. Goldberg's injuries necessitated his removal to hospital.

From his hospital cot, Goldberg told he and Greenspoon were nearing Scarboro Bluffs when another car forced them to the side of the road. A man from the other car and struck Goldberg on the head with a revolver. The other then jumped into his car and ordered the other man to follow. When they were near Lake Ontario on a side road they were ordered out.

Two men then got out of the machine and struck Goldberg again. He then hurry to get away from the thugs' car and as he did so they ordered their victims to lay down. They obeyed, but finding attempts the thugs entered the fur dealers' car and, at the point of a gun, forced their victims to drive to Toronto. The pair fled after stopping from the machine in the northern section of the city.

Goldberg's car, a 1930 Ford, is a yel pocket which the thugs overlooked. Police believe the car used by the bandits is stolen.

ELEMENTARY SCHOOLS' PLACE IS PRAISED

Toronto, April 15 (CP)—John C. Sittinger of Kingston today told the Ontario Educational Association of the joint efforts of teachers, trustees and parents in promoting the welfare of children in the elementary schools.

Since life "has become one grand and glorious mix-up" he said schools as much as in former years, he said. Parents made great contributions to school welfare through home and school club activities.

SNOW BLOCKS STREET BUT IS FECHTING WAY

Waterloo, Ont., April 15 (CP)— Snow blocked a street here yesterday when a full foot fell on the heavy snowdrift. A tree was felled, but before further work could be done a heavy fall followed and rain made working conditions unpleasant. Traffic was at a standstill across the street until the downpour stopped.

Sinking in West Lake Marsh Boy Rescued after Half Hour

Harry Marshall'Up to Shoulders When He Is Saved by Young Men

Harry Marshall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Marshall of Bloomfield was rescued from the depths of a marsh by two local young men. Leo McQuaid and Roy Woody were playing at some distance, and heard his cries for help. Marshall was also submerged to the shoulders in the icy water and his struggles to extricate himself were resulting in his getting in deeper. He had been in the water for half an hour before the young men succeeded in getting him out and would not have been able to stand in a short time. At the hours of his aunt, Mrs. Ernest Wannamaker, where he is visiting, he was put to bed, with hot water bottles and blankets. Dr. Ketcheson on Monday was apparently no worse for his harrowing experience.

"I had been out near the edge of the lake, after dinner with a couple of fellows, and took a look around in the marsh to see if there were any duck eggs around," Harry Marshall told interviewers, after he had been pulled from the water. "I got stuck in the mud and then I sank. I seemed to sink right down into the water. I had been carrying down into the ground to help me out, but it appeared as if it was sinking out of sight, too. There didn't seem to be any bottom. I was up to my chin and I thought I was done for. Finally I managed to pull and hunch myself up until I got a purchase on the mud spot, but I was sinking all the time. I shouted but no one answered. Then I got kind of scared; I thought I was done for.

"Finally, after I had become nearly worn out from shouting and struggling I saw two men coming. I shout and then Leo McQuaid and Roy Woody came along. I think I was never happier to see anyone in my whole life before."

Briefly Leo McQuaid, one of the rescuers, and son of Bloomfield's popular teacher at Greenbush school, told of his part in the rescue.

"We were lucky we have heard him at all, as he was not where near there. Hook and I had been walking along and heard his faint cry, so we determined to investigate. It is very possible that Harry would have sunk out of sight very soon. He would have disappeared from view if he had tried to speak and went out to help him. He was pretty well exhausted when we found him out."

H.B. Fetterly Opposes Homework to Children

Toronto, April 15.—The Urban Trustees section of the O.S.A. went on record yesterday, as opposed to the amount of home work given children in high and public schools. The trustees claimed it was excessive, and recommended both teachers and boards to consider the question.

Some objection was raised to the motion, one trustee declaring: "You're not going to be carried to heaven on flowery beds of ease," but H. B. Fetterly, M.A., Belleville, said: "Teachers are to blame for too much homework. I've taken boys from 43 years' experience. If the boy can't do his work in the time allowed the pupil requires very little homework. In my experience I've found that the brighter pupils did it all in school."

Principal Dwight of Smith's Falls said his board had found pupils in the high school grades had a great deal of homework was done by parents, he declared. Many parents gave homework as penalties.

"I know of one teacher who gave 81 pages of footlightness for homework as a penalty," he said. In Smith's Falls, the board had ruled that homework on Friday should be public schools, and made it non-compulsory for high schools, he said.

Reported Quints Born To Rumanian Mother

Bucharest, Rumania, April 15 — (AP)—Reports of a birth of quintuplets, three girls and two girls to a gypsy, Maria Lingurara, 25 years old, living in the village of Hodos in the Bihor district were unverified.

The five children were described as living but being small and weakly, although extremely small and with abnormal features.

Superstitious gypsies became excited at the birth, the reports said, and would not look the mother and her babies to Orades, the nearest large centre.

REGISTERED NURSES HOLD CONVENTION

Peterborough, Ont., April 15—(CP)—The annual convention of the Registered Nurses Association, Ontario Division, opened here this afternoon with an invocation by the Rev. Dr. A. T. AWARD CONTRACT FOR STEEL BRIDGE TOW.H.PATTERSON

Contract Price as Given to Council Is $1,800

LENGTHY SESSION

New Truck is Purchased For The Waterworks Department

A substantial steel bridge will replace the footbridge over the Moira River, swept away by the recent flood, the council decided at their regular meeting held on Tuesday night in the Council Chamber when W. Patterson, contractor of this city, was awarded the tender at a price of $1,800. The recommendation was passed without discussion. Alderman Safe being the only one to offer comment. The whole matter being thoroughly discussed in committee, Alderman Safe stated, that he did not wish to delay the construction of the bridge and therefore would not bring forward any objection. "I think Mr. Patterson and the local councillor deserved consideration for any contract to be given and also for giving tenders immediately and that the lowest and second highest tenders should be accepted." It is understood no figures excepting the accepted tender were given in council, there was a tender for the steel bridge by a Hamilton firm for the $600.00 under the amount, which the council will pay for the new bridge.

John Manna, spokesman for the delegation from the Italian district asked the council to give them more protection against the dangers of motor traffic. A petition had been received earlier from the district, but Mayor Thomas "is not in favor of it not to increase profits but to give protection" said Mr. Manna. "There is a hundred loads of wood brought into the city in which the children do not pay any revenue to the city.

Alderman Safe, "Is there any limit to the wood dealer?"

Mr. Hanna, "No there is not but we would be willing to pay a license if some protection was given."

Alderman Cushing, "How can we stop them coming in?"

Mr. Hanna: "That is for the police to deal with. I send my wood by motor truck and I am making the suggestion. A transient trade, no license, some law or other should be employed to make the competition more fair." The delegation then stated that the question would be looked into at once.

CUSTODY CONTEST GROWING WARMER

Mother of Child Actor Threatens Suit if Boy Not Produced

Los Angeles, April 15 (AP)—A custody contest over Freddie Bartholomew's services as movie screen actor assumed warmer aspects today when the actor's mother threatening suit to force him out of retirement.

Grandparents of the $1,000-a-week child actor, retained in a reported $75,000 settlement of their son-in-law's custody contest, declined to discuss the case as his mother and grandfather left for New York from Hollywood.

After arriving in New York from England yesterday with Freddie and his father, Lillian May Bartholomew, the mother, Mrs. Marion Bartholomew Barthelmess launched a train for Hollywood, saying merely they were going to "holiday" and hoped to see their grandson.

Rebuffed in their first attempt to negotiate a meeting between the boy and his mother, her attorney, Leon Lewis, said Mrs. Barthelmess did not wish to appear in the light of seeking publicity, but unless the boy is produced, we will go to court."

Mayberry Gardner, Mrs. Barthelmess' father, turned away from Freddie's dad's Beverly Hills home by servants and said he would not see the boy until he returned to Hollywood.

Hopes Revive for 3 Men Entombed in Moose Mine Equipment Approaching

J. P. Bickel of McIntyre Mine Offers To Send Experts

NO MORE SMOKE

Miners Ready to Take Change in Rescue Efforts

Moose River, N.S., April 15 (CP)—Provincial Mines Inspector, J. P. Mawerney, directing rescue efforts tempting to rescue three Toronto men entombed by a mine cave-in, announced today he had accepted an offer from President J. P. Bickel of the McIntyre Gold Mines to fly experienced Ontario rock miners to Moose River.

"We haven't enough experienced miners in the area as we would like in the Meagher shaft," Mr. Mawerney said. "I accepted Mr. Bickel's offer this morning."

The Ontario Mines President wired the offer last night from Toronto, stating he had a number of men available for emergencies and would undertake to fly them to Nova Scotia in planes he had at his disposal.

Men If Alive Near Hope.

It was hoped that plans would take off from Toronto almost immediately and that experienced Ontario miners would be at the scene of the cave-in before nightfall.

Meanwhile blasting operations at the vertical shaft proceeded. Tons of rock were shot skyward and far afield from the mine. D. R. Robertson, H. B. Magill and Alfred Goodridge, all allied, would bear their respective companies in the walls of solid rock.

In this new shaft rescuers have penetrated 25 feet, but they have more than 200 feet to penetrate before they reach the entombed men.

Heavy Machinery Arrives.

Hopes renewed by the approach of heavy machinery, miners and volunteers backed their way from the mine shaft today, seeking to rescue three Toronto men trapped 60 hours 150 feet below the surface of an abandoned gold mine.

Three carloads of mining equipment including a 35-horsepower engine capable of lifting two tons of rock at one sweep, was being hauled over boggy rural roads and it would be afternoon at least before the engine could be put into operation, officials said. Transport of the equipment, sent by Ontario gold mining companies, was delayed by a washout on the highway and by twenty miles of sunken roads from the railway line.

Rescue Crew Takes Two Days.

Whether the equipment was too late, none could say. There was nothing to indicate the men still alive. Rescue crews had to rest a sudden cave-in Sunday. But there was nothing definite to indicate the men had escaped beneath the tons of loose rock and debris that choked the only passage and prevented communicating hoist.

Officials could say definitely how long it would take to penetrate to the level where the entombed men were. A shorter from the rain/of rock as it broke without warning. Rescue crews had been working at a new shaft Wells Reinforced.

Meanwhile digging was resumed in the Meagher shaft which caved in yesterday as the rescuers were about to themselves well on the road to rescue. Experts examined the shaft yesterday and found it was hanging timber props, and decided it would be safe to proceed after reinforcing walls of the shaft.

Rescuers Are Hopeful.

There have been no repetitions of what miners said were smoke signals that curled over the ragged crag. Some said the smoke was from the impregnated mine dust ignited by 2,176,000 or 8.1 per cent in 1934.

PARKER HOLDS OUT IN WENDEL CASE

Jurors Seem Ready to Absolve Disbarred Lawyer

Trenton, N.J., April 15 (AP)—It was Hilt E. Ewing and his client against the field today on the question of holding Paul H. Wendel any longer in the Hindenburg kidnapping.

Ewing, the Mercer County grand jury started another extended session in its investigation of the republican Wendel confession.

Still adamant in his contention that Wendel perpetrated the crime for which Bruno Richard Hauptmann died in the electric chair, Ewing was ready for his fifth lengthy appearance before the jurors who have indicated by their action, by the move the assistant lawyer of the Mercer County grand jury started another extended session in the investigation of the republican Wendel confession.

FEARS OF POTATO SHORTAGE GROW

Supply 8 Million Cwt. Under a Year Ago at Present Time

Ottawa, April 15 (CP)—Stocks of potatos scarce and with fears of a shortage growing daily, Canadians are turning to potatos as United States for fresh supplies of tubers.

Fears were increased by a crop report issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics which said potato farm stocks at March 31, were much smaller than at last year and at the same time last year. Meanwhile M. O. McNeily, President of the Prince Edward Island Potato Growers' Co-operated Canada would be faced with an "absolute potato famine before May 1" and that there would be almost a shortage existed in Ontario this year.

The reduction in farm stocks was general throughout the Maritime and Eastern Provinces, the crop report stated. Stocks were reported as 8,000,000 cwt. compared with 19,740,000 cwt. the previous year. In Ontario the drop in the stocks been as low. In addition 2,-238,700 cwt., or 12 per cent of the 1935 crop were not classified as "table stock" while mixed with 2,176,000 or 8.1 per cent in 1934.

Through the generous offer of Mr. Cecil Purdon, manager of the Belle theatre, officials of the Belleville Municipal Band announced today they would be enabled to hold a second band concert on Monday evening next. The proceeds of the collection will be turned over to the Flood Relief Fund for the assistance of local sufferers, the officials of the band stated without being accompanied by patents or gunshot.

Swallows Disappointed As Fewer Boarded Up

Apparently enthralled from sojourns in the south, a large flock of swallows arrived in Belleville yesterday afternoon, after circling the city hall tower several times. Finally they settled on the high wires and gables of the building. The birds which have returned for the first time, entered the city about one week earlier than their usual date.

Disappointment rather than acrimony was the keynote of their arrival after year in the old tower, this year no entrance to the upper part, of the building has been provided.

"We fooled them this year," declared Jack Noble, custodian of the tower, "they can't get in. We've had wire screens and boards in front of the lattice work through which they used to be open. Even the top has been boarded off."

Unable to gain entrance to the building, the swallows hindled disconsolately on the wires and outer projections of the structure during the greater part of the afternoon, resting up. Today only one or two were left.

TEEN AGE GIRLS SEEK ADVENTURE

Wanted to Get Away From Home And See The World

"We wanted to get away from home and see the world. We intended to get to Montreal and procure employment and perhaps after a year's saved money go on to New York or Boston", explained two 16-year-old Toronto girls, whose world-like was ended after one week's adventure on the Kay's journey, when they arrived in Belleville.

Two girls giving their names as Betty Gordon, 74 Admiral St., and Gwen Harris, 63 Dundas St., Toronto, both saying they were 14 years of age, were held by the police after staying at a local hotel last night. The management of the hotel became suspicious when the girls paid their last dollar for a room late last night and notified police. Early today, Plainclothes Officer Fred Izard secured information from the girls' admission and upon questioning they admitted they had run away from home. Toronto police were notified of their apprehension and they will be held until their parents come to Belleville for them today.

Clarrying a dilapidated old suitcase in which they had hurriedly packed their clothes, the girls accumulated $1.35 of which it cost them eighty-five cents to travel to Cobourg by bus. "We got a ride with a man in an automobile, after spending the rest of the road cent of Cobourg for over two hours. We tried walking a little, but our shoes were worn and the cement road was too hard, so we sat down and hailed every automobile in the usual thumbing manner, but the drivers refused to pay much attention to us until a man finally stopped and drove us through to Belleville. We spent our last cent for a room last night," added the O'Brien girl today in the police station.

When asked how they intended to get enough money to eat, they replied that they were going to try and get an odd job in Belleville before going on to Montreal. They added that "Gee, but I'm hungry," interrupted the first girl shortly before noon with the result, that a lunch was provided the girls.

Both girls have returned to their parents upon the arrival of the afternoon some time today, Chief announced. "Oh, well we saw a little of the country anyway," added one of the girls after consuming her lunch.

"YOU CAN'T AFFORD TO BUY WITHOUT SEEING US."

Blinded Officer Tells Of Work Among Blind; Local Drive Launched

Capt. Baker, O.B.E., M.C., Speaks to Belleville Committee

VALUE OF SIGHT

Thrilling in its intensity and packed with the daily drama of human life, the story of how the blind "see", live, work and carry on in this present age, was almost the same ease as their sighted brethren was told a representative audience of citizens in the library of the Collegiate Institute last evening by Captain H. E. Baker, O.B.E., M.C., whose own sight was destroyed during his service with the Canadian troops in France during the Great War.

The introduction of Captain Baker to the local gathering and his address here climaxed the start of a campaign for funds in this city within which to carry on the valuable work of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, which Captain Baker, who has driven about the country by night, depicted his life to the audience as a representative of the Institute.

Cream Sweaters

Golden have local citizens been privileged to hear such an address which carried his hearers over the battlefields of the world, and in addresses, marked at times with wit and humour, but always delivered in compelling in interest.

Introduced by the chairman of the evening, Robert J. Dewar, Captain Baker who had been accompanied to the Collegiate by Mrs. Baker and Miss Hilary, one of the leading spirits in the campaign which has just commenced, a short biography of the honored guest was given.

Born in Dublin, Captain Baker was educated at Dublin and Trinity College, Dublin, where he took his degree in electrical engineering. At the outbreak of War Captain Baker was one of the first Canadians to enlist. It was while serving with the 48th Field Company, Canadian Engineers as lieutenant that a shell completely destroyed the sight of both eyes, in October, 1915. Later Capt. Baker was promoted to the rank of Captain and decorated with the Military Cross and the French Croix de Guerre for the valuable work he had performed.

Relief Is Needed

After being discharged from hospital, Captain Baker entered St. Dunstan's Hostel for blinded soldiers and sailors and on his return to Canada he has since stayed for approximately two years with the Ontario Hydro Radio Power Commission, in 1918, at the request of the Director of Vocational Training he took charge of all the training and care of Canadian blinded soldiers under the Department of Civil Re-establishment. Since then he has devoted his life to the assistance of his fellows.

Captain Baker, a clean cut, brisk spoken speaker, outlined in his preliminary remarks the reasons for the being of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind. "Any work of this kind, in dealing with the blind sightless must be motivated by service—a service which must know no profits, also, and justify its being," declared the speaker.

What Blindness Means

"Before I lost my sight," he continued, "I took, as many do, casual view of those who were blinded. I knew that some men had to look after them, but I didn't realize what this blindness, what this loss really meant."

The darkness that envelopes those who have had sight and lost it is terrifying in its totality, continued the speaker. Men and women are apt to take a pessimistic view at once. But they must fight against this if they are to survive. They must have a philosophy, to combine this shock.

"I followed this line of least resistance," declared Captain Baker, "I had the choice of being throwing it miserable, of accepting the sympathy of friends, friends who are ready had enough trouble of their own, or of getting on there when I took off, I realized than that I'd have to fight this and make my own way, make friends, who were not friends simply because I was blind."

Work of St. Dunstan's

Paying particular tribute to the work performed in the early stages at St. Dunstan's Hostel in England, Captain Baker, continued, "the founder of that Institution, Sir Arthur Pearson, was himself blind—he lived in England and later Sir Arthur Pearson was also blinded in action, but had devoted his life to making the lot of the blinded soldier easier. The work of the training carrying on here, were at first in the Regent Street Polytechnic schools, but it was here that the blinded received their first inspiration and personal encouragement.

"The re-establishment of those who were blinded was a problem," the speaker continued, "and for that part, determined that I would not be beaten. Through sheer luck, apparently, I secured office job learning to operate a typewriter. I tried to take my place among others, learned to depend more upon myself, to rely less upon the help of the body, to strengthen with use."

Schools for the Blind

Schools for the blind had done much, declared the speaker, but many who left these institutions after receiving special training were apt to meet defeat in competition and fruitfulness, continued Captain Baker. They had been taught how to shift for themselves. Out of this came the realization for the need of a real establishment where the blinded could be given certain work and daily tasks to do, work that would support them without charity or others.

"Thus, eighteen years ago, the Canadian National Institute for the Blind was first organized. We established blind workshops to take up the work of re-establishment—a case of the blind leading the blind from the ordinary person's viewpoint, but with a more important background and purpose than that.

Blind Reserve

"Blind people have a certain shell of reserve, quality to protect themselves against the unintended remarks of the outer world; it was up to us to get underneath this shell and to help them forget their sight by developing their other faculties. Recognized 'aquint eyes', poor vision, deafness, physical and other weaknesses may lead to trouble, but with the knowledge of telling the need for the services of competent oculists and glasses, when trouble threatens.

In his appeal for funds during the address Captain Baker declared:

"We are not begging for alms. It's not a case of just taking all and giving nothing. We are carrying this work of looking after and caring for the blind we are doing something for our own boys and girls. We are bringing many of them back who were in the darkest depths of misery and despair."

Local Activity

One half of the total blind in this country lost their sight through some specific trouble, and of this total about one half are over the age of sixty-five years. "Not through" grouped by lack of sight, but through lack of vision," declared Captain Baker citing one job in which a representative of the Institute showed the forethought of men like Mr. Dewar to fill cement sacks faster and more economically than the sighted men. A second case was at another plant this present week, where a man under the care of the Institute set an all time high record for the handling of bricks, blind and even though blind.

Captain Baker also gives the job more concentration. They are running their own business, operating button-making machines and doing other jobs which a few years ago would have been thought impossible. The prejudice against the blind man or woman as a worker in employment has been done away with through the work which we have managed to get into the Workmen's Compensation Act protecting the employing blind, so that in pushing into industry, nor trying to take from the sighted man his normal vision; we are just asking that the blind man's handicap be given us in the larger plants."

Institute Needs Help

"Blind people are not hopeless or helpless," declared Captain Baker in explaining the work of the Institute. "We don't want to burden or embarrass anyone. We don't want to be given a reasonable chance, for them, so that they may be left to the unreasonable of local relief. Perhaps in time the Canadian National Institute for the blind action regarding us. Maybe an adaption of the old Age Pensions Act would serve this. At any rate to those who are blind and physically handicapped, I make their own way, this would be a god-send. But for the time we must carry on. Our means are limited and we need help." declared Captain Baker.

Mr. F. V. Hiley, in thanking the speaker for the splendid address, said that he knew something of the problems of the blind, and what it meant to them, declared Captain Baker as "a brilliant man who had overlong himself to a brilliant cause."

Sympathetic Understanding

"We see the blind man now not as a man who is seeking pity or charity, but one who needs only a little of that sympathetic understanding which is his due.

"On this eve of the effort to raise money in this district for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind we are not lacking the spirit which will make this drive a success. Our only hope is that what has been said here tonight will be brought before the people of Belleville and district to show the interest for this aid." added Mr. Hiley.

"We're indebted to you, Captain Baker, and the Institute, and will gladly pay back this indebtedness this week."

The meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Following the meeting Mr. Douglas Bawa was added to the committee under whose direction the drive for funds for the Institute for the Blind will be carried on locally.

During the evening Mr. Herbert Tranter, blind travelling representative, of the Institute for the district was introduced to the audience present by Chairman Robt. Dewar.

M. R. MORRISON NAMED PRINCIPAL

Formerly Was Principal of Point Anne School For Five Years

His many friends in this vicinity will be pleased to learn of the promotion of Mathew R. Morrison who has been a teacher at Hopewell Avenue School, Ottawa, to the principal of Lady Evelyn School in that city. The announcement, which appeared in the Ottawa Citizen said that Mr. Morrison would take over his duties in September.

"Mr. Morrison," the article stated, "has been teaching in Ottawa for six years and came from Belleville. He was born at Culloden, Scotland, on June 15, 1907. He received his education in the public and high schools and attended the normal school at Toronto. He graduated from Queen's University in 1934 with the degree of B.A. then he was the Ontario memorial scholarship. Mr. Morrison was appointed in September, 1935, as a teacher at the Minichmor School and a year later when Hopewell Avenue School became an intermediate school he was appointed as teacher there. He is married and lives at 68 MacLaren Avenue."

Mr. Morrison was principal of Point Anne School for five years before coming to the Ontario School. His wife was Miss Marion Code and was formerly a member of the staff of the Ontario School for the Deaf.

POLICE BLOTTER

Local police today were asked to keep a strict vigil for a 1931 Dodge sedan reported stolen in Toronto late last night. The vehicle carried Ontario license plates BS-787.

Twelve boys were summoned to the police station this morning and later before Chief Hall for the following regarding the alleged raid last Sheff of soft drinks from the Foy and Irwin delivery truck on Good Friday. The lads were given a severe lecture by Chief Hall and warned that future misdemeanours of a similar nature would be severely dealt with. The boys all promised to be of good behaviour in the future if no charges were laid in this instance.

No arrests were necessary in Belleville during the past 24 hours while a total of 23 transients were given a warm night's lodging in the cell block at the police station last night.

AWARD CONTRACT FOR STEEL BRIDGE

New Trunk Purchased

A special committee of Alderman Armstrong, Clapp and Barlow were appointed to bring in a report on the purchase of a new truck for the Waterworks Department and this report was received and adopted. The Riggs Motor Sales will supply the department with a new Dodge truck at the trade in price submitted by the firm to that committee. No prices were given the committee as to the cost of the truck nor the trade in value of the old truck. Alderman Barker, Oshkosh, Jennings, Arnott and Bateman were appointed as a special committee to survey the lands back of the stores on Front Street in order to make room for parking purposes and Mr. Barlow asked the council if the Parking By-law had been returned from Toronto and being informed in the negative stated the committee would start their survey immediately. Mayor Hill informed the committee of a decision, that would be ideal for parking cars and the cost of fixing the place would not be very high.

Arthur Sills was given the contract to repair some leaks on the roof of the City Hall at a price of $42.50. Alderman Safe, Arnott, Thompson and Cushing were appointed as a committee to inspect the new fire hall and report to the council the amount of money it will take to put the building in shape, that tools and equipment of the police can be stored with safety. An add committee for the new garage was ordered purchased at a cost of $20. The City Solicitor was ordered to take immediate action to obtain possession of the Dundas Street property owned by the city and at present occupied by E. A. Kellaway. A tender for the police ambulance was received from a local undertaker and the rate that would be charged for calling tenderly call in the city. The matter was referred to the special committee appointed to dispose of the ambulance.

Relief Discussed

A letter was received from the City Engineer respecting relief as it affects the Public Works Department and Alderman Safe explained, that some work can be done on relief and are in arrears of taxes should be assisted as well as those on the relief list. Alderman Clapp thought that single men should not be hired for public works but Alderman Safe explained, that in some cases a single man was helping to maintain a home and that he should be given consideration. Alderman Bale, man stated, there were a number not on relief, who owed two years of taxes and he thought these men should be considered in some instances and Alderman Safe was quite agreeable to the proposition. Alderman Armstrong did not think that the appropriation for the public works should be whittled to a small margin and asked that the whole question be referred to estimates, which was done. There was no by-laws nor any new business and the council adjourned shortly after eleven o'clock after extending the time one hour. The committee meeting before council was a lengthy affair, the members not appearing in the council chamber till after ten o'clock. Those present were Mayor Hill, Aldermen Wills, Safe, Arnott, Thompson, Jennings, Armstrong, Cushing, Domenico, Barlow, Clapp, Bateman and Bale. Alderman Arnott was in the chair in the committee of the whole.

HOPES REVIVE FOR THREE MEN

Moose River, N.S., April 15 (CP)—Fears of another disaster today overshadowed hopes of rescue workers for penetrating the little-known shafts of Moose River Gold Mine where three Toronto men have been entombed since Sunday.

Blocked at every turn in their efforts to enter the mine through old abandoned shafts, the volunteers were digging frantically to open up a new one, while a squadron of motor lorries bearing equipment lumbered over a boggy road leading to the little settlement.

A huge crane brought out from Halifax on a special train last night and unloaded at Musquodoboit had not reached the mine this morning.

Capable of removing tons of earth at a time, it was to be used in an attempt to go straight down to the slope leading to the 141-foot level where Dr. D. E. Robertson, H. B. Magill and Alfred Keating were trapped, while inspecting the property they purchased three months ago.

About 35 men digging in the old Meagher shaft were ordered to the surface last night when a second cave-in endangered their lives.

"It might go again at any time," said Gordon Howe, engineer of the Carbon Mine, who came to Nova Scotia from Kimberley, B. C. Andrew Hirchfield, also a veteran of 20 years in the mines of Quebec and Ontario, agreed the whole mine strata was sliding and shifting.

Many Offers To Help

Other leading experts in the province were crowding into the settlement today and offers of assistance to Mine Manager F. D. Henderson were coming from far and near.

From President J. P. Bickell of McIntyre-Porcupine Mine came an offer to send a crew of men experienced in rescue work to Moose River by airplane. J. F. Mosseryy, Chief Inspector of Mines, expressed his thanks for the offer, but said he was unable to use the men just now.

Although there was little chance of reaching the imprisoned men for several days, some mine engineers directing the rescue work still expressed belief they might be found alive if they had not been crushed to death by the first cave-in.

Pictures extending over the sunken area gave forth woodfire smoke yesterday and Manager Henderson considered it proof of life below. He believed they had kindled a fire as a signal.

Forced Out of Shaft

Some others on the job gave up hope of rescue, when they were forced to scramble out of the dangerous Meagher shaft last night. They had been working with scant knowledge of the underground passages and it was said that the man, who could enlighten them was Harvey Higgins of West Concord, Mass., who worked here 30 years ago when the mine was last in operation.

Manager Henderson has been here only since the old workings were reopened in January, when Dr. Robertson and Magill, a Toronto barrister, bought the property.

Mrs. Robertson and Mrs. Magill arrived in Halifax last night from Toronto with C. H. Ivey, K.C., London, Ont. They spent the night in the city and were undecided when to leave for the mine.

Mrs. Magill was here in January and entered "the mine with her husband. She said last night she knew just about where the three men had been entombed.

CAPREOL CHIEF GIVES PROMISE

Will Not Participate in Poker Games for Money Stakes

Capreol, Ont., April 15 (CP) — Chief of Police George Conron was obliged to promise before last night's council meeting that he would not league parties in poker games for money stakes.

The promise followed the revelation that the police committee had received complaints about the chief's part in a nickel-a-game game in the back of a Chinese restaurant.

Debarred by several members of council, and claiming on his own behalf that his conduct had always been exemplary, the chief took to task P. J. Coyne, Police Commission Chairman.

"Mr. Coyne, you haven't studied very much your position on the committee . . . the chief began when he was stopped with a warning by Mayor James Coyne and other members of the council.

Councillor Claude Metcalfe, defending the chief, asked, "what's the difference between nickel poker in the restaurant, and cent-a-point bridge in a private house?"

"The money is on the table in a bridge game," answered Mayor Coyne.

"It's all an excuse for publicity," retorted Metcalfe.

The matter was first brought up when P. J. Coyne, arose to report a special meeting of the police committee had been held in the mayor's office.

"It's not a suitable thing for the chief to be playing poker for money," said Councillor Coyne. "Only recently, he arrested one of our citizens for the same offence."

BOMB BURSTS IN MAN'S HAND

Hint is Made That Professor Intended Suicide

Los Angeles, April 15 (CP)—The mystery of a "human bomb" explosion that killed a university professor and his wife in an automobile was cleared partly today by news of the two servants injured survivors.

Mrs. William Daniel Moriarity, 36, Professor of Economics at the University of Southern California, and his 44-year-old wife were killed last night by a bomb in the school man's car which they had been held in the garage.

Friends of Dr. Moriarity said he recently suffered heavy financial losses in mining and other business enterprises. They said McCoy had been associated with him in some business undertakings.

"Look what I've got!" McCoy said he heard the teacher exclaim when the glowing fuse in the saw in his hands an object he recognized as a bomb. Then the blast came, upsetting the car toward a boulevard when the explosion occurred.

"I had heard Dr. Moriarity several times threaten suicide," McCoy was quoted by the officers.

Revolver Explodes In Officer's Hand

Kingston, Ont., April 15 (CP)—Narrow escape from serious injury was experienced by Traffic Officer Percy Dowsley, when a revolver exploded in his hand while at target practice.

Traffic Officer Dowsley was taking part in target practice at Royal Military College when a 45-calibre revolver exploded as he prepared to shoot. It is believed the explosion was due to defective shell. The officer was not injured.

MASQUERADE

We all wear masks to hide our deepest selves,
Our fear of failure, and our hopes deferred,
Until the call comes to unmask, and then
A rare and hidden beauty is displayed.

Our eager searching for the gold of life
Is but the spirit struggling to be free.
But when this earthly Carnival shall end,
Then Beauty pledges Immortality.

OLD CURIOSITY SHOP which once stood on the corner of McAnanny Street and Pinnacle has vanished from the local landscape—and it is right, for it stood until it fell down in sections and for a long time was an eyesore, fortunately now obliterated, in the course of the razing of the buildings on the property purchased by the government. The Old Curiosity Shop was for some years a flourishing antique store where old furniture was bought and sold, many valuable pieces passing through the store. In the fulness of time the antique dealer went out of business and the building assumed that discouraged downat-the-heel appearance of ancient and neglected wooden buildings, the roof collapsed in the middle and the building assumed a lean not unlike the village loafer had, some years ago. Large attractive billboards served to partially hide the dereliict and form a convenient place to deposit empty liquor bottles and other rubbish. Now the ghost, or otherwise, of the past is gone, the old buildings have been reduced to second-hand lumber and bricks —and it is hoped that a beautiful building will rise on the site. While we are about it might be well to remind the civic authorities that the corner lot upon which Griffin's Theatre once stood is a disgrace to the surroundings and is surely amiss amidst beautiful churches, rectory, and government buildings. The owners were permitted to tear down the building, persumably to save taxes, and look what a mess the property was left in.

GOVERNMENT BLUEBOOKS WHICH USED TO BE SHOWERED ON NEWSPAPERS, and still are, for that matter, were at one time matter of deep interest to the village barber. He had a compact with the village editor to take all the bluebooks for use as lather receivers while clients were being shaved. Peterborough Examiner recalls the time when a tonsorial operation was performed without part of a government bluebook being sacrificed for the occasion. Generally the bluebooks were reduced to handy squares of lather paper which was much better than the custom of some lazy printers and barbers of using the bluebooks entire, just tearing out a page when required. This, of course, is all ancient history, too, for, when business was dull, rich and rare reading matter was supplied for the barber and his boarders, for the barbershop was always a favored place for the men of the village who found much of their time hanging heavily on their hands after doing the chores around the house, and gravitated to the barbershop to discuss the affairs of the nation, alternating with trips to the hotel, a seat on the hotel verandah, and an occasional trip to the bar when some stranger set 'em up or the proprietor thawed out a bit and got generous. Now, blue books are so numerous and so bulky that the village printer has not time to cut them up, and the village barber has been so unionized and sanitized that he has special sanitary paper for receiving the lather which he scrapes from his customers' faces. Hence barbers and bluebooks have definitely separated.

MAGIC

From primeval ages the magician has always been reserved of a following. Early magic was involved of course with the gradual growth of knowledge, as it dealt with the mysteries of life. In modern civilization it is still preserved as an entertainment though in some parts of the world as in India, the magician is a more than ordinary figure. Very powerful is the hold of magic on the uncultured mind as we know that even yet the belief is held that the Indian rope trick can be performed though it is claimed by others to be merely a belief which is unfounded on fact.

The magician of a civilised age is best represented by Howard Thurston. The American illusionist, who died this week, had a vast repertoire, though he liked the card tricks best.

Thurston mystified sixty million persons in his lifetime of forty-five years of appearance on the stage. He was a born entertainer with very adroit hands and a very fine sense of wit. It was Hermann the Great who provided the influence which started him on his way to become the great magician of his age. Thurston was only seven years of age when Hermann visited Columbus, Ohio, his home town. Thurston's repertoire included countless sleight-of-hand tricks, levitations, sawing a woman in two, shooting birds from rifles, submerging humans in sealed banks and other equally effective mysteries, including the rising-card trick. This feat consisted in having any card, as called for by the audience, to rise from a pack of cards, held in his left hand, to his right.

Magicians must never cease their study and Thurston made constant quest of new startling mysteries and ranged over modern science and invention. It was this freshness of his work which maintained his popularity.

Few people probably can see connection between the military and magic but Thurston was trained for the ministry. He graduated from Dwight L. Moody's school in 1881 and a book of magic fired his mind which has been built up by Hermann the Great. He became assistant to a magician at a churchfair and then started out for himself.

Thurston in his long career travelled in the Orient a great deal and studied the tricks of fakirs. He once offered five thousand rupees to a magician who could show him a trick he could not explain but he did not have to pay the money. He considered the Indian magician overrated.

Though dealing in a world of illusion, Thurston was fascinated by the realities of life. A story published since his death this week is to the effect that he had formed a pact with three friends, all of whom died before him to meet at a time.

Thurston found in magic that he satisfied a human craving for the human mind likes to be mystified, it likes the pressure of the thumb for it goes back to the original human interest of the tribe behind religion, science, magic, romance.

SLAVERY IN ETHIOPIA

"Marshall Badglio has been ordered by Mussolini to issue a military decree freeing all slaves in Ethiopian territory under the control of the Italian armies," says New York Times. "This is no doubt intended to be taken as a part of the civilizing mission which the Italian Government nominally set out upon when it invaded Ethiopia. It has since been pretty well forgotten in the process of civilizing the Ethiopians by bombs from the air, machine guns and poison gas. Yet the subject has a very serious side and raises many questions. In compliance with the obligations which Ethiopia assumed as a member of the League of Nations, a decree was issued by the Emperor several years ago abolishing slavery. But it has admittedly been an ineffective decree. It was not enforced even in the capital, or in the regions under the central administration, while among the semi-independent provinces and tribes slavery went on much as before. As it exists in Ethiopia it has sometimes been described as a sort of patriarchal institution, kindly and humane. It has been said that emancipated slaves declined their freedom, and preferred involuntary servitude. But authentic and detailed information gathered from many parts of Ethiopia shows that slavery often takes on there heartless and cruel forms. The owners have an almost unquestioned power of life or death over their slaves. Upon the latter the grossest inhumanities are often inflicted. However the war in Ethiopia ends, the League of Nations and the civilised world must see to it that Ethiopian slavery ends."

If the whole world were put into one scale, and my mother into the other the world would kick the beam.—Lord Langdale.

WANTS TO PIPE AS KING CORONATED—Pipe Major James Douglas of the Highland Brigade, Argyll and Sutherlanders, who resides in Ottawa, hopes to establish something of a record as a piper when King Edward VIII is crowned next year. Already Major Douglas has saw service during the coronation of two English kings and he is hoping that when the coronation of King Edward VIII is held that he will again play a humble part in the celebration of that Empire-wide event. On the occasion of the coronation of King Edward VII in 1902, at the close of the South African war, Major Douglas piped at Johannesburg. In 1910 Major Douglas was in Malta, serving, and here again while King George was being crowned in London he contributed to the celebration with his pipes. And now he hopes to do it in Canada. Major Douglas served during the South African war and was wounded at Magersfontein. He saw service during the Great War in France, Greece, Serbia and Bulgaria. At Salonica, during the Great War, the regiment was cited by the French G.O.C. and the ribbon of the Croix de Guerre awarded, and placed on the baggies of Major Douglas and have been there since.

ANOTHER U.S. "MYSTERY NAVY PLANE" MAKES TEST FLIGHT—Edmund T. Allen, consulting test pilot, is shown at controls of the sealed XRING-1, experimental scout bomber and new U. S. "mystery" aeroplane, as it was put through test paces at Bartlett, Conn., recently. The aeroplane was constructed for the United States navy and has been shipped to the naval air station at Anacostia, D.C., where competitive tests will be given her. The aeroplane derives from other models in that she is single wing, has a retractable landing gear. The fuselage, somewhat rabbit completely encloses two cockpits.

A Travel Time Trip

Springtime ushers in the time for travel. Jaded nerves and lost efficiency are recuperated by a carefree vacation spent far from the city. Any day we have a message for our motoring readers who plan to ease the tension with a holiday trip. The first part of this message is candid: that you plan to go. The fruit of overwork and worry is usually disease, but clear away for awhile from the deadening monotony of routine. It is one of the best investments you can make this year.

The second part of this message is one that should prove just as profitable. Take your car first to a reliable garage. Whether you are planning a three months trip to Florida, or a week-end jaunt to your favourite fishing spot, you must be able to depend upon your car. Nothing could be worse than after tasting the pleasant anticipation of a holiday, than to find yourself driving with the intricate mass of machinery, miles from the nearest garage. But these are days when we must practise economy, and to keep a car in good condition costs money. We propose in this article to point to a garage whose motor repair department will give a real job at low cost. Orill's Garage at 85 Moira West. Every motorist likes to save as much on the upkeep of his car as is consistent with good service, there is a positive pleasure in doing this, just as there is dread in a large repair bill. We mention Orill's Garage as an example of the type of garage it pays to patronize to avoid this dread of worry, and to leave on that trip with an untroubled mind.

Little Benny's Note Book

Saturday afternoon me and Puds Simkins and Lucky Leroy Shooter was wawking home from the part tawking about different general subjects, and I said to Leroy Shooter, Hay Lucky, did you find anything today or anything?

No, gosh hang the luck, I dont believe I'm any luckier than other fellows any more, that's a way it seems to me, Leroy said.

What just then he tripped and pritty near fell down on account of some kid sticking his foot out in front of him. Being a tuff looking kid in a green sweater looking as if he could flie the 3 ot us put together, and Leroy Shooter said, Hay, what's you think you're doing, why you little you ant, what's a matter with you?

Why do you want to do anything about it? the tuff kid said.

Sounding like a invitation to get licked in a flie, and Leroy said, Well what's a matter, I didn't do anything to you, did I?

Then go ahead and do something to me, the tuff kid said and he made fists at starter to jump around like a boxer, and just then Master Ted Cronk came by, and Leroy said, Come come, boys, this will never do.

Being sons man with a pink face and glasses, and he put one hand on Leroy's head and the other hand on the tuff kid's head, saying, So forth it never will never do, but we all make mistakes, that's our human, but to forgive is divine.

Mistake nothing, he did it on purpose, Leroy said, and the man said, Never mind, forgive him just the same. If you forgive him of your own free will I'll give you 10 cents as a little memento of the occasion he said.

O, all rite, says, Lucky Leroy and the man gave him a dime and we quick started to work away while the man was still hanging to the tuff looking kid, and hay ways down the block we started to run for safety next, Leroy Shooter saying, O well, I guess I must of just been feeling a little peeskuke to.

O'DONNELL APPEAL CLOSED

Toronto, April 18.—Argument on the appeal of Harry O'Donnell sentenced to be hanged on May 4 for the murder of Ruth Taylor last November, was completed before the Court of Appeal yesterday afternoon with the court reserving its judgment.

Supplementing the argument of W. W. McKeown of that week Frank Regan, O'Donnell's trial counsel, pointed out numerous instances where he considered the trial judge should have stressed evidence favorable to the accused in his charge to the jury.

Fright Loosens Mute Man's Tongue

Quebec, April 15.—Lucien Dyras, farmer from Ancienne Lorette, told how his hired man had partially regained his speech after being mute 16 years.

Dyras said his helper, Raymond McDonald, 31, had been unable to utter a word since stricken with deafness when 15 years of age. Then after being frightened into unconsciousness he was able to speak. Dyrges said the youth, hesitant in using his new power, first spoke inaudibly but was gradually improving in phrasing and pronunciation.

Last Saturday night, Dyras said, he and McDonald were stoking the cattle. The youth was working in the dark far end of the barn, when his employer stole up behind him. The farmer said he let out a lusty yell. His helper screamed and fell unconscious.

When McDonald recovered Dyras said, he was muttering incoherently and later spoke so that members of the family were able to understand him.

THE DRAMA

Bridge Street Ladies Present Play at Nagazine

Fifty people, including the cast, journeyed to Nagazine last evening when the Woman's Association of Bridge Street Church presented to a splendid appreciative audience, their play, the "Dixie Lady Minstrels" at Bridge Church. Directed by the Sunday School. It was two and a half hours of amusement and laughter and very much enjoyed by all.

This organization should be proud of their play for when they first presented it on March 13th, at Bridge Street Church, they were greeted with a capacity audience. It is a money maker for the association as well as a play that is a great deal of enjoyment. They are considering a couple of invitations for the play to be presented in the near future when, no doubt, they will be greeted with a large audience.

After the play last night they were treated to a social half hour by the minister, superintendent, and officers of the church, during which was very much enjoyed by all.

Good Manners
By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When two couples meet (they do not know each other) going into a restaurant, should the one that reaches the door first open it for his friend, should he go in behind her, or wait until the "unknown" couple follows him and then proceed? How is this done with two couples who know one another?

2. When telephoning a doctor, dentist, or hairdresser, should one say "This is Miss Blank speaking," or merely say . . . "Blank speaking"?

3. Why is it correct to offer a gloved hand?

4. Should a man tip his hat to other men? My opinion is that it is only correct to do this to older men, ministers, and so forth.

5. When a butter knife is not at a person's place, and the table is set for dinner, may one use the first knife for butter and then use it for fish? If the fish knife is there but no fish is being served, I take it that it is correct for me.

6. When the silver for fish and meat are alike (restaurants mostly) and one is not having fish, may the fish fork please be used?

7. I have a friend who always says, "I've saw", and of course say the correct thing, and sometimes he looks at me when I do. How can I tell him that he is wrong?

8. I am sure that it is correct for the gentleman to take his friend's order and then tell the waiter, but so many men wait for their friend to tell the waiter and I always ask what I would like before the waiter gets to the table. How can I work this one out?

9. Am I right in thinking that there are certain sandwiches which may be taken in the fingers?

1. The really polite man holds the door open for the woman who is waiting to go through the doorway. He takes only a few seconds more for him to be this extra-courteous. In the case of two couples who fancy each other, the man to reach the door first holds the door open while the two women pass through, then he and the other man enter.

2. When you telephone a doctor, a dentist, a hairdresser, you announce yourself on the telephone, "This is Miss Blank speaking". It would be crude to omit your name.

3. A man may offer a gloved hand a man should not, if he can avoid it . . and he can avoid it if he is smart. A man should remove his gloves before offering his hand to a woman. It is really impossible for him to do so easily, he makes himself awkward in not doing it . . . it doesn't, in other words, say, "Pardon my glove".

4. You are right. And of course he lifts his hat when he meets any man whom he knows when that man is accompanied by a woman, whether or not he knows the woman.

5. If butter is being served at dinner, there should be an individual butter knife at each place. If butter is served, and there is no special knife for using it, we may use the dinner knife. There would never be a fish knife at the place unless fish were being served.

6. Yes.

7. I think it would be better to continue saying the correct thing. They won't notice, and I am sure that your friend will eventually realize that this is correct. Apparently he is "aware" that something is wrong with his "I've saw" . . . and this awareness will, I'm sure, finally show him the correct form.

8. When you tell the waiter the comes to the table to take the orders, and then your order to your host. If you address the host and not the waiter, your host must perforce reply but will defer to the waiter.

9. Sandwiches served at tea, or similar small sandwiches, are eaten in the fingers.

Obituary

LATE MRS. L. W. MARSH

The private funeral of Mrs. Mabel Marsh, widow of Lt. Col. L. W. Marsh, took place Tuesday afternoon from the Tickell & Brown's Funeral Home, Church Street. The service in the chapel and at the Belleville Mausoleum, where cremainment was made, was conducted by the Rev. E. Beaudoin, Rector of Christ Church.

LATE WILLIAM J. HARRISON (Ladie)

Tuesday afternoon the funeral of William James Harrison took place from his late residence at Ulste, to the United Church at Plainfield where an impressive service was conducted by the Rev. J. F. Everson. The attendance of friends was large and there were many floral tributes.

Interment was made in Victoria cemetery, the service at the grave side being conducted by the same minister.

The bearers were Messrs. P. R. Sullivan, Herman Rodgers, Percy Parks, James W. Hamilton, Wesley Parks and William Van Allen.

ALEXANDER McLELLAN

Although he had been in ill health for some time, Alexander McLellan passed away early this Wednesday morning at the family residence, 168 Victoria Avenue.

He was born in Belleville and was 70 years of age. He was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Alexander McLellan; his mother's maiden name was Miss Mary Chisholm. He was educated at Willoughby Public School and Ottawa University, from which he graduated in engineering. He was in charge of the first survey party which was engaged in surveying the Island of Newfoundland for the Reid Newfoundland Company, a project spread over 10 years. He spent in railway construction work in Northern Ontario and Quebec and he was well known in his profession and highly esteemed by all with whom he came in contact. He was a member of St. Michael's Church, Toronto, since 1904 and he had been living retired in Belleville.

Surviving him are his widow and four daughters, Miss Mary Isabella McLellan, Miss Katherine McLellan, Miss Mary Trehi McLellan, all of Belleville, and Mrs. Fred Hudon, of London, Ontario.

Funeral announcement, appears elsewhere in this issue.

MRS. HARRY MARACLE

Mrs. Harry Maracle, formerly of Point Anne, died on Monday at Buffalo, N.Y., where she had been residing with her husband for some time. She was a daughter of Peter Green and a sister of Attorney Green of Point Anne.

The body will be brought to Point Anne and interment will be made in Deseronto cemetery. Announcement of funeral will be made later.

EDWARD DORIAN

After a lengthy illness, Edward Dorian passed away yesterday at his home, 130 East Moira Street. Born in Ireland, he was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Dorian. He came to this country about fifty years ago and had resided in this locality during that time. For twenty-three years Mr. Dorian was a popular and valued employee at the Ontario School for the Deaf where his was stationary engineer, a position from which he was superannuated three years ago.

Mr. Dorian was a devout member of St. Michael's Church. He had a wide circle of friends who will sincerely regret his passing. He is survived by his widow, two daughters, Rev. Sister Mary Adele of Brockville, Miss Nellie, at home, two sons, John, of Philadelphia, and Joseph, at home, one brother, Mr. Mary Ann Murphy, of Ireland, and two brothers, Joseph, of Ireland, and Robert, of Kansas.

The funeral notice appears elsewhere in this paper.

JOHN C. KEITH (Vancouver)

Announcement of the death of John C. Keith at Vancouver, B.C., on March 19th last, has been received in Belleville and old friends here will regret to learn of his passing.

For many years the late Mr. Keith was a prominent and well respected resident of this city, being engaged in the retail hardware business, his store being situated on the east side of Front Street, a short distance south of where the Canadian Bank of Commerce now stands. His residence was on Bridge Street East. For a time he served the city as an alderman.

Being attracted by the gold excitement in the Yukon, he left here in the year 1898 for that territory. Upon reaching Vancouver, B.C., however, he changed his plans and took up residence in that city where he made his home up to the time of his death.

Surviving him are his wife and three daughters.

LOST HONEYMOONERS RESCUED—Setting out from Seattle, Wash., on an aerial honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. John Almeilio came to grief near Princess Bay, Alaska, when their seroplane crashed. The honeymooners wandered for a week without food or shelter, in bitter cold weather, and plunged through deep snow and icy streams, shoeless and exhausted. They will survive. Mrs. Almeilio, 18 years old, is shown ABOVE.

Beauty

Care of the Teeth

Brushing the teeth is a duty, and because it is a duty it is a bore. Laying on the synthetic blushes, thinking the lips, darkening the eyelashes are pleasant diversions. Almost any woman is likely to stock up on beauty aids without any endless amount of time on surface decoration. But lovely white teeth in perfect condition mean more than the completed picture of good looks than lips, lashes on the complexion.

Teeth should not be just brushed, they should be scoured so that the surfaces will be clean. This is especially imperative now that girls are mingling the atmosphere with cigarette smoke. Though one be as lovely as Helen of Troy one must go to the foot of the class if the teeth are discolored.

Don't economize on brushes. Get the best obtainable with bristles that don't weaken at the base. Use a dentifrice freely. See that every particle of surface of each tooth is treated, even the inner surfaces, the sides, the ends. It is particularly necessary to clean the sides when teeth don't meet. Dentists report that many cavities are not found even with the brush. Use mild antiseptic after scouring to freshen the membranes of the mouth. Floss the teeth at each meal, if possible; always at bed-time.

Some of the causes of tooth decay are known; more will probably be discovered since many an individual in good health and receiving regular dental attentions suffers from cavities. In ordinary cases daily care and professional services will keep the blight in fair condition. But that small victim who have their teeth looked after, the chances are that certain defective zones will have sounder teeth. That diet has something to do with the matter is generally regarded.

Mean little organisms are on the premises—by eating destruction to the enamel, a substance still harder than bone. They thrive in the fermentation of sweets and starches; that is why teeth should be brushed at least the need and the mouth well rinsed with a mild antiseptic.

Mineral salts are necessary for the health of the teeth. The bone of the kitchen should come vegetables in very little water, never throw away the liquor but save it for broths. Fresh meats, vegetable, milk and citrus fruits contain food elements that are necessary for white pearls. Outdoor life and sunlight contribute to their well-being because they furnish the human system with power of resistance.

By eating raw vegetables and hard bread the teeth and gums are exercised, receive nutriment freely from the blood stream.

Twice a year trot-trot to the dentist's office for removal and removal of tartar. Tartar can kick up a lot of trouble.

S.S. Trustee Head Deplores Trend

Toronto, April 15.— (CP)—When infusion of religion into the school life of the province is a direct encroachment on citizen rights "it will be a sorrowful day for Canada" declared E. F. Donohue of Kitchener, president of the Ontario Separate School Trustees Association said.

"We cannot but be shocked at the implication contained in resolutions forwarded to the government by reputed leader of religious thought that tax monies should not be devoted to Public School purposes because of the religious background found help give it that dashing air, and makes it; the very last word in style. Her escort, Mr. Robert Bard, is a picture of what the well-dressed man will wear on Sunday and how! Both on Park Ave. as they left St. Bartholomew's church after attending services.

OUTSTANDING IN N.Y. FASHION PARADE—The outstanding feature of Easter Sunday in New York is the fashion parade which follows church services, and here—as worn by social prominent Mrs. Alexander Hamilton, daughter of Otto Kahn—is the perfect Easter costume. Her trimly-tailored outfit is topped with a very individual chapeau. A trimply-cut model, the fur at the bottom of the three-quarter length coat helps give it that dashing air, and makes it; the very last word in style. Her escort, Mr. Robert Bard, is a picture of what the well-dressed man will wear on Sunday and how! Both on Park Ave. as they left St. Bartholomew's church after attending services.

PRODUCE

Toronto, April 15.—(CP)—Wholesale prices on produce supplied at Toronto by the United Farmers Co-Operative Co., here today were:—

Eggs: grade A large, box; 17c; Grade A medium, box, 15c; Grade B, box, 14c; Grade B doz., 15c; Grade C, box, 10c; Grade C doz., 11c.

Potatoes: Bag: Can, $1.45; N. B. $1.70; P. E. I. $1.85.

Toronto, April 15.—(CP)— Slow recovery from Tuesday's sell off was registered by the industrial list in the early Canadian Stock Exchange this afternoon. Gains of fractional proportions were recorded for the leading oils. International Nickel, some of the distillery issues, Dominion Steel and the textile. Trading continued in very small volume however.

Small gains through the oil list did not include British American Oil which was off a fractional fraction this afternoon. Construction issues showed slightly higher and gains in the steels included a new high mark for Steel of Canada common. Fed Flour, P.R.P., and Brazilian were unchanged to slightly stronger.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, April 15.—(CP)—Irregularity higher prices ruled in the mining section of Toronto exchange this afternoon on a heavy volume of trading. Interest centred in Central Patricia, Base Grey, Chibougamau, McKenzie and Sisco and a few other golds and most of the base metal up. Central Patricia bounded up to 2.55, a new high mark for the stock and the afternoon price of 2.45 showed a net gain of 9 cents. Chibougamau rose about the same net gain after advancing 23 cents.

Base metal issues were slow with Sherritt having the only upward flurry and in this slower and dull the tone was slightly heavy. Texas Canadian weakened 8 cents.

WALL STREET CLOSE

By WYNDHAM WORTHEN
Associated Press Financial Writer
New York, April 15.—Price gains tipped upward in today's stock market.

Westinghouse, Du Pont, Columbian Carbon, McKesport Tinplate, American Can, and Consolidated Aircraft were up 2 to 3. Other issues in demand included General Motors, Chrysler, Goodyear, Union Carbide, Texas Pacific, Northern Pacific, General Electric, Commonwealth Edison, Electric Power and Light, American Water Works and North American.

Livestock

Toronto, April 15 (CP)—Cattle trade was slow but steady on the Toronto Livestock Market today with prices generally unchanged. The calf, sheep and lamb divisions also ruled steady, while hogs were unsettled. There was a run of hogs over or 300 head.

Trading was represented by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle, 400; calves, 60; hogs, 330; sheep and lambs, 90.

In the cattle section a few handyweight butcher cattle sold from $4.35 to $5.25 with some going for export at $5.50. Good butcher cows brought $3.75 to $4.00. There were no other sales.

The calf mart brought steady prices of from $8.00 to $9.50 for choice vealers with medium quality calves selling from $5.00 to $6.00.

The hog market showed unsettled and a weak feeling prevailed. Yesterday car hogs sold steady at $11.25 to $11.50 fed and watered. The general market on truck hogs was also unsettled and a little lower.

A few good feed-lot lambs brought $10.50 cwt. Good spring lambs sold from $8.00 to $9.00 cwt. Sheep sold steady at $5.00 to $6.00 cwt. for good light sheep.

New Zealand and Australian sold from $8 to $8 shillings per cwt. (19.52 to 20.73 cents per lb.).

'Corpse' Rises As Morgue Men Take Gold Teeth

Portsmouth, Va., April 15 (AP)—John Pappas, local restaurant proprietor, will go to New York to stand trial on charges of two morgue attendants at Camp Lee to rob him of four gold teeth saved him from being buried alive in September, 1917. Pappas, alive and healthy today, is grateful for the greed of the two negro attendants who are said to have surreptitiously on charges of stealing gold from cadavers, but accepted testimony that he owed the life preserving officer because they had emphatically averted the tragedy to Pappas.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, April 15—Potato prices on the Montreal market continued higher yesterday, extending last week's gains. The higher quotations to the United States has curtailed offerings to the domestic market, markets and prices have strengthened because of that. The butter and cheese markets were steady to a little easier. Eggs and poultry remained unchanged. Receipts for the day were posted at the Board of Trade as 1,800 cases of eggs, 61 boxes of butter and 2 boxes of cheese.

The potato market was $c to 10c higher yesterday with Ontario delivered levels, being as follows: P.E.I. Mountains, bag as $1.80; P.E.I. Mountains, per 90 lbs., $1.75 to $1.80; Ontario, 80 lbs., No. 1, $1.50 to $1.55; 80 lbs., No. 2, $1.40 to $1.45; Mountains, 80 lbs., No. 1, $1.35 to $1.40; P.E.I. and N.B. Mountains, 80 lbs., No. 1, 90c; 80 lbs., 85c; Quebec Mountains, 80 lbs., No. 1, $1.35 to $1.50; White, 80 lbs., No. 1, $1.20 to $1.25.

The butter market was quoted 23½ to 23¾c; No. 2 at 23c; No. 3 at 22½c; Ontario creamery prints, 25c.

On the egg market graded shipments in cartons of No. 1 lots were 19-19½c for A-large, 18-18½c for A-medium or 3, and 17c for A-pullets or C.

General Patricia

Bellion production at Central Patricia Gold Mines for March is strictly reported at 2,783 ounces gold, which, based on $35 gold, has a value of $97,405, the second highest month to date. This compares with output for the preceding month of 974,250, when four days were lost due to breaking in of the mill. Tonnage treated during the month under review, the company milled 15,000 tons, or an average for March is an average daily rate of 161 tons. Output for the first three months of the current year totalled 7,418 ounces, having a value of $259,630, from the milling of 13,086 tons of ore.

Texas Canadian Oil

Texas Canadian Oil Corporation Limited advises shareholders that as a result of a special meeting held and approved on April 9 last the capital stock of the company has been increased from 1,000,000 shares of $1 par value to 2,500,000 shares of $1 par value.

Authorization has also been given to issue 1,500,000 shares in exchange of record at the close of business on April 15, 1936. Terms of such increased capital, being on a share for share basis.

Trading was stronger yesterday and in this connection it is interesting to point out that James P. Dunigan, President of Texas Canada, states that there has been talk of a refinery in Sarnia at the end of the month to discuss the formation of such a refinery. Texas Canada is one of the companies which could help nine prices. This is conjunctive news for the Consolidated Petroleum is a very substantial producer of the metal.

Of interest to holders of the copper issues is the report International Nickel and Noranda, is the following: Next week's output.

"Copper metal went to p 1-2 cts. for all offerings as expected in the Street. Those who believe they know the situation say this is merely the forerunner to higher metal prices. They predict heavier sales of copper in March and abroad in coming weeks, with a further rise of 1-2 cents for the metal before Summer. London has been a heavy buyer of copper on parities, but American and foreign issues for some weeks past.

Imperial Oil

The 1935 report of Imperial Oil is an interesting document and reveals the ability that is displayed by the Standard Oil as a group. The company made a net of dividends in 1935, although earnings were only $1 1-3 cents a share. Imperial thus distributed $1.25 of $3 earned or more than its total income. Yet despite this the balance sheet still shows an improvement of $3.4 millions over the year. The main reason for by the increase in the value of Investment Holdings from $33 millions to $36 millions.

As in past years, Imperial Oil's "Other Income" is a material aid at times as much as its Operating Profits. After Income taxes, Most of its "Other Income" amounting to $21.2 millions was made up of dividends from its extensive International Petroleum holdings.

Financial World

Stocks still attractive. "No improvement in business conditions is in prospect, one reason being that stocks continue to constitute the most attractive vehicle for the employment of funds and large holders are reluctant to take profits because of the heavy tax payments that would be involved. Consequently, and not overlooking the inevitable setbacks and recessions from time to time, a constructive attitude toward stocks is warranted."

FRANCO-ITALIAN INTERESTS KNIT

Peace Talks Over East Africa Reported Well Forwarding

Paris, April 14 (CP-Havas)—The hostility of a closely knit Franco-Italian front was demonstrated by the powers reassemble at Geneva Monday to resume discussions of the Ethiopian War that have already cost three days' delay.

While the French Press, notably Le Temps, a Conservative organ, were hammering an offensive on what it terms the inconsistency of British policy toward Italy and Germany, Premier Flandin conferred for an hour with Ambassador Vittorio Cerruti of Italy.

Geneva, April 14 (CP Cable)—The peace talks between Italy and Ethiopia already are clouded with foreboding.

Geneva, April 14 - (AP)—A move by some of the Latin American countries to create an all-American League of Nations aroused much discussion and sharply divided reaction here today.

Geneva, April 14 (AP)—The Ethiopian Government notified the League of Nations today that the British Foreign Minister, Sir Samuel Hoare, had proposed a settlement of the Ethiopian crisis.

Paris, April 14 (CP-Havas)—Cooperation between the Air Forces of Great Britain, France and Belgium will be the main object of the general staff negotiations opening in London, Viscount Swinton, Air Minister, announced here today.

London, April 14 (CP-Havas)—Italy's delegation to hold aloof from the Anglo-Franco-Belgian Locarno general interpretation meeting was confirmed today when it was learned that no representative of the Italian Embassy would attend the sessions opening here tomorrow.

FAIR MILK PRICE IS ESSENTIAL

Says Dr. G. L. Christie Head of Agricultural College

Guelph, April 15.—(CP)—Dr. George L. Christie, President of Ontario Agricultural College, speaking at a banquet tendered W. M. Gratory, here last night, stressed the importance of a fair price for cheese as a factor in raising prices for milk.

Mr. Gratory, for the past 12 years agriculture representative for Dorchester County, has been transferred to Carleton County.

"I have always been for the option man and I think working in factories should be paid a decent wage and when the factories can make the soil should receive just as good remuneration," he said.

Dealing with the difficulties the farmers have to contend with, Dr. Christie cited the large number of cattle which must be slaughtered every year because of tuberculosis.

Gunman Loses Coat Making His Escape

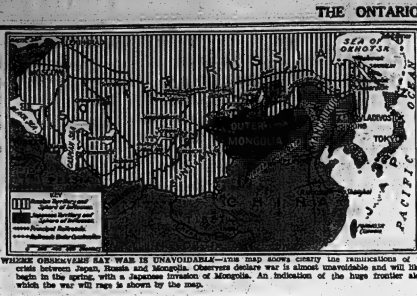
Sudbury, Ont., April 14—(CP)—A gunman attempted to stage a stickup and rob Charles Smith, Durham St. clothier today when frightened at the obstacles to anything. In his hurry to escape he left his overcoat.

The man entered the store carrying his coat, and asked to try on a hat. As Smith turned his back to do so the man pulled a gun and ordered the merchant to hand over his money.

PREVENT DANGERS OF CONSTIPATION"

"Bulk" in ALL-BRAN Is Gentle in Action

Common constipation is largely due to insufficient "bulk" in meals. You fail to get your internal exercise. Millions of people have found that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN supplies such "bulk" with satisfactory results.



Tests in nutrition laboratories demonstrate that the "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is gentle in action. It is almost confidence. Naturally, those few individuals with diseased or highly sensitive intestines should not take "bulk" in any form—either that in vegetables or in bran.

Unlike cathartics, ALL-BRAN is natural in its action—nor does this food lose its effectiveness with continued use. Instead, the body, it absorbs moisture and cleanses the intestines, promoting normal and healthful elimination.

Two tablespoonfuls of this delicious cereal, served with milk or cream, are normally sufficient. Rich! It also is cooked dishes.

Help your family keep well. Serve ALL-BRAN regularly for regularity. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

Obituary

LATE ABRAHAM HOLMES

Hickory Grove, Sprague, on Tuesday afternoon, April 11th, 1936, a large gathering of relatives and friends attended the funeral of Mr. Abraham Holmes, formerly a resident of Thurlow township, who passed away on Thursday morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Harvey Manchester, Sidneville.

The late Mr. Holmes spent practically all his life in Marmora Township being born near Queensboro, but had lived for the past few years, having reached his ninety-first year. He was a man of unselfish character who had the respect and high regard of all his friends. For years he had been suffering with cancer but although he was a great sufferer, he was very patient, and the God in whom he trusted and loved so much, was able to give him strength to bear his heavy affliction. All who visited him during the last two years have felt that they received a lesson in patience. He was a faithful servant but was always ready with a word of encouragement for others and his presence else on in the Christian life.

The immediate family left to mourn the loss of a loving father are Mr. Geo. Holmes of Marmora; Mrs. Ulysses Wartman, (Mary) of Hickory Grove; Mrs. Harvey Manchester of Queensboro and Mrs. E. Manchester, (Maggie) of Sidneville, with whom he has made his home for a number of years, and by whom he was tenderly cared for till the end came. His wife formerly (Isabel Bonter) predeceased him in 1931, also three of their children.

Three brothers, Joseph Holmes of Pinetree, Sydney Holmes, Queensboro and Wm. Holmes of Ricardo also thirteen grandchildren are also left to survive.

The remains were conveyed by "Cummings" Ambulance from his daughter's home at Sidneville to the home of his son, Mr. Abda Holmes on Friday and the funeral service took place from there on Saturday afternoon to Hazzard's Church, where Rev. R. Mc. F. Winters from Stirlaville assisted by Rev. Mr. Sandwell of Bay of Quinte conducted the service. Rev. Mr. Winters chose as his text Psalm 71, verse 9. "Cast me not off in the time of my old age; forsake me not when my strength faileth." Rev. Mr. Winters was followed by his two daughters sang "I have a friend in Jesus."

The casket which was banked with lovely flowers was carried by his grandsons.

The remains were interred in Hoard's Cemetery. Some members of his wife and three children in their family plot.

ROBBINS FAVORS PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Expresses Opinion Before Ontario Education Association

Toronto, April 14.— (CP) —Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, speaking at the 75th annual meeting of the Ontario Educational Association, opened here today in Convocation Hall at the University of Toronto, spoke University and Civic welcome was given teachers and trustees from all parts of the Province.

President H. J. Cody of the University or Toronto, was unable to attend owing to illness and the University's greetings were extended by Principal Malcolm Wallace of University College. Controller W. J. Stewart welcomed the city and Dr. H. B. Spaulding welcomed the delegates on behalf of the Board of Education.

"I wish the time would come when all the children would be together in public schools," said Controller Stewart. "I think you all know what I mean". It was the first reference to the religious difficulty over the Ontario Government's Legislation to give Separate Schools larger grants for Corporation taxes.

"Don't let your pupils to come to the office," Mr. Robbins advised the teachers. "Keep them on the farm."

An educated man will do much better farm work than an ignorant man."

TUG SPRINGS LEAK SINKS SUDDENLY

Crew of Wilma Escape Port Dover in Life Boats

Port Dover, Ont., April 14 (CP)—Springing a leak suddenly, the Port Dover tug Wilma sank in the bottom of calm Long Point bay yesterday afternoon, in less than a minute.

The tug's skipper, the little craft sank 13 minutes after water began pouring in and just an hour and 20 minutes after he had left shore. The crew had tried to stem the inflow of water with mattresses driven into her seams.

Wilma was owned by the Wilma Fish Company, Manager George Ingram.

English Duncan McLeod was in command, and her crew included Cliff Duffy, engineer; Ed Bryant, deck hand, Angus Gilbert, Bill Hagen, and Arthur Gilbert.

The boat had been backing toe for about three weeks but the day's work this morning was clear when a seam opened.

Water began to pour in and it filled fast. The crew took to the life boat and were picked up by the Margaret A. Wilson, another fish tug, which had turned back from the lake in response to a distress signal from the Wilma.

Loss to the owners of the Wilma is covered by insurance. The fishing season was just starting.

MAGICIAN'S PACT BEYOND GRAVE

Strange Agreement Reported of Thurston With Three Others

Miami Beach, Fla., April 14 (AP) —Friends he baffled with feats of magic and mystery, Howard Thurston's interest in the question of life after death as the seriously ill body was prepared for final journey.

He was reported to have formed an agreement with three others—all fellow magicians—that whichever one died first would attempt a reunion beyond the grave.

Mrs. Thurston declined to comment on the pact made by Thurston, Harry Houdini, another famed magician, Harry Kellar and Will Doyle, British spiritualist and author, who died recently in London, and recently in Syria. She said, however, she may discuss it later.

Pneumonia, edema, cerebral hemorrhage was fatal yesterday to Thurston, famous illusionist, who caused him to give up his studies for the ministry. He was 68.

4 YOUNG PEOPLE BURNED TO DEATH

AT THE CAPITOL

"Timothy's Quest" and "Dancing Feet"

"Timothy's Quest," which opens today at the Capitol Theatre, is a screen presentation of the story of the same name by Kate Douglas Wiggin. It is an appealing picture about a thwarted farm romance rightly told by a sturdy lad.

Director Charles Barton has preserved the quaint homespun quality of the original story. The types are true to life. The action, which moves from the slum district of a large town to the scenes of a rural village, holds the attention.

The story opens at the turn of the century. Little nine-year-old Timothy and his sister Cay are mistreated by the Cudds, a sinister couple who trade in homeless children. When Timothy hears that Cay is to be taken away, he effects their escape by a smart ruse.

Hitting aboard a farm wagon's tarpaulin, they slip out in the country, and find themselves hungry and without shelter. Timothy resolutely sets out to find a home for Cay, and at last finds a place he thinks she will like. Viola Cummings, a village spinster, is pitied by the children for the kids temporary shelter. Under Timothy's spell, she changes from a grim recluse to a likable lady. The plucky boy is also instrumental in advancing a romance against which the spinster has set her mind.

Barbara Kent, very in her first feminine leading part interprets young Miss Cummings' part with spirit and romance. Opposite her is Tom Keene. The little role is played by Dickie Moore as the little nine-year-old trouper with an excellent flair for acting. Around him revolves the action. Sally Martin is appealing as the little sister, and Virginia Weidler, Jackie Moran and Phyllis Kennedy role as Semantha, Josiah Cobb's adopted daughter, Bert Roach has a brief bit.

Elizabeth Patterson, as the sour spinster aunt, makes her difficult role ring true, J. M. Kerrigan and Guy Bates Post appear in interesting child traders charge the picture with menace.

Young and old will like "Timothy's Quest."

Second Feature "Dancing Feet"

The public has expressed a preference for tap dancing and it's getting it in plentitude this week at the Capitol Theatre where "Dancing Feet," featuring Ben Lyon, Joan Marsh, Eddie Nugent and Arthur Treacher is the current attraction.

The new Republic photoplay lists as an excellent tap dancing act, the premiere performers are Joan Marsh and Eddie Nugent, both of whom have earned laurels on the stage and screen, but neither as a team have ever had the chance to display their talents as dancers.

"Dancing Feet" is a gay and tuneful comedy about a young society debutante who quarrels with her wealthy grandfather and takes a job as hostess in a cheap dance hall where she meets a wise-cracking young man with an ambition to become a radio dance school instructor.

Ben Lyon, appearing as a wealthy playboy, is excellent in his role. Miss Marsh and Nugent render a pleasing performance, and Arthur Treacher is consistently amusing as well in her role of a hard-boiled hostess with the proverbial heart of gold.

Among supporting players whose performances are worthy of commendation are Purnell Pratt, Herbert Rawlinson, Frances James, Jason Burke, Lillian Harmer, Herbert Corthell and J. C. Edwards' orchestra.

Joseph Sankey's direction of the Rob Roden novel is outstanding.

AT THE BELLE

Irvin Cobb Dean of Humorists Starred in Great Laugh Picture "Judge Priest" Opens Today

"Everybody's Old Man" is one of the new pictures coming to the Belle theatre, tomorrow and Friday, making its debut as the delightful comedy-romance of canny age pitted against modern youth. It introduces Irvin S. Cobb in his first starring role, and gives full scope to the distinctive style of the genial, kindly wit that has long made him America's favorite story teller.

Cobb, who made his sensational feature debut as the jovial steamboat captain of "Steamboat Round the Bend", occupies the centre of interest in the new picture, with lobely Rochelle Hudson, Jimmy Dodd and Norman Foster cast second to head the splendid supporting group.

The plot deals with the curious adventures of a family of eccentric eccentrics when the retires from business to devote the time to enlightening out a group of wild and reckless youngsters.

Rochelle Hudson, Foster are coupled in the romantic leads and Jane Darwell, Dorothy Peterson and Warren Hymer are prominent in the supporting cast of the picture.

Jane Withers Laugh Film

In Gentle Julia," the second feature attraction on the same program Charington's frothy story and one of the screen's most talented little comedienne's are brought together in a heart warming romance of the dear old days when men peg leg boots and automobiles were gasoline canoes.

Happy impish Jeane Withers, in her most mischievous mood, is the star of Miss Hunt's rib-tickling romantic difficulties. The picture has all the elements to appeal to adults, until it finally brings to the fore the little miss who is sure to make little Jane a sort of inadvertent.

When George Meeker, a smooth city product, threatens to cut Tom Brown out of the affections of Miss Hunt, Jane Withers joins forces with Tom and the clash of flendish schemes. The climax of the comedy is the hilarious boat race scene that brings us to the close with Tom and Julia safely in each other's arms and Jane chortling glee. Hattie McDaniels, Harry Hayden and Russell Hicks appear in leading roles.

Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.10, the last complete show starting at 9.00. "Everybody's Old Man," starts daily at 2.40, 7.30 and 9.50, "Gentle Julia" starts daily at 1.45 and 8.30 p.m.

"Follow the Fleet" Leaving

"Follow the Fleet", a musical jeon of marvellous melody, romance and mirth, all that combination of fun-making, will be the last picture to be shown at the Belle theatre this week.

Of three kittens born to a cat owned by B. King of Lindsay, one had no tail at all, the second had the mere vestige of one, while the third had a normal tail.

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The long trek down summer's baseball lane was under way today with the batsmen marching triumphantly at the head of the procession.

The sun came down like a benediction yesterday after rainy April weather, that had disrupted spring training schedules for a week, on a faithful thronged eight major league ball parks and the pastime ushered in with fanfare and the crash of numerous base hits.

President Roosevelt threw-ing out the first ball at Washington and Babe Ruth, the colossus of clouts, sitting on the sidelines for the first time in many a year, some 206,000 baseball fans aggregate crowd in five years, jammed into parks in the two major circuits.

The largest gathering was at the Polo Grounds in New York where 56,886 saw the Giants come from behind to defeat Brooklyn 8-6. Hal Schumacher, the pitcher, who was supposed to have the Indian sign on the Dodgers, was routed in three ers before his mates; riding on homers by Mel Ott and Jack Bartell, overcame the efforts of George Earnshaw, veteran Dodger hurler who went on to win in the ninth by Kings. Earnshaw banged out two hits and batted in one-run, but he allowed a total of 17 clean hits.

The closest game of the day was played in Cleveland where the Red Senators nosed out the New York Yankees 1-0, Buck Newsom of the Senators and Lefty Gomez of the Yanks put on a pitching duel that until the ninth inning when Cecil Travis singled and Carl Reynolds slapped out a two-bagger that decided the issue.

President Roosevelt had ridden into the park in a limousine to toss out the first ball and start a seriaIs, that are considered by the spectator, more skillful at shagging a long ball than the professional players, make off with the prize.

Tigers Rolling Along

In Cleveland, Lynwood Rowe started the champion Detroit Tigers off on the right foot, when he shut out the Cleveland Indians 4-0 before 14,300. He fanned four batters, passed none as Hank Greenberg and Al Simmons took care of the batting chores. Mark Koenig drove in two runs in the first innings with a double and Simmons, newcomer to the Tiger lair, drove in the third run with a double in the sixth.

Even Dizzy Dean had little to crow about. His fancy offerings were batted to the tune of six innings as the Cubs clobbered the Cards 13-2 in an open wear, the only one under the sun in this game, however, for the Chicago Asst. Mgr. Warneke, who had to duck as 13 his rang off rival bats during his seven innings of service. Billy Herman, Cubs second baseman, who led the league with 97 doubles last year, batted four times to signalize the year's defence of that honor, besides getting a home run and a single.

There were new murmurings around Boston's Braves field this morning over the sudden and unexpected slopping of Joe Cronin of the Washington Nats who hooted loudly at his expensive Red Sox outslugged the lowly Athletics to gain a 9-4 verdict. Cronin sent in four pinch pitchers to stop the Sox assault but they were belted for 14 hits. Catcher Rocco Slinger was maltreated here, while Clark Wes Ferrell being worked for 10 hits and six runs.

Derringer Treated Roughly

In Cincinnati it was Paul Derringer, No. 1 hurler for the Reds, who was treated roughly. The Pirates batted him from the box in the third inning and went on to win 9-6. Red Hafey, manager of the retired Chick, hammered out the first round-trip blast of the season, and he leaned on one in the first inning.

It was a battle of extra base hits in Chicago where the White Sox defeated the St. Louis Browns 7-6. Johnny Whitehead and Ivy Andrews were forced to abdicate as hill kings in this game as the Browns collected nine hits and the White Sox three more.

The Phils took the first of what was expected to be a long series of falls out of the Boston Bees, 4-1, as Curt Davis limited the Bostonians to four safe blows. The Phillies made all of their runs off Danny MacFayden in the third.

Altogether there was a total of 104 hits, of which 13 were homers, in the eight games.

FRESHMAN CLASS ROUNDLY PADDLED IN OPENING GAMES

By SCOTTY RESTON

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, April 18.—(AP)— Just to make them respect their elders, the new freshman class in the Junior was roundly paddled in yesterday's opening baseball games.

The young upstarts managed to get five hits in 37 innings at bat and still doesn't constitute deadly hitting.

There were 18 newcomers in the starting lineups, all with impressive scholastic baseball records, but the Athletics' new fins baseman, made a significant start by getting two hits in four times at bat against the Red Sox star pitcher, Wes Ferrell. Another outstanding feat was performed by a 31-year old youngster whom Frankie Frisch, the Fordham coach, invited into pinch hit. He was Erwin Willis Morgan, former Miami University athlete. He hit Lon Warneke's first pitch for a home run and drove in two runs.

Johnny Cooney, Brooklyn's veteran "rookie" who was last year's outstanding hitter in the National Association, also managed to get a hit.

With Oglesby and Cooney, the other youngsters who were graduated to the major qualifiers in the Junior yesterday were Mike Krevisky, Boston College star; who got one low hit in five times at bat for the White Sox; George Puccinelli, batting star of the Virginia baseball batting champion with Baltimore, who got his hitting against the field for the A's against the Red Sox; Buddy Hassett of the Dodgers, who got one hit for four against the Dodgers; George McQuinn, Reds' first baseman; Lou Novikoff of the Phillies, Oscar Rickhardt and Ray Berres of the Dodgers and Frank Hayes of the Athletics.

McQuinn got two from Newark, Norris, the former Minneapolis infielder; Rickhardt and Berres, a pair of former Pacific coast leaguers, and Hayes, former Albany catcher, all went hitless.

The Cards jet several other youngsters take looks at big league batting. Stanat Martin, who was an All-American Columbia last year, replaced Frisch at second near the end of the game; Bruce Ogrodowski went behind the plate to give Virgil Davis a rest, and Lynn King former Duke University football and baseball player, went in and took several ineffectual swings in place of Ed Dressen in the outfield.

Frisch, willing to try anything, near the end of the Cubs game, sent in a couple of new pitchers, Mike Ryba, formerly of Columbus and Bill McCrew, who pitched with Boston last year. McCrew gave three hits one inning but Ryba held the Cubs without a hit in his inning.

"UNKNOWN" TO MEET E. MESKE

Jack Corcoran Has Arranged Fine Card For Opening Show

Local wrestling fans will remember the Masked Marvel, who campaigned here some three years ago. Another mystery wrestler has leaped into prominence of recent months and this sensation, who calls himself "The Unknown" is to be the main bout of the Queensbury Club's opening show here next Monday night. Promoter Jack Corcoran who says "The Unknown" is coming here to meet the original Marvel, has matched him with Emil Meske, Ohio State champion, which means a very thorough test for the man with the mask on.

"The Unknown" has had nearly fifty bouts and has won them all but two in which Eddie Quinn and Joe Savoldi, leading contenders for the world championship held him to draws. Among his victims was Al Getzewich, Lou Plummer, who are here before as The Marvel and Ali Baba, and a host of others gaining this new enigma of the mat.

Meske is rated as one of the best of the younger heavyweights to come to the front in the past few years. He is 25 years old and has four years of professional experience. He is a rubber athlete who has made good, having starred at football and wrestling at the Ohio State University.

Al Dunlop, rough house Canadian, who will need no introduction, is finally will be in the semi-final bout. Dunlop, the Toronto, Canada headed Bostonian. Dunlop, Corcoran states, is the most improved wrestler in the sport, having come along rapidly in the past six months.

Andy Mercy, Norwegian flash from Minneapolis, and Antonio Partin of Montreal, will be in the opening bout. All these men have been featured in the Queensbury Club shows and are them especially Meske, are outstanding drawing cards at Madison Square Garden, New York.

STAGEPLAYDOWNS NEXT YEAR WHERE INTEREST BEST

C.A.H.A. Makes Provision to Increase The Bank Account

MAKE NEW AGREEMENT

Claimed British Officials Ignored Agreement of Last Year

By ELMER DULMAGE

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, April 18.—(CP)— Big time amateur hockey, which has taken a steady beating in recent years, particularly at the box office, will go into next season to fill the money bags again. The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association isn't broke, just badly bent. Something is going to be done.

The result may be that titular honors and senior playdown series next spring will be staged, where interest in the events is greatest. The policy of dividing the International final between Winnipeg and Toronto is likely to be scrapped.

Before the C.A.H.A. annual convention passed an economy program at its closing session here yesterday, some interesting facts and figures about backsliding of amateur hockey interest were presented.

The organization operated last year at a loss of roughly $2,000, holding of the Memorial Cup playdowns cost about $2,900; the Allan Cup playdowns were conducted at an approximate loss of $1,900.

Neither the Toronto nor all Toronto between Saskatoon Wesley and West Toronto, nor the senior Toronto Marlboros, Montreal Canadiens and Kimberley Dynamiters attracted capacity crowds more than a few years ago. Less than half fifteen houses turned out for the games. Only a few years ago the C.A.H.A. was affluent to the extent of a $60,000 bank balance. Today there is a balance of about $15,000, which won't last long if the title series fail to attract more than the current numbers.

Authority Vested

One remedy approved yesterday was the placing of authority to name terms of the finals with the C. A. H. A. president, who was instructed to keep an eye open for a good gate. That will be the chief consideration in future, when Canadian title series are awarded.

Should Montreal or Vancouver be the amateur hockey scene next spring because finals are produced in those districts, then it is also together Misky President Cecil Duncan of Oilbwa, elected to office yesterday will send the finals to either of those places. He went out in Toronto-Winnipeg, under under such circumstances, where local interest doesn't exist.

The C.A.H.A. also stands to save about $8,500 by such economies as reducing travelling expenses of players and delegates to annual meetings; no longer paying expenses of the international referee; eliminating annual grants to branches and reducing honorariums of officers.

C.A.H.A. executives planned a busy off-season for themselves when they barred Canadian players from going to Europe for any but a transfer agreement with the British Ice Hockey Association was formulated. British officials it was claimed ignored an agreement reached last year.

Sometime between now and next fall they hope to have the emigration situation in hand, as it stands both England and the United States. A draft agreement with U. S. authorities, approved as far as the C.A.H.A. executive will limit exodus of Canadians to the gate figure from each team a year.

MANAGER SMYTHE SIGNS 7 OF TEAM

Conacher a Holdout Last Season First One to Accept Terms

Toronto, April 18.—(CP)—Seven Toronto Maple Leaf players of last era are under contract for next season, Manager Conny Smythe announced last night that the date left for a Western Canada Exhibition.

Charlie Conacher, Bill Thoms, Russ Bell and Dick Mets have signed new contracts and Bob Gracie, Buzz Boll and Art Jackson will play under two-year contracts signed last fall.

Conacher and Mets have had trouble coming to an agreement but have been previously married for seasons and the right winger has been a holdout in starting training each year. He is said to receive the league salary limit of $7,000. Thoms and Boll both showed great improvement this year and probably received increases.

Joe Primeau, who announced his retirement after holding reins for the game has promised Smythe a definite decision when the Leafs return from the West.

Goalies Talking to Themselves When Smaller Sticks Suggested

Ross is a very fine fellow with rib forwards, but does not agree well at all with the goalkeepers following his stick idea. That's the impression you get after a chat with some of the National League players here.

Some years ago, the Bruin head gave the League a new net. It did not worry with the game because couldn't hold a fast shot and gave the goalies a break on many dribbling goals. But the netmen don't hold that against Ross.

Little Roy Worters of New York Americans and Lorne Chabot of Montreal Maroons, who have been around the Big League a long time take unkindly to the small-sided stick idea. They may be prejudiced, however, as they both are goalkeepers.

Let Ross Try

"I'd like to see Ross go in there now, big stick and all, and come out with any new-fangled ideas to cut out our protection," Chabot hollered. "What business has he got to tell us how big our sticks should be."

"When did he ever play goal?" Worters asked. "He's a pretty good friends of mine, but not good enough to start anything like that." Ross added he liked the Ross net.

Charlie Conacher not only likes the idea but is willing to go further than Ross. The Maple Leaf boomer has been the leading scorer in two of the past three seasons and has the hardest shot in the N. H. L.

"The goalkeepers," said Conacher last night, "should be sent up with their sticks altogether and also cut down on the pads. Then, maybe we could get a few goals against them."

"Fra," jeered a reporter, "and you might bill a couple of the defencemen fellows like."

"How wouldn't that be too bad," said Charlie.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Up in Oshawa there's many a sad face today, this conference action on their first O.G.B.L. pennant since 1931 the Oshawa Majors went into their business of importation of players in a wholesale manner, but forgot one thing standing item; they forgot to enquire into the past activities of their imported imports. Pop out of the 1926 transfer bag came four applicants from Oshawa, who refused to follow it is rumoured. Of the four initial requests for transfer, the two mostly desired were turned down by the O.B.A.A. yesterday. Players from North of the Arctic Circle teammates on the Stratford Nationals last year and highly recommended infielders, were the two to "get it in the neck" and are the diamond celebrities grinding out their memoirs today? Players Turner and MacQuarrie, Toronto battery, received their o.k. to play for the Chevies, however.

When queried on the subject, Bill Snyder, secretary of the O.B. A.A. stated both Miller and Hildebrand had been previously warned not to change residence too quickly in those districts, that it is also together Misky President Cecil Duncan of Oilbwa, elected to office yesterday will send the finals to either of those places. He went out in Toronto-Winnipeg, under under such circumstances, where local interest doesn't exist.

The C.A.H.A. also stands to save about $8,500 by such economies as reducing travelling expenses of players and delegates to annual meetings; no longer paying expenses of the international referee; eliminating annual grants to branches and reducing honorariums of officers.

C.A.H.A. executives planned a busy off-season for themselves when they barred Canadian players from going to Europe for any but a transfer agreement with the British Ice Hockey Association was formulated. British officials it was claimed ignored an agreement reached last year.

EVEN BALANCE IN INTERNATIONAL SAYS PRESIDENT

(By Charles H. Knapp)

(President of the International League)

(Written For the Associated Press)

Baltimore, April 18.— (AP)— The International Baseball League, in its 53rd consecutive season, should have one of its usual close races. Of course we hope for another flag case similar to that of 1928, when, at the finish, there was only a difference of 58 percentage points between the first and seventh clubs, but we can hardly expect it. Races like that come only once in several decades.

It firmly believes, however, that in the 1934 competition for the pennant and for the opportunity to participate in the Governors' Cup series there will be more clubs with chances for these honors than we have had in the past few years. A team in the second division running July Fourth even shouldn't despair. We don't seem to have any stand pats this year. Everybody has balanced.

That was my observation down in Florida and it has been confirmed by the first few games played with seven of the eight teams in action. The only club they didn't see was Baltimore, which was not training down there.

Our teams seem evenly matched—in fact, I have never known of any season when at the start there was such a general belief that any one of six or seven of them might not be the winner.

Abe Eliowitz May Play in Toronto

OTTAWA, April 18.—(CP)— It was reported here today, Abe Eliowitz, star Hebrew halfback of Ottawa Rough Riders of the International Rugby Union, will join Toronto next year, if the Hebrews decide to in the 1936 big four campaign.

Eliowitz was said to be considering propositions from both Montreal and Argos and will make a decision in the matter this week-end.

Triple threat man on the Ottawa team, the big half-back last year led the League scorers and was awarded the Jeff Russel Memorial trophy.

It's Streamlined

The New C·C·M "FLYTE"

HERE, boys, is the most exciting news that you have heard for years—C.C.M. have made a braked new kind of a bicycle, the likes of which you have never seen before. A streamlined bicycle that has all the speedy lines of the new motor cars. It is called the "Flyte" and it looks as swift as a swallow.

The wonderful new "Flyte" has the advantages of the other well known C.C.M. bicycles, in addition it has a streamlined frame and streamlined front fork (both made of chromol aircraft tubing)—streamlined saddle and special streamline enamelling effect.

The boys who ride "Flyte" bicycles this Spring will enjoy the thrill of their lives, because the "Flyte" is the smartest thing on two wheels and will be the talk of every group of boys in town.

When you go to buy a bicycle this Spring ask the dealer to show you the new "Flyte", and remember it has the famous C.C.M. Triplex Hanger (the power plant of the bicycle) that makes a C.C.M. so easy to ride. It has the sure-acting, powerful Hercules Coaster Brake and strong wheels with Endrick steel rims and rustless steel spokes. It has the C.C.M. straight-line drive and easy-running ball bearing Gibson pedals. It has Dunlop "Fort" Tires, C.C.M.'s super-Chromium plating and C.C.M.'s baked-on enamel finish. All the working parts are of special hardened steel, uniformly tempered by C.C.M. to give long and trouble-free service.

In these and many other ways the new and exciting streamlined C.C.M. "Flyte" is the smartest thing out this Spring.

The price of the "Flyte" is a little more than some of the conventional styles of C.C.M. bicycles because the cost of manufacturing is a lot more, but it is well worth every cent of its price. The price is $45.00.

"GLITTERING GIRL"

By MAY CHRISTIE

"Well—there are some worse things than just getting right," Mrs. Tyson stopped back. "Though for you old thing, Aunt and Uncle were out of town all night, or—poppa speak, baby!"

And with that she wheeled her cot to the window, giving Vernon no chance to reply, and declaring that the sunlight was so fresh she couldn't keep him still. "Every, we must be ourselves bones for luncheon."

x x x

The gilded electric clock on the mantelpiece of the Tyson's drawing room chimed a silvery peal. It was a quarter to five.

Before a small low tea-table that was covered with Queen Anne silver and delicate china, and set close to the electric fire that glowed as with live logs, sat Mrs. Tyson. Ever since Martina, the daughter of the Tyson great white, had been presented (by the Ambassador ship (no matter how far out) with the English aristocracy, Sadie Tyson had aped, as she herself would have put it, "the ways of the upper classes abroad".

Of course she liked a cup of tea in any case—loving tea without any cream in it. But do be elegantly dressed at the "tea hour," and presiding over the sparkling Sheffield silver and china (purchased through Martina), made Mrs. Tyson feel that she was "aristocratic," in fact. This was the right background for Vernon, she felt.

Even the rich black velvet gown she wore, with its deep armine collar, had been purchased from a dressmaker Martina had recommended. What they would have done without Martina, heaven alone knew! She did hope Vernon would be sensible with the Prince today!

"Oo, and tidy your hair and change your frock, dear," she said crepe, Mon Dieu plait." Her mother loved Vernon critically.

Vernon did do something to her hair that was becoming, but it turned to the light, coming from in a plain dark blue dress.

"You're a difficult girl. I must say! Now sit down, and don't fidget, I suppose you know by now how the Prince wants us to entertain you. Any other girl but you would be tickled to death at the very idea of being a Princess!"

What could Vernon say? The very worst was coming! What a shock it would be for poor Sadie! But, knowing her as she did, I would spoil everything were she to unfold to her mother now the true identity of these people—let her know that the Prince already had a wife, but was willing and anxious to commit bigamy!

Trying to sound casual, she said: "I met two charming elderly ladies who are coming in for tea today."

"You'd see earthly business to ask them when you knew the Prince's coming!" her mother snapped.

Jake Tyson walked in to the drawing room. Like Vernon, he was nervous and upset. The forthcoming interview would scarcely be a pleasant one.

Promptly at five o'clock, the door bell rang, and Ariana, in smart uniform, went to answer it. Not only Prince Karinoff, but the lady known as Martina de Bray, entered the drawing room and greeted the Tysons effusively.

For a moment, Vernon felt dizzy. She wished with all her sobbing courage that she could run out of it from here. But if the missing necklace was to be restored—if poor Dad's cheque was to be returned to him—if she were to get rid of the Prince for good and all—she must stick boldly to her guns and confront them.

"English tea? How delicious! Your feet it proves your Kin Rich blood! Doesn't it, dear Sadie?" gushed Martina. She loosened her fur, patted her hair, and gazed about the luxurious drawing room, sniffing delicately. "What divine scent!" she looked at Vernon archly. "I'll wager these are Ivan's roses!"

"They are indeed," smirked Sadie. "The Prince is a real gentleman, I'll say—even though my carelessness child did lose his beautiful necklace!"

"It is a great mystery," said the Prince in his melodious, ingratiating voice, looking directly at Vernon, "as one day concerned about the loss—not for myself—but because, you, I carried the jewellings my longer, Mrs. Tyson—Mr. Tyson—I love your beau-ti-ful daughter—I had wished to give it to her as a wed-ding present!"

Mrs. Tyson swung triumphantly round at that, her gaze going from Vernon to her husband and back again, though she would hypnotise her into a suitable answer. He had meant what he said! Even her parents he was now honorably asking Vernon's hand in marriage!

Vernon sat silent. Her face had turned very white. She gripped her handbag in her left hand, while her right hand was propped against the mantelpiece, as though for support.

"Can't you say anything, child? Don't you realise the Prince has done you a great honor?" snapped her mother.

The girl's lips shook. She seemed deeply moved. That was but natural.

And then she spoke, in a low, clear voice. Had she gone stark mad? For she said, looking directly at her suitor: "He has done me no honor at all. He has done me a great dishonor."

"What?" simultaneously exclaimed both Martina de Bray and Mr. Tyson.

"He has done me a great dishonor in suggesting bigamy to me," said Vernon clearly. "The Prince IS ALREADY MARRIED, Mother!"

CHAPTER XXX.

The Prince leaped from his chair. "You are crazy, mademoiselle! You are quite mad! You do not know what you are saying!"

"Oh, my poor child—Vernon darling—oh, Prince—the honor has been too great for her!" Sadie squealed.

"He is married, Mother—let him deny it as he may! There is his wife—who calls herself Mrs. de Bray—that is not her name at all—nor is he Prince Karinoff—their names are Matchaera, Mother!"

Martina bounced up. "There's not a word of truth in it! Why, it's perfectly insulting!"

"Vernon, go to your room, you wicked, ungrateful girl!" Sadie exclaimed. "Oh, Prince—Martina—take no notice of her—she doesn't know what she's saying—"

"Sadie, be quiet! Let our girl talk! Sit down, Mrs. de Bray, Now, go on, Maggie!" Jake Tyson crossed the floor and put a protecting, encouraging arm about his daughter.

Vernon said slowly and clearly: "You can both deny it as you will, but I have proof of what I say. Your names are not de Bray and Karinoff. You are Marie and Serge Matchaera. You have been married for several years, and your doings are well known on the Continent of Europe."

"It's a lie! A scandalous lie! I'll see you! Oh, after all I've done for you, introducing you in Society, and looking out for your interests—this is sHOcking!" wailed Martina.

"Before you do that," Vernon replied, holding her ground, her Liberty arm about her, "the police—if I may so—will be called in to identify you."

The Prince exclaimed: "Martina, we will go. These people are not for us. They are in-fa-lib-le below us."

Vernon played her trump card. "My detective is waiting just outside the door of this apartment. If you attempt to leave without my permission, at a word from me he will arrest you both."

At that, the Prince burned on both his lips rolling back from his teeth for all the world like a jungle animal. "You—" he snarled, "another word from you and I will brand you everywhere as the loose woman that you are—you who have passed the entire night alone with me in my apartment!"

"Oh, Maggie—Vernon—the disgrace, come back, Prince! Oh! Oh! weak Mrs. Tyson.

"You drugged me—deliberately drugged me, in the Gypsy Pavilion," Vernon declared, "you did it to steal the diamonds and substitute the false ones—it was a vile plot—but I will force you to return them to Dvonte's immediately! Stop crying, Mother! I've proof of everything I say!"

"Where?" asked Mrs. de Bray incredulously, her hand on the Prince's arm, and her face like a demon's.

"Right here in this bag, for one. Look at this passport with your two photographs in it and your REAL signatures under them!"

The Prince approached her, and like a cat with one swipe of his paw, made a sudden predatory pounce. But Vernon was too quick for him.

"No, no, you don't—although even if you did get it, it wouldn't do you any good, for I have a photostatic copy of this passport. You entered the Port of New York thirteen months ago—with this person, Madame Marie Matchaera, your wife! Both of you have been robbing us in your own mean ways—your wife by posing as a leader in Society, and taking commissions on everything we did or bought! You, Serge Matchaera, by deliberately stealing the necklace after you drugged me and artificially carried me to your apartment."

"Your name, Maggie—your good name—" screamed Mrs. Tyson.

"My name's as pure as it ever was, and so am I, and so both my name and I will remain—in spite of these rotters!" Vernon had all her wits about her now, and an immense courage, for she was in the right. "I just came from the Customs House today and there an Inspector assured me that there has been no declaration of the so-called famous Karinoff necklace brought into the United States. So it was either stolen, or smuggled or both!"

Here the Prince made for the door, and opened it, only to come from McGraw, that redoubtable detective—

"Yes, come back. We'll explain everything. Poor little Vernon has been frightfully misled," cooed Mrs. de Bray, who was cleverer in a crisis than her so-complice.

"Now, Vernon, this is a private matter between the five of us, and if need never go any further, if you'll be a sensible child! Come, show them your legal papers," she commanded.

A triumphant sneer on his face, the Prince produced what appeared to be authentic Karinoff documents.

Just as Jake Tyson was perusing them carefully, Ariana ushered two elderly ladies into the drawing-room.

The stout one exclaimed to Mrs. de Bray: "Why, Madame Matchaera, we meet again!"

Said the thin one, raising her eyebrows and staring disapprovingly through her pince-nez at the Prince: "So it's you, Mr. Matchaera —quite a long way from Monte Carlo! I haven't had the pleasure of meeting with you since the death of our mutual friend, poor Prince Ivan Karinoff, who passed away at Constantinople!"

x x x x

The so-called Prince Karinoff turned a motley shade of greenish-white as the apparently nonchalant words of the newcomer. They tore through his pretenses, took the gilt words of explanation from his tongue, left him high and dry. His usually alert brain for the moment ceased to function.

But his stand-by, the so-called Martina de Bray, shattered the appalling silence. With a quick, bird-like movement she put a hand on the Prince's arm, and addressing the four women in the room, said, in a staccato voice: "If you will excuse my friend and me, we would like a word in the dining room with Mr. Tyson." With the air of a duchess, she swept across the floor to her host, and took his arm. The trio disappeared out of earshot.

Sadie Tyson breathed: "Well, of all the goings-on, this beats the band!"

THE TARZAN TWINS (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

Tarzan swung into the forest to begin his vague wanderings in search of Dick and Doc. For the first time in his life his steely nerves tingled as he pictured the hundred pounds menaces of men and beasts which might even now be threatening the boys . . . .

But at that moment, Dick and Doc were safe enough in the crotch of a great tree, where utter exhaustion had driven them into a fitful slumber. At dawn they awoke, cold, miserable, hungry. Despite his discomfort, Doc grinned bravely. "I wasn't so bad," he insisted.

"Humph!" grunted Dick; "I wish I were home in my bed." "Oh, this old jungle isn't so bad," Doc blustered; "no lions or anything got us, did they?" But Doc did not realize that slightly brought the peril of prowling jungle men—more menacing than jungle beasts.

Not far away, a sleek black warrior moved silently along the jungle trail. He was armed with shield, bow and arrows, and a spear, after the manner of savage fighting men. But his most striking peculiarity was his pointed, filed teeth—the mark of a cannibal.

POLICE HOPE TO TRAP 4 BANDITS

Holdup Men Abandon Distinctly Colored Auto.

Lachute, Que., April 15.—(CP)—Their task made more difficult by the fact the quarry had abandoned their distinctively-colored automobile, 35 detectives spread far-like through southwestern Ontario and the Laurentian Mountain District of Quebec today hoping to trap four bandits, who held up the bank of Nova Scotia here and escaped with $3,500.

Provincial Police, found their maroon-colored automobile here a ditch off the main highway between Chatham and Grenville, Que., last night. The robbers apparently took to their foot and fled on foot. Police were faced with the possibility they had divided the money and separated in the hope of escaping the net drawn around that part of the country.

All through the night police armed with submachine guns, rifles and pistols, blocked all highways, watched railway stations and bridges and halted anyone, that looked the least suspicious. Ferry-crossing points to the United States such as Prescott, Brockville and Morrisburg were checked without result.

A report the maroon sedan was seen near Hawkesbury last night was checked but not confirmed and it is believed inaccurate in view of the subsequent abandonment of the automobile on the Quebec side of the Interprovincial border.

REFUSE TO SING NATIONAL ANTHEM

Pupils in Some Schools Display Communistic Trend Says Trustee

Toronto, April 15.—There are schools in Ontario where the children have refused to sing the national anthem, Mrs. Mary Brooks-field Lowthian, of Niagara Falls, told the urban trustees' section of the Ontario Educational Association, yesterday. She advocated visual education as a means of coping with communistic propaganda. The film, she declared, was potentially greater force than any other educational agency of modern times.

"Let wise people select a nation's pictures and free lance will be necessary. It is imperative that we have an educational film bureau in Canada, supported by substantial Government grant, if our educational problem is to function efficiently," she said.

Publicly denouncing objectionable pictures usually only packed the theatres with irresponsible people, said Mrs. Lowthian, urging instead that emphasis be placed on endorsing the good as already has happened in that Hollywood producers were now concerned about the mental, moral or spiritual uplift of Canadian youth, now were they in the business because they loved the public, but rather they were interested in box office receipts.

"Thousands of our boys and girls leave our secondary schools every year; an increasingly large number need but cannot find the work; sooner or later each community contributes its quota of teen-age lawbreakers," continued the speakers that an idle brain is the devil's workshop," she said.

$100,000 DRUGS SEIZED

Blue Mountain, Miss., April 15—(UP)—Federal and state narcotics agents confiscated 3,000 pounds of marihuana, smoking weed, in what was believed the largest seizure of the drug in United States' history. The marihuana, valued at between $75,000 and $150,000, was confiscated on the farm of S. E. Jernigan, three miles east of here.

Jane Wilson, features with Tom Brown and pretty Marsha Hunt in Booth Tarkington's "Seventeen" romantic story, "Gentle Julia" coming to the Belle tomorrow.

Religious Teaching Urged in Schools

Toronto, April 15.—Strong emphasis upon the value and importance of religious instruction in schools, and the training of teachers for this purpose, was expressed by Dr. Orrel R. Ault of Ottawa Normal School, when he addressed the Training Section of the O.E.A. yesterday.

Religious instruction should aim for belief in God, the principles of right living, knowledge of the Bible, Christian citizenship, proper observance of the religious days, appreciation of denominational beliefs, and appreciation of the literature of the Bible, Dr. Ault believed.

Another member of the staff of Ontario's schools, he said, was instruction in home life to prepare girls for the direction and care of the home, as well as teaching them the importance of the family as the institution of society. Other matters of importance were information in the budgeting of the family income, decoration of the home, choice of dress, care of children, dietetics and health.

FAMILY TRAVELS ON 1935 LICENCE

Four Months' Journey Draws Near An End

Windsor, Ont., April 15 (CP)—In the old touring car in which they set out on their eastward trek from Rosewood, Man., last December, the family of Khalil King rolled into Windsor today after a stay of several weeks with the United States Immigration authorities. The car still carried 1935 license plates.

Khalil, his wife, mother-in-law, Mrs. E. McNab, and two children, are bound for Lennox Co., where cousins of King live.

To escape cold weather on their journey east, which they started with cash assets of $78, the family drove across the border into the United States. Their car broke down in Michigan and immigration authorities took the situation in hand.

The United States Immigration Department proved hospitable. Garagemen overhauled the old automobile until it was in shape for another run down the highway, Today they filled his tank with gasoline to enable him to make the trip, decided saving! THREAT TO KIDNAP BELGIAN ROYAL CHILDREN

Police Hold Ex-Convict, Who Wrote Threat Letter To Monarch of Belgians

Fruitless Walks in Woods Where Man Directed Money Should be Left Followed by Arrest on Hint in Note

KING LEOPOLD ON HOLIDAY

Gangster' Demanded $132,000 in Francs as Price to Desist in His Letter to King

Brussels, April 16 — (AP) — A threat to kidnap the motherless children of King Leopold of the Belgians was disclosed today with the arrest at Liege, eastern Belgium, of a 31-year-old former convict, Nicholas Elsen.

Police of the city of Liege said the arrested man confessed to writing letters to the King, threatening to abduct the royal children, whose mother, Queen Astrid, was killed in an automobile accident, unless money was left in woods near the border city.

Police said they lay in wait in the woods, in an attempt to capture the author of the letter, but that he failed to appear.

The writer was finally traced, the police said, through a reference in one letter to the fact that the person threatening the kidnapping was a former convict.

Children Closely Guarded

King Leopold's children, closely guarded in recent weeks during the investigation of the threats, left for a seaside holiday soon after Elsen was arrested.

King Leopold also was leaving Brussels incognito today, to go to Switzerland. It was believed the monarch would go later to his sister, now Crown Princess Marie Jose of Italy, who is at present inspecting Red Cross work in East Africa.

King Leopold of the Belgians has three small children. Their mother, Queen Astrid, died in an automobile accident near Lucerne, Switzerland, last August 29, when her daughter, Josephine Charlotte, was seven years old, her son Baudoin 5, and Albert 14 months old.

Police said Elsen signed his letters "gangster" and demanded 2,000,000 francs — about $132,000.

He was released from prison last year after serving 42 years for theft.

ETHIOPIA REJECTS TERMS OF PEACE ITALY PROPOSES

Committee of Thirteen Regard Terms as Unsatisfactory

MEETING IS SECRET

Ethiopia Demands That Conciliation Be Within Covenant Terms

Geneva, April 16 (CP)—Ethiopia has flatly rejected Italy's peace terms. The decision of the League of Nations Committee of 13, which is meeting secretly today, regard was highly unfavorable.

The British have taken the ground that sanctions should be lifted until satisfactory terms are obtained.

An authoritative source said that Ethiopia has the right to conduct direct negotiations with Ethiopia for peace through League of Nations' intervention.

Fail Sanctions Asked.

Ethiopia sent a note to the League declaring that Italy's peace terms show she is not prepared to negotiate within the framework of the covenant.

Ethiopia therefore demands the application of the full sanctions provided under Article 16 of the League Covenant, "thus fulfilling all the obligations undertaken by the members of the League by coming to the assistance immediately to the help of the victim," the note said.

They were told in an authoritative source today as demanding the right to negotiate direct negotiations with Ethiopia for peace, without any interference by the League of Nations.

The Federation proposed to have a council direct the negotiations. The council would be appointed by the proposed Ontario Teachers' Council Act, 1937."

Dr. McArthur's suggestion was made before the High School Principals' Department. His plan called for students to write the exam in the third year and six in the fourth year with more than two failures constituting a repeat year.

It is unfair, the Deputy Minister said, to force a student to repeat his year after failing in only one subject.

Dr. McArthur said conditions were thoroughly unsatisfactory regarding teachers in rural schools and the inspectors had been instructed to discourage the establishment of fifth forms in rural schools. Such forms could not be handled adequately.

Outlined Revisions

Earlier in the day, Dr. McArthur outlined revisions in the Ontario High School curriculum to provide adequate training for students not proceeding to university. Such revision included increases in English, social study and history, and curtailment of language, mathematic and science study.

At a meeting of the Ontario Public School Men Teachers' Federation yesterday, a resolution was passed "one year" a proposal to change the name of the organization to the Ontario Public School Men Teachers' Federation so that separate school men teachers could become members.

In voting down the motion, W. Kirk of Toronto said "because these teachers belong to a separate, distinctly sectarian group and are prepared to invite them into our professional federation."

Dr. J. J. Simpson, Minister of Education, told the trustees and ratepayers' section rural education was the foremost problem of his department and at the time. He said the time had come, when rural school children must be given the advantage of medical care, instruction in music, art, domestic science, and manual training and practical arts.

The Minister voiced confidence, that as times improve education would be given the world, of their services, see that their teachers get properly paid. His department, he said, had no intention of increasing the minimum teacher's salary from $500 to $600.

W. E. Greer, chief inspector of public and separate schools, told the home and school section a special professional course will be introduced by the Department of Education this summer. The department also intends to recognize and teach by the Department of Education this summer. The department also intends to recognize and teach by the Department of Education this summer. Father is Reprimanded For His Carelessness

Madoc, Ont., April 16—(CP)—Mrs. Helen Hall was burned to death in her burnt daughter died on the night of Feb. 10, of carbon-monoxide gas poisoning and a coroner's jury with verdict of a coroner's jury which pointed the finger of blame at Mrs. Hall.

The verdict recommended the arrest of Reginald Hall, Madoc clerk, husband and father, for carelessness. He attempted to clean the stove-pipe, which, the jury considering in the stove and gas spread through the house, causing the fire.

Reluctantly describing the week-end which resulted them to public prosecuting as the result of asking for aid from the Court, Ostebrook, his wife, daughter, and young son left for Madoc. They are confident to spread until the fire went out in the cold spring weather.

Mrs. Ostebrook and the baby died within 12 hours, practically without the strength some hours later, Ostebrook showed his burns and son, Abraham and walked to his father's nearby home to summon help.

Official report of the Provincial analyst showed that there was not the slightest race of phosphide poisoning to which Ostebrook attributed the tragedy. Instead, said the deaths were accidental due to carelessness in trying to clean the pipe of a lighted stove in a closed room.

UNKNOWN CAUSE FOR EXPLOSION

No Person or Persons Are Blamed For Death of Three Men

That Peter Tatmen came to his death on Saturday, 27th ult. by the coal level of the Richmond mine caused by an explosion of gas, the cause of the explosion being unknown, owing to the circumstances we do not hold any blame to any person or persons, was the substance of the verdict submitted by the coroner's jury at the adjourned inquest holding into the death of Peter Tatmen, who was killed in the explosion in the Richmond mine near Picton on March 27th.

The inquest was held in Picton before Coroner Dr. T. W. Galbraith with Crown Attorney M. S. Ham conducting the investigation. Mr. G. W. Stanley, of the Department of Mines, was present on behalf of the Ontario Government.

Provincial Constable Fred Barret of Napanee, gave testimony regarding the preliminary investigations. Joseph Carey, deckman at the Richmond Mine, told of having the dynamite in the workers prior to their going down into the mine. Thos. Thomas, also gave evidence, but could not throw any light on why or how the explosion exploded. The coroner's verdict was accepted by the jury, Foreman Mr. Norman. No person called could specifically state what caused the explosion which resulted in the death of Peter Tatmen. Fred Mayhill and Alex. Barry will collect their lives in the same accident.

HELP SHORTAGE IS FELT IN DISTRICT

Farmers Paying $15 to $18 Per Month For Experienced Help

"I only wish we could get wages like that around this district," commented J. W. Crieve, representative of the local Employment Service of Canada, when interviewed today, referring to a Canadian Press dispatch from Brantford where pay for experienced farm help is reported to range between $30 and $35 per month.

"Farmers can't afford to pay that much. The farm isn't worth it, just now," added Mr. Crieve. "With eggs at twelve and fifteen cents a dozen, and other produce correspondingly low where is he going to get the money to pay it? Not $30 and $35 a month?"

Records at the office reveal that the past month has been an exceptionally busy one for employment. At the present time an urgent age of six or seven men a week are being placed, and throughout this section, but a shortage of experienced help is reported.

What employers on the farms right now need is a man who can take over the whole job; a man who can milk and carry on while the owner is away. "Men are hard to get," stated Mr. Ross.

Wages for farm help here range from $15 to $18 per month for experienced men.

POLICE BLOTTER

The two fourteen-year-old Terenzio girls, who were in Belleville yesterday after having run away from their respective homes, were still lodged at the police station this morning, when Toronto authorities notified the girls' parents of their whereabouts yesterday, but that they would arrive in this city by train this morning. Mrs. Terenzio and Mrs. Kidd disclosed today the girls had not given their proper names when they wandered locally yesterday. The one girl, Myrtle Lafley, gave the name of Frances Terenzio, while the other girl, Annie Blyth, informed the police yesterday that her name was Given Herrie. Their parents are expected to arrive in Belleville today, however.

Local police were asked to keep a strict lookout for a stolen car taken at Trenton late last night. The vehicle was a blue coloured Chevrolet sedan with the number 11 carried Ontario license plates No. N6288.

Last night's rain kept the number of transients to come into the city at the minimum, only nine signing the register and being given dry sleeping quarters.

SPAIN FEARS GENERAL STRIKE

Madrid, April 16 (CP)—Violent rioting and widespread strikes which broke out in Spain caused fear today that the Radical workers would grip the second republic in a general strike. Meanwhile yesterday's riot-violence rose to 10 dead and over 30 wounded.

BISHOP LEA TELLS OF GREAT JAPAN

Missionary Says That Eastern Country Much Maligned

Japan is one of the greatest countries on earth, and one of the strongest army and navy in Eastern waters is intrinsic," said Rt. Rev. Bishop Arthur Lea, missionary in Japan for 40 years, speaking before the Rotarian Club at their weekly luncheon at the Bridge Street Methodist Church. The occasion was also unique in that the club held a father and daughter luncheon, the first ever to be held by the organization and it was one of the best functions the club has participated in for some time, the fathers of the girls present with delight, the daughters were surprised at the pep of the meeting and those, guests of members, were had no daughters, praised the club for their thoughtfulness in giving them such a wonderful treat. Fred Ketcheson presided with Phil Noddle as song leader. Miss Ruth Wilson was at the piano. Leo Riggs presided at the organ. The musical part of the program as the greater portion of the time was given the speaker who told of the wonderful picture of the great Eastern country.

Through the kindness of George Zakos three prizes were distributed and Bruce Barrett, Jack Gordon and Marion Adams were recipients of well filled baskets of assorted fruit. The girls thanked the donor most sincerely for their gifts. Joe Mayhill and Harry Fitzgerald will be appointed to the K1-Y softball committee. The matter was left in the hands of George Lea, chairman of sports. Cliff Hicks was appointed to the Boys' Camp committee. A letter was read from Provincial Secretary Shapiro, respecting the future of senior baseball in the city. As the time was limited no discussion followed but the members will attend the meeting to be called on Friday night.

Much Maligned

After being introduced by Rev. Douglas Pallemore, Bishop Lea told his audience, that Japan was much maligned and that in 40 years since the unification of Japan, the country has risen to be one of the greatest powers in the world, that in the last three years she has conquered the Russians in the Far East, fought against world scandalists and won, that consequently, "Japan dominates the east-west," and that "In another 87 years Japan passed through three phases, passive, assimilative and creative. Japan has a terrific battle because of the military aggression in the west. Japan has always had low living and avoided labor unions. She has the sting out of the accusations, that have been made, because Japan has not done any more than any other power has done. The world war began with a scrap of paper and Japan has been fighting over scraps of paper ever since. To look at the history of Japan 200 years ago by the standard of today is unfair. Western exploitation by these countries and how the country was denuded of its timber. Japan has had to look after disarming all foreigners and they have gradually got a western civilization," said the speaker.

Speaking of alliances, Bishop Lea showed, that England broke faith now with Japan as soon as that country relieved the Russian threat. Then Germany arose to be touched upon and he stated, that the White races cannot understand the Japanese but the Japanese understand us perfectly. Japan has the spirit of Japan, he stated it consisted of face consciousness, loyalty and patriotism, open-mindedness, contempt of death, the influence of the Emperor over the world. Asking the question if Japan was divinely set in this mission, the speaker answered in the affirmative. Japan adopted the civilization of the western world within the lifetime of one generation, was progressive and they have three characteristics of nature, beauty, artistic feeling, appreciation but their great secret of success is their loyalty. The Japanese are the western world there is a terrible individualism. He told how soldiers sacrificed themselves to guide vessels on their mission of death, knowing they themselves would be killed in the act. He explained the recent assassinations as the work of fundamentalists, who did not wish to see the old order change. Extending appreciation was expressed by P. C. MacLaurin for the fine address.

GORD. CHALMERS SERIOUSLY HURT

Sustains Head Injuries During Car Crash Opposite His Home

Gordon Chalmers, Trent Road, sustained severe head injuries when hurled into the ditch opposite his Trent Road home last night. Mr. Chalmers was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital by a passing motorist, Mr. William Caughell, of George Street, where medical aid was given by Dr. G. H. Stobbe. Mr. Chalmers is reported to be resting quietly today and Dr. Stobbe announced no fractures of the skull was sustained.

According to eye witnesses who related their stories to Traffic Officer Delaney, who investigated, Chalmers was in the act of overtaking an automobile, the property of Mrs. Ernest Mouck, R.R. Four, and sitting in his car, when suddenly the Fox vehicle was struck from behind by another automobile travelling westerly, the Fox car being headed east. The second vehicle, which police allege struck the Fox car, is owned and driven by Ernest Mouck Jr., 176 Church Street. The force of the impact crashed the Fox car ahead, which, after striking Mr. Chalmers. The force of the impact threw Chalmers from his car, over into the ditch where he was later picked up suffering from head injuries.

Patrolman Delaney stated today that charges against the driving would be laid against Mouck. The accident occured shortly before 10 p.m. last night.

TO MARKET CHEESE FOR THE PATRONS

T. W. Crieve Sails For England About May 1st

The Ontario Cheese Patrons' Association announces the appointment of Mr. T. W. Crieve of Montreal as their representative in the United Kingdom to look after the sale of cheese for Great Britain about May 1st.

Mr. Crieve is an outstanding produce man with special qualifications in the manufacturing and marketing of cheese. He is a native of Wellington County, where his father was in the cheese and butter factory, and where he himself received his early training in the cheese industry. He graduated in the usual and high school of Listowel and Stratford, and the dairy course at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph. His further experience was gained since. He took charge of the Hickson, then with the T. Eaton Co. Toronto, in their cheese department. Following this, he was plant manager for the City Dairy, Toronto, and then with the government grading for cheese, he was one of the first members of the grading staff. Later he was engaged by Lowell and Christmas as vice-president of the Montreal Produce Co., which position he held for twelve years.

Mr. Crieve has been president of the Montreal Produce Exchange, and also of the Canadian Produce Exchange, During the past year he has operated the produce business of his own in Montreal.

We believe the Ontario Cheese Patrons' Association have been very fortunate in securing as their overseas representative a man of Mr. Crieve's outstanding qualifications.

TRAINING SLOOP IS LAUNCHED

First of Sea Plane Detachment at R. C. A. F. Base

Trenton, April 16—(Special)—The first in a series of training sloops for the air service detachment at the R.C.A.F., base at Trenton, was launched Thursday afternoon by L. Lyons, builders of the craft. The launching ceremonies took place at 10 a.m. yesterday morning before Wing Commander C. O. Johnson and Squadron Officer S. O. Ford and several other R.C.A. F. officers, also a group of interested bystanders. The Astra is twenty-eight feet, six inches in length, has an eight foot beam and a three foot draught. It was designed by J. Murray Watts of Philadelphia, Penn., and constructed by F. J. Lyons, after six months of labour the craft is complete in every detail and is Marconi equipped. The mast is thirty-nine feet long and is of the celebrated British Columbia Sitcca spruce. The sail spread covers three hundred and thirty-five square feet and the keel

URBAN AND RURAL TRUSTEES OPPOSE

Resolutions Passed by School Bodies on S. S. Taxation

Toronto, April 15.—(CP)— The three-day session of Ontario's parliament of Education, the 74th annual convention of the Ontario Educational Association, reached the midway mark today as trustees and teachers held honorable conclusions in the University of Toronto Buildings on theoretical and practical aspects of education.

Following the action of the Urban Trustees' Association, the Rural Trustees' and Ratepayers' Association today went on record in opposition to the legislation at the recent session of the Conservative legislature granting Separate Schools a larger share of corporation taxes.

The resolution of protest was moved by W. W. Mills of Bognor, Hillsdale Township in Grey County. It said the legislature assembling last August "was not warranted and discriminatory against Public School supporters of the province", and asked repeal.

Friday Privileges

Question of the Separate schools gave the Roman Catholics a special privilege, Mills said, which was denied adherents of other religious beliefs. Separate schools should be declared, "Let them come into the Public schools and bring their taxes with them."

"Why don't the Presbyterians, the Baptists, the Anglicans have their own schools?" Mr. Miller asked. "How long is this being going on? I think the time is past when we should tolerate these matters any longer. We have been blind long enough."

Addressing the Ontario School Trustees' and Ratepayers' Association, J. R. Davis of Dunnville, council, the president, urged them to refrain from making a discussion on the tax bill.

"I do not wish to see anything started that might lead to a religious conflict," he stated. "I am not a Roman catholic, he stated, "but I am a Protestant personally may be, you will have an opportunity to express your ballots at the next provincial election as our legislators appreciate that the duty of how our taxes shall be divided. "For educational purposes."

At morning service on Sunday at St. John's Church the Rev. A. E. Green of Belleville preached a beautiful and inspiring sermon to a large congregation. Easter hymns were sung and Mrs. William Insley sang a beautiful solo "The Stone Rolled Away". There was a celebration of the Holy Communion.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Rolnf and son Ronald, Miss Marion Everett spent Sunday in Milltown.

Mrs. W. R. Juby spent the 24th hour on Monday with her daughter Mrs. Harvey Scott of Belleville.

Off to California!

No. 1

Hello Toronto, good-bye Belleville!

Another holiday casts its glorious halo before us and we are truly thankful to the Giver of all good things. If we are successful in avoiding unforeseen misfortune, we hope to tell our friends very interesting and relieved everywhere, much that may be interesting about sunny California, where golden apples supply the world with the mysterious magic of eternal youth. We refer to that plain orange juice, which does much more for the writer than merely kept the doctor away.

WHAT CONSTITUTES A HOLIDAY?

For us it is a break in the ordinary routine of daily living, a necessary for satisfying physical, mental and spiritual efficiency. Although anticipation often exceeds realization, and our home coming speaks peace to our anxieties, nevertheless the change is necessary to subdue conceit, and keeps us well within the divine headlines. A perfect day has happens, and much is left to chance, for example the writer's love of carrying heavy baggage and in taking only one extra pair of shorts, a necktie and a collar.

The paragraphs we send from time to time to this genius of all daily newspapers are an expression of the gratitude we feel for the many kind words uttered with reference to our past efforts. Let your pen right ear (your good ear) burns, you will understand that we are talking about you, even about that dear old grandmother at Resaca, and our wonderful friends in far-away Bermuda.

As the wheels of bus and railway coach
Go spinning round and round,
The columns of this paper tell
Where we may be found.

For well over half a century the writer has been paying frequent visits to Toronto, but never before have there been so crowded, so free people (chiefly under thirty) been spending money so freely. Clothing and articles of adornment have been sought out and purchased, however, and were they more needed by those who bought them, in most cases corpulent gluttons, trying to put on a veneer of youth and beauty. Nine per cent. of the women we are now meeting promiscuously, day by day, in this city possess the bloom of youth and give any indication of a long and useful life. Within four years we were in charge for cigarette and dedication! Every visit to Toronto reveals more frightful conditions and those who think shudder for the near future. Nearly all teen age girls smoke now, and become pale, thin and prematurely old, and as an antidote use tons of rouge, powder and lip stick. Many of any, stop to think, or heed some danger which are surely sapping the strength of our civilization.

A SYMPATHETIC TEAR

The trend of modern life was brought to my attention with a shock during the past week. In 1918 a handsome young man returned from the Great War, sound in mind and limb, in limb, in heart, in mercy and a possible indication that he had been spared for great achievements. For months he walked the streets of Toronto hungry and in rags. Then one day as if by intervention of Divine Providence, a path to honor and fame opened before him; he was appointed junior clerk in a Toronto bank in an outlying part of the city. His enviable personality, his ability and obvious soon attracted attention, and promotions came to him unusually fast. Within four years he was appointed manager of the branch he entered as clerk. It was during his term as manager that I came to know him personally in a business and friendly way. His branch prospered exceptionally that he was advanced to the head office in Toronto to train for one of the highest executive offices in the command of this powerful bank. He had married a few years previously and was very happy with his little family.

It grieves me terribly to write the following lines, but they are intended as a warning to all young men whom I have known, and whom I have tried so hard to help and inspire. The same splendid qualities that brought about his signal success, also brought about his downfall from such a glittering height. Evil companions sought his society for he was a prize among men, they taught him bad habits little by little, but he soon became dissipated. His bank, desirous of retaining the services of one of the best men they ever knew, warned him kindly but firmly of his danger. For a time he returned, but the habit again and he was dismissed. A few days ago I called at this powerful bank to say "Hello!" and again confirmation that a young man on his brilliant career (I knew several more talented people) and was dumbfounded on hearing this sad story. With tears in my eyes I asked:

"Where is he?"

"We do not know; he has disappeared completely."

THE SECRET OF SUCCESS

May an old man who has seen a great deal of life bosh as to failure and success write a few words to young men and women, whom for fifty years he has been anxious to serve? When you break your own heart, young people, and the hearts of your parents, your relatives, your friends and your faithful teachers suffer deeply too. The wound is one that may heal, but, like the bullet hole within a broken wing, you may never soar to such former heights again. Jehovah gave Jonah a second chance, but this practical, modern world is rarely so merciful. Associate only with those who are better and wiser than yourself, whose conversation is not slay. Along with the ordinary human endowments, you must have character, and character is the highest attribute of God, and always loved

ON THE DANCE

Owen Sound has a minister who this week attacked the community out of his complacency in his attack on the dance, which he sets below the beverage room. He said that he would rather send his daughter to a beverage parlor to drink beer than have her go to dances in the local collegiate for he took particular umbrage at a folk dance, whatever that may have been. He declared that dancing more than any other amusement has been proven to lead young women to sin and that it originated in hell-holes and saloons in France and Germany. How will believe such a statement as the latter, to dances in the

Of course conditions have changed. Life in collegiates is not the same as it used to be. There is more interest there as there is everywhere in life. No greater change anywhere is to be found than has taken place in the attitude of some of the churches which no more than twenty-five years ago would not have thought of producing a play in the church because of what was called the "evil influence" of the theatre. Today the theatre has no better friends than the church people and the clergy who see in a theatre which interests all the people one of the most potent agencies for civilization. We have remained away from the theatre but we have been an error which would have been serious in its narrowing influence. Graduates of schools did well in the past but their interest of those days ran to rather restricted lines. Today the collegiate does endeavor to serve the widened interest of the young of this age, who while they may lack experience in life yet feel the impulse of deepening interest in the life about them. Some of these young students may be more difficult to handle than the docile students of other days who were more interested than they are not set in a moving age like the present. But that is truly a sign of the age which is a time of testing. They are of this age and respond to its influences and yet are sofidly founded on life's realities.

Now it is hard to understand the attack on the "folk-dance" to which reference was made in a report of Rev. John Doidge address at the Owen Sound church. Most folk dances seem innocent and undoubtedly are innocent and serve a real purpose in the training and development of the emotions. Even if he meant other dances the spirit of the age is against Mr. Doidge's viewpoint that experience—for to most people the dance is an innocent pleasure and pastime, without a trace of lurking evil. Some dances may not be what every one likes. Indeed that is to be expected in the light of the complex nature of human life which permits the individual's likes and dislikes.

In this age which seems somewhat awry to those who were developed in another age there are vast changes and some things may be so different as to seem wrong to those who were reared under another regime. But in the face of conditions the stability of youth and manhood and of the people who have suffered greatly through the depression, is something of which we must be proud, and most of us should those stable young persons and those who have faced the world shocks in these latter days, feel proud of what they have achieved. This steadfastness of gaze at the things which are true and beautiful and good is an earnest of greater and majestic days ahead. There are excesses today but it must not be forgotten that life today is standing the shock well, which indicates that in the real values there is no series of weaknesses.

As for the dance it will continue for it is associated with many of the finest aspirations of human nature. There are dances which elevate the spirit in a way nothing can emulate.

The steadiness of the people under the test shows that in spite of some shocks and changes they have sure grace. If there are undesirable dances, if the public is to be guarded against bootleggers, the way to make the most lasting contribution to correction is a public opinion which is sound and extensive, in its interest. To most people who are observant and who regard facts youth is stable and shows a commendable zeal and interest in the life around about.

If the whole world were put into scale, and my mother into the other the world would kick the beam.—Lord Langdale.

Better it were that all the miseries which nations owns were ours at once, than guilt.—Shakespeare.

They whose guilt within their bosom lies, Imagine every eye beholds their blame.—Shakespeare.

The guilty mind debases the great image that it wears and levels us with the brute.—Havard.

I pity the man who can travel from Dan to Beesheba and cry it is all barren.—Sterne.

SIDELIGHTS ON THE HOME FORUM

Thursday, the seventh of the day, being grisly and general none again as revealed by the house master and the Queen's Own Rifles of Canada, and Our Own Regiment by The Lincolnshire.

THE STREET

They pass me by like shadows, crowds on crowds,
Dim ghosts of men, that hover to and fro,
Hugging their bodies round them like thin shrouds
Whereon their souls were buried long ago;
They trampled on their youth, and faith, and love;
They made their hope of human-kind away,
With Heaven's clear messages they madly strove,
And conquered—and their spirits turned to clay.

Lo! how they wander round the world, their grave;
Whose ever-gaping maw by such is fed.
Gibbering at living men, and idly rave
"We, only, truly live, but ye are dead."
Alas! poor fools, the anointed eye may trace
A dead soul's epitaph in every face!

—James Russell Lowell

NIGHT PROWLERS FOR SALE, a sign seen on Front Street building, was rather startling at first sight, but closer inspection revealed that the Night Prowler referred to was a bait for fish—hence no cause for alarm exists.

DEAD BUT LIVES AGAIN—man operated on in London stopped breathing and his heart stopped beating on the operating table. The surgeons tried the usual resuscitation with no response, then one of the doctors present resorted to a forlorn hope, massaging the heart. This was followed by an injection of intracardiac adrenalin. The heart responded to squeezing and was soon hitting it up on both counts, in language a layman can understand. Oxygen and carbon dioxide were administered every ten minutes throughout the first night and the patient recovered consciousness forty hours after the operation, and shows every appearance of continuing to live indefinitely.

NEW YORK HAS ANOTHER FRONT PAGE MURDER MYSTERY which is giving the metropolitan sleuths much worry. A woman was found dead in her bath tub, strangled. Her clothes had been savagely torn from her leaving her practically naked, and a noose made from her clothing and twisted around her neck, causing death. The murder took place in down town apartments occupied by professional people. The murdered woman was a writer of short stories and her husband was connected with radio broadcasting. The scene of the crime is within a block of the place where Vera Stretz shot and killed her lover because on a visit to Germany he had neglected to divorce his wife so that he could marry Vera. She was acquitted on a charge of murder by a New York jury and set free.

HOWARD THURSTON, MASTER MAGICIAN, has crossed the Great Divide to solve the mystery of all mysteries, and has reached that bourne from which no traveller ever returns in the flesh, there to meet his magician friends Houdini and Charles Carter and spiritualist Arthur Conan Doyle, all of whom had a compact to communicate in a code known only to themselves and Houdini's widow, with the earth, if they could. Thus far no word has come to Mrs. Houdini, and it is doubtful if even Howard Thurston, Master Magician, though he was on earth, can crash that wall of silence and send a message back across the silent river.

For The Well Dressed House

This article is directed to those of our readers who have, under consideration the painting of their dwellings and buildings this spring. This particular form of preparation for the warmer, happier months soon to follow, is certainly to be commended. And especially do we believe that a great number intend to have painting and decorating done within the next few months, we take this method of drawing your attention to the services given Belleville people by the following Painters and Decorators.

These men study each individual painting job with a view of making it another example of their craftmanship. They take a personal pride in bringing every contract, be it big or small, up to the standard of workmanship for which they have become known in Belleville. And their price is not high. Estimates are cheerfully given and upon investigation, compare and favorably with those offered by people who let their contracts to those firms do so knowing that they will receive a servicable and lasting job.

There is just one more point which we would like to add to this little talk about painting and decorating. With the assistance and help of a house expert's advice are able to select a paint that will be suitable to your home and color scheme, and that can be depended upon. With the papering of rooms often these men are able to supply you with much more interesting patterns at the prices charged for ordinary paper But with the paint-line of a house to one, but we expect knows how to apply it so that it will give perfect and lasting satisfaction. For pressure or cost reasons do suggest you call one of the men listed below.

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and Mr. Riley the hooken ladder driver was tawking about different subjects around at the firehouse, and he said, Did I ever tell you how I went mountain climbing in the snowy Alps for a little change from hot fires?

O, sil by yourself? I said, and he said, I was the only sole in my party and I went higher than man had ever gone before. The air was so rare you could see through it 15 times as far, he said.

Wasn't you afraid you'd get lost? I said, and he said, Well it that happened I figured a Sank Bernard dog would find me and lead me to safety. That's what they're paid for, in a manner of speaking, and sure enough I did get lost, with nothing but my own footprints in the snow to guide me, and naturelly they always brawt me back to the same spot in what you mite call a vicious circle, he said.

And did a Sent Bernard dog really accome? I said, and Mr. Riley said, Just as I was tying up hops I heard one bar in the distance. Looks ways I thawt it was in the distance but as a matter of fact it was only about a hundred yards, because it wasn't a Sent Bernard at all, it was a big Polar Bear, which naturelly at a hundred yards would look like a Sent Bernard at seyeral miles, he said.

But a Polarbear couldn't help you could it? I said, and Mr. Riley said, I helped myself. I stuck it inside my parka hood, and I knows, which a lady loses her Peak she'll move heaven and earth to find it and spare no expense and trust mountains as though they were molehills, and sure enough it wasn't long before a regular little army of professional guides come into site looking for that Peak through opera glasses, but I only here I saved my life one more time by my famous presents of mind and now I've got a little souvenir to show, he said.

Marmora and District

Marmora, April 16—The second amateur contest to be held under the auspices of Marmora branch Canadian Legion No. 227 took place in the town hall, Easter Monday evening before a well-filled house. There were twenty-five entries in this ever popular form of show and all participants delighted with the success. The program was well arranged and carried out faultlessly and great credit is due the members of the Legion responsible for such fine entertainment.

The master of ceremonies, T. E. Pritchard announced each number and called upon the orchestra to open the program, "O Canada" was sung and three musical numbers were played by the nine piece orchestra composed of four violins, three guitars, a banjo and piano. Following the orchestral selection, was a step dance by Sherman Palmateer; song, Leslie Green, nine years old; recitation "A War time Romance", Warner Orford; song by Lloyd Wright accompanying herself on the guitar; song, "Home on the Range" Mrs. Mumby, accompanied by Glen McGaul; clog dance, Muriel Johnston; piano selection, Mary O'Neil; song, "Uncle Mo (Daddy) Tell Me", Jack Cottrell; Dark Town Comedy and songs, Ralph Sharp, Ira Crookright, Ken Seymour; step dance, Bruce Johnston; song, "Little Darling" Pal Bertrand, accompanied by Eugene Reynolds; violin solo, by George Rice, accompanied by Mrs. I. Rundle; song, "Cinderella" by Reta Johnston, accompanied by Mrs. W. Orford; song, "In the Twilight" W. J. Cottrell, accompanied by Mrs. Rundle and monologue selection, Eugene Reynolds; song, "Tell Me You Love Me," Mrs. P. Gray accompanist, Mrs. I. R. Rundle; song and guitar selection, Ralph Sharp; Musical selections by Misses French, Iserad and McCaul, violin soloists by the Vanabond Violinist, T. Jones. A play "The Wedding of Anne Rose and Ruby Taylor" by a group of girls, Rita Johnston, Marion Doyle, Marjorie Stevens, Gladelle Attbart, Clara Reynolds, Helen Meredith, Marion Mabery and Joan Shannon. The skit was directed by Miss Mabel Mabery, word dust by Mrs. P. Gray and Mrs. I. R. Rundle; song by Billy Carbright and Havelock.

While the judges R. C. Prentice and J. R. I. Gale were deciding the winners Ralph Sharp sang and played a selection and the orchestra played a selection.

Mr. T. E. Pritchard in behalf of the Legion thanked the contestants for their co-operation in making a fine program and also thanked the judges for their assistance. Thanks also were extended the audience for the splendid way in which they had turned out for the amateur show. In the first intermission a lovely patch-work quilt on which tickets had been formerly sold was raffled, the lucky prize winner was Mrs. Stanley Jackson. Mr. W. Mumby, president of the Legion, then visited the prize winners who were as follows:

Gentleman's: 1 Billy Cartwright, Havelock; 2 Ralph Sharp; 3. W. J. Cottrell.

Ladies: 1 Mrs. P. Gray and Mrs. I. R. Rundle; 2 Mrs. Johnson; 3 Eileen Doyle.

CRISPNESS is so refreshing in the spring—such a relief after the winter routine of hot, heavy meals! More than ever, at this time of year, your family will appreciate the crisp, crunchy goodness of Kellogg's Corn Flakes.

Serve them for breakfast, with milk or cream and fruit. They're delicious! And so wholesome. Rich in energy—yet light, easy to digest. Tempting any time—for lunch, the children's supper or a bedtime snack.

No imitator has ever duplicated Kellogg's Corn Flakes. They're made from premium corn, under happy working conditions. An exclusive Kellogg process gives them richer flavor—toasts them to a more delicious crispness. And a patented WAXTITE inner wrapper keeps them always oven-fresh.

Kellogg's are one food that has not gone up in price. Many generous servings cost but a few cents. Assure yourself of quality and value. Ask your grocer for Kellogg's—the only brand of Corn Flakes made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

Nothing takes the place of Kellogg's CORN FLAKES

CANADIAN TRADE SHOWS INCREASE

Exports For Fiscal Year Exceed Imports by 103 Millions

Ottawa, April 16 (CP)—Canadian trade jumped ahead in the fiscal year ending in March. It was shown today by the National Revenue Department, the Government closed its books at the year-end with an export balance of $103,736,000.

Exports of Canadian products in the 12-month period totalled $793,- 463,033 and imports, $552,946,763. In the year ending March 31, 1935, exports were valued at $666,- 826,594 and imports, $522,416,544. A comparison of the two year-ends showed both imports and exports increased in 1935-36, particularly foreign.

A break-down of imports showed less than half were Canada free — $388,986,921. Dutiable goods had a value of $203,948,841.

In the month of March, exports totalled $72,077,333 and imports, $65,904,784.

Conciliation Officer Goes to Brockville

Ottawa, April 16.—(CP)—Mr. S. Campbell, Chief Conciliation officer on the Labor Department, left for Brockville today to attempt settlement of the strike of employees of John B. Stetson (Canada) Limited.

The strike, which involves 31 employees, has been in progress nine days. It is not a case which comes within the scope of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, but employees applied to the Department for service of a conciliation officer.

Irvin S. Cobb in Picture His Own Story, Jane Withers in Second Romantic Role

When a bachelor captain of industry decides a pair of wild cameliers and proceeds to teach them a few things about life and love, serious and hilarious things are bound to happen, and they do in, "Everybody's Old Man," to be presented at the Belle tonight, and Friday, matinee and evening.

Irvin S. Cobb, America's favorite story-teller and humorist, himself, sits starring career in this picture which is birthday romantic filled with comedy and romance suspense, and a grand revelation of a grand personality.

In "Everybody's Old Man," he is the king of the canning industry, but the business loses its zest when his closest competitor dies — and leaves him without a rival worthy of his mettle. So Cobb decides to retire to a ranch and spend the rest of his days in European jaunt.

By a strange accident, he meets the children of his competitor in a Parisian hock-shop, discovers that they are a wild, irresponsible pair of youngsters, and is drawn to them because he once loved their mother, Rochelle Hudson, the daughter, resembles her. Johnny Downs, the son, is a scapegrace, irresponsible, lovable youth. Cobb discovers that his nephew, Norman Foster, who was left in charge of the business, is a conceited young puppy and now regards his uncle as an "old man." Then Cobb disappears and turns up in Chicago under an assumed name, and as the friend of Miss Hudson and Downs. Shrewdly and humorously he regains control of the youngsters' business and proceeds to reform them by saddling them with responsibilities. He sends Rochelle to Paris, where she falls in love with Foster, but actually became he senses the possibility of romance.

As time goes on Cobb's management of giant enterprises begins to desperation. And through all the excitement and change, Cobb shrewdly keeps his head, cleverly manipulates people and affairs until things are just as he says he wants them. Then in the hilarious climax he reveals his true identity to the delighted and surprised young folk.

Irvin Cobb's simple naturalness of acting makes his role vastly alive. And, in addition to the fine youngsters, who are excellent in their respective roles, "Everybody's Old Man" boasts such seasoned players as Sara Haden, Donald Meek, Alan Dinehart and Warren Hymer in the more than usually capable supporting cast.

Shirley Temple's Rival

If you enjoyed the mad antics of that marvellous "Kid" team of Jackie Cooper and Wee Georgie, you'll be happy to learn that Jane Withers, Shirley Temple's chief rival and Jackie Scarl are back again in "Gentle Julia", the second feature on the same program. The story relates the story of Miss Withers' love affair with the "popular Science" magazine editor, Tom Brown. Meanwhile, Marsha Hunt, the beautiful young debutante is pretty Miss Marsh, and the story recounts her adventures after she quarrels with her grandfather, leaves home and secures a position as hostess in a Greenwich Village hash house. She meets Eddie Nugent, a wise-cracking young man with a million so become a radio announcer.

The complications ensue when she is discovered by her irate grandparents and her erstwhile fiancee, played by Ben Lyon, and the picture climaxes in a colorful radio tap dance contest. Featuring a number of well known tap dancing artists. On the same bill "Timothy's Quest"

"Timothy's Quest," the new Paramount picture at the Capitol theatre, brings to the screen the popular story of a waif's search for a home. Young Dickie Moore portrays the title role.

The film recreates all the folksy people of Pleasant Valley from Miss Vilda, Billy Thacker and Mrs. Doolittle, to the villainous Sheriff Judd and the impish Samantha.

Aunt Cynthia Wallace and Tom Keene interpret the young lovers in the little New Hampshire village for whom "the course of true love never runs smooth" until Timothy steps in to their aid.

In addition to Dickie Moore, the child players are Virginia Weidler, Sally Martin and Bennie Bartlett, all again.

This time it is the picturization of Booth Tarkington's funniest character creation "Alice Adams," the second feature on the same program that exhibits the world's finest lovable gamins in an uproarious comedy-romance of the mellow South.

With Tom Brown playing a likable country lad, Frances Dee as Honey Meeker, the city "smoothie" as the leading contestants for Miss Hunt's hand, the picture follows the erratic courses of love. "Popular Science" a novel different film will be exhibited on the same program. Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.10, the last complete show starting at 9.10. Everybody's Old Man" will start at 2.40, 7.30 and 8.30 p.m. "Gentle Julia" will start at 3.45 and 8.30 p.m.

'SALADA' TEA is delicious

Picton and District

Picton, — A very pretty Spring wedding was solemnized in St. Gregory's Church, on Tuesday morning, April 14th, at eight o'clock, when Flora O. Hoyd, second youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Boyd of Picton, was united in marriage to Raymond McNally, son of Mrs. Elizabeth McNally and the late John McNally of Cherry Valley. Rev. Fr. Meehan officiating. The bride wore a light sand tweed swagger suit, with matching felt hat, and brown accessories, and carried a sheaf of crimson roses. Miss Betty Hoyd, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, wearing a tweed plaid swagger suit, and carrying pink carnations, was her sister's bridesmaid, while the groom was supported by Mr. Walter Boyd. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion, with Easter lilies and baskets of spring flowers. The wedding music was played by Miss Marguerite LaValle and the choir rendered special hymns. Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents to members of the immediate families. Mr. and Mrs. McNally left later for a short honeymoon, after which they will make their home at Cherry Valley. They were the recipients of many lovely gifts that expressed the esteem in which they are held.

Superintendent's Report

Superintendent T. D. Buston's report follows:

April 14th, 1936

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen:—

It is with a great deal of pleasure and thankfulness that I present the Annual Report of the Society. Complying with the wishes of the Department we closed our Fiscal year March 31st, and I propose giving you (separately) a short report on the three months' period, that is from Nov. 1st, 1934, to March 31st, 1935, but this report will deal with the work of the entire twelve months period, ending March 31, 1936.

We have been going through a period of change—old ideals giving place to new and more progressive ideals in the care and training of the children under our supervision and protection. Instead of keeping all our wards housed in the Shelter we have adopted the boarding home system which was strongly recommended by the Department and had been successfully carried out by other Societies, and we are pleased to say that after close scrutiny it has proven them a advantageous to the well being of the child, and it is the child's welfare that must be considered first and foremost, to enable them to become intelligent, self-reliant, self-respecting citizens. As best the Shelter is not the natural environment for the child and we are working on the assumption that every child is entitled to a home, and should not be deprived of that right longer than necessary. Ideally considered is the placement of children in private homes which are suited to their needs, and the subsequent supervision of these homes until the child is probably the most important part of our work. In placing a child, their wealth, social position, and standing or the foster parents is not the most important thing to be considered. Character and disposition, not only of the child but of the foster parents, are of tremendous importance. Unfortunately sufficient free or adoptive homes are not available and it is thus essential, that we have good boarding homes. And here I desire to express my deep appreciation to the boarding home mother could be found in the City or County, and we are indeed fortunate in having such homes open to receive the little ones we have under our care.

The staff at the Receiving home for children who are so neglected and dependent that they have to be cared for until suitable and proper provision is made for their welfare. Careful records are of all children brought into the Receiving Home and their health and general welfare is looked after, and to the Matron, Mrs. Lynch, her assistants we render our grateful thanks. Full examination by the Doctor, the Dentist, and Psychiatrist; is given and if they need attention along these lines such is obtained for them. This is all done in a way or preparing them for private foster, and adoptive home placement. During the year this care was given to 76 children, who spent a total of 3,453 days in the Shelter. Seven children were placed in free and adoptive homes and 42 in boarding homes. There were not more than 15 children in the Shelter at any one time and the average number for the year was 10 children. The average length of stay the year in boarding homes was 82.

I believe is back in each child to develop its truthfulness, honesty, and kindness to others, with the result that each child soon manifested improvement and a growth in strength of character. The Board with an ever wakeful eye upon the welfare of the children, and a desire to improve the style of the work have engaged Miss I. Martin who is qualified to direct and oversee the play period, and to deal with problem behaviour cases. Every indication points that this was a wise step forward in the interest of the child.

Preventive Service

The Children's Aid Society are not content with simply looking after neglected children and trying to pull them out of the stream of blighting influences, but are seeking to go upstream to the source of the trouble and so place a protective influence about the child in his own home. The very best place for any child is with its own natural parents, and when we can then save the child and the home, we have done infinitely more for that child and that home than we possibly could have done by removing the child from and breaking up the home. I may say that this service is the best important of our whole work. It is better to save a child than to convict a criminal. In the coming year greater emphasis must be laid on this type of service. It is worth while that cases be accurately tabulated or recorded—it is work done quietly and carried out with great success and without worry, but in it all there is great joy in the knowledge of time well spent. During the year we have investigated 161 cases involving 313 children. Out of this number 28 had to be made temporary wards and 22 permanent wards. In regard to this section there were 68 Court attendances and 886 office interviews. Factors in these cases were: Desertion, 30; Feeblemindedness, 17; Separation, 12; Illegitimacy, 11; Drunkenness 8; moral neglect 16; Non-support 10; Physical neglect 6; Separation of parents 3; One parent deceased 3; Illness of parent 1; Imprisonment 1; and sundry factors 27.

The Unmarried Parents Act

The Unmarried Parents Act, as well as the Adoption Act is under the jurisdiction of the Provincial Officer, and your Superintendent is in medium through with he administers the Act for this District.

The object of the Act is to alleviate to some extent the unmarried mother's burden—and if possible to obtain from the putative father financial assistance to help her bear her responsibility in the care of the child. It does not, as some think, take the responsibility away from the unmarried mother. While it provides for a maintenance Order against the putative father, also provides that a maintenance Order may be made against the mother, from which child can be made a ward, the Department's consent must be obtained and they must be convinced that this is the case and only course.

The operation of this Act consumes a great deal of time and effort and is a source of considerable worry. At the commencement of the year we had 60 cases, 40 new cases were added, and 62 cases have been closed. Three cases entailed 115 visits, and many miles were covered by motor car. 480 office interviews, and many of these cases had to be visited more than once and thus again in an effort to reach satisfactory Agreements and Court Orders.

Adoption

We have completed 13 adoptions throughout the year. There are at present five cases awaiting completion of papers. This is a work we delight in doing for it means that a child has been given the opportunity of real parents, to love and be loved, and for a place, a child in a home, where adoption is permanent. We make a careful study of the character, social and financial status of adoptive parents, and of the child, and endeavour to place, as we possibly can, that the child is being placed in the right home.

Visitation

The following statistics for the year ending March 31st, 1936, will give some slight conception of the educational carried on:—

Children in Shelter, April 1st, 1935, 32; Children admitted, March 31, 1936, 10; Wards boarding, April 1st 1935, 46; Wards boarding, March 31, 1936, 68; Applications for children 200; Children returned to parents (non-wards), 2; Children returned to parents (non-wards), 2; Children made wards (temporarily), 28; children made wards (permanently), 32; Children sent to Industrial Training Schools, 7; (5 boys—4 non-wards, 3 girls—non-wards 2 girls, 1 ward); Children sent to Ontario Hospitals, 6, (3 boys —non-wards 2 girls, 1 ward); Children (ward); Investigations made 143; Letters received (App.) 1,876; Letters sent out (Apps.) 3,776; meetings addressed 4; Miles covered visiting wards and applications outside city 14,000; wards visited 186; legal adoptions completed 13.

Appreciation

Personally I owe a great debt of gratitude to the Board of Directors for the cooperation, vision, and zeal with which they have faced the New Outlook. Particularly would I refer to Mr. J. W. McBride, the President, who has assisted in every detail of the programme for the welfare of the children. The unity of purpose and concentrated effort we have received the commendation of the Department, who raised our grading from "D" to "C".

To the Chairman of the Child Welfare Committee, Rev. H. S. Payne, and the Committee on it wish to express my appreciation for their advice. Also we are greatly indebted to Mrs. J. A. McFee and to Mr. R. Frost, our genial Treasurer, for their kindly sympathetic help and encouragement.

To Doctor Bird for his devoted attention to the physical needs of the wards, we render our thanks.

Also I remember with delightful pleasure the splendid co-operation and assistance given by the Ladies of the Board, not only at the Christmas Season for their special efforts then, but throughout the whole year. Especially the Clothing Committee, who through the change of policy have had a heavy burden placed upon them, and who have performed this task most faithfully and cheerfully.

We also express our appreciation to the Provincial Magistrate, Mr. R. W. Hale and to Miss Mae Fleming, Field Supervisor, for their beneficial and enlightening addresses, and for their personal interest in the welfare of the work in our District, also the Departmental staff, Toronto.

To Mr. S. O. Duncan, K.C., Crown Attorney, who has assisted your Superintendent in many ways and has given much time to his work I express my sincere thanks.

To Miss Bird, my assistant, who has unselfishly and devotedly given of her best in the management of the Shelter and other duties which she has been called upon to do.

And last but not least, I express my thanks to Dr. A. M. Doyle, Director of the Mental Hygiene Clinic and his staff, who have performed a wonderful service during the past year on behalf of the children under our care, and who have given your Superintendent individual assistance and direction in dealing with problem cases.

Respectfully submitted
Thos. D. Buston,
Superintendent.

"GLITTERING GIRL"

By MAY CHRISTIE

Vernet Tyson sat under a whirling hair. She brushed the two elderly ladies to her, saw that they were comfortably settled in the tea-table, and with a hasty: "I'll tell Arleen to bring in the tea immediately," vanished, via the kitchen, for the dining-room.

Her father had the saving of this situation needed her. She was no longer the shy, gauche little girl from the hall bedroom of years ago.

In the dining room, Mattie—again with her hand on the Prince's arm—was facing Mr. Tyson. A false smile was on her face. She finished at her eyelashes: "up at him. She had begun to speak, but Vernon interrupted her.

"You two are in league with each other. It's no good beating about the bush any longer. We...KNOW. I have the facts. I have a detective employed on the front door, so you cannot possibly get away. If you don't come clean, I'll call back in now and arrest you."

Mrs. de Bray, still with the smile glued on her face, backed her eyes dramatically at the speaker. "Vernon—my dear child—you're not perfectly mad—this necklace trouble has turned your brain—that's the cause here as the friend I've always been—I came to help you simply. I learned from Ivan here that you'd lost the necklace! Why, I've only known Ivan a week—I've been on your doorstep several days ago! How could I? I found in the Gypsy Pavilion after your party that night!—and to Vernon's amazement, out of her small handbag she drew what appeared to be an exact replica of the necklace!

Jake Tyson took the diamonds from her, turning them over in the palm of his hand. "These are the real ones, you say?" He shot her a piercing glance from under his shaggy eyebrows.

"Of course they're the real diamonds!" said Mattie. "Your poor foolish Billie Vernon must have dropped them last before I got to the Gypsy Pavilion.

"That isn't true, It's a trumped-up yarn," Vernon cut in hotly, and Mattie in the face, her lips curling in contempt at the stupid falseness of the story, which not even a child would credit. In the circumstances, "The necklace must have left my neck until this supposed Prince Karinof was away from the Gypsy Pavilion, after he had put some kind of drug in my cup of tea! While I lay, unconscious and drugged, in his apartment in which I'd been delivered by her kin, either he—or just as likely you—removed the real string of diamonds during the night, and substituted the fake ones in their place! You thought I was a fool—that the Tyson family were a bunch of fools who would hush the matter up for fear of a scandal! He wanted that $50,000 out of us! More, he wanted it secret—so when Daddy raised a kick about what enormous mazuma additional he'd paid for the fake from you, Dad! Then his idea was to blackmail us further for hush; and then clear out of the country with you, Madame Metcharex, his light o'love!"

"What a fantastic imagination!" The woman gave a soft, tinkling laugh. With a swift, pantherish movement she snatched the diamonds from Jake Tyson's open palm and slipped them into the hand of her accomplice. "Ivan, dear, I think we'd better go. This child simply doesn't want to be helped. We'll take the necklace straight back to the jewellers."

"Oh no, you won't, McGraw won't let you leave this apartment till I say so," exclaimed Vernon. "You'll stay right here till Mr. Drouet himself and his manager come and identify the gems. I'm not taking any more chances."

The Prince's eye shifty and cunning as a leopard's, looked swiftly round the room. Something told Vernon he was wondering where the fire escape was.....

"Father, will you please telephone Drouet's? This is my house, and it's up to me to straighten it. If it's the necklace in a second fake, for the sake of public safety we're going to have you both arrested."

Mattie snapped, like a trapped python: "Everyone knows you're in town and out of it, that you become a dope fiend—have spent the night alone with Ivan in his apartment! The papers will ring with what I have to tell them! Besides, we'll sue you for defamation of character!"

"That makes me laugh."

CHAPTER XXXI.

Jake returned from his bedroom from whence he had telephoned Drouet's. He suspected the very worst now of these people, and had taken the precaution of slipping his revolver into his trouser pocket.

"It's no good to try and bluff it out," he said heavily. "The girl of mine has all the evidence against you. She even went back to the hotel in Hot Springs to get all the facts on you she could, from those ladies who knew you and the real Prince Karinof in Europe. You, Madame, were due to commence back to town by telegram. You were afraid to face them, and so both of you left. Also it's my belief that those identification papers of yours, sir, are faked, or that you stole them from the real prince at some time or other. Another point we have against you is that you never declared that necklace on entering the United States. We can set the federal agents on you."

"Think up, you s-s-social climber!" His meticulous foreign accent slipped from him as the Prince snarled at Jake.

It was all Jake could do, rugged Westerner that he was, to keep from smashing his huge fist into that treacherous face.

But Vernon's reputation held him back. Were he yellow to be called in, the story that would break in the newspapers would do nothing to help either her or her mother in their social climb!

He did not realize that Vernon was already weary of so-called "Society." Her heart and mind were filled with a real man, who now—through her own folly in encouraging this impostor—did not want her. And his name was Terry Shannon.

x x x

"Yes, this is the real necklace. These are the missing diamonds," said the manager of Drouet's some twenty minutes later, in the dining room.

Mr. Drouet opened his wallet and now scrutinized the gems through a powerful glass screwed to his eye. He confirmed the decision.

"What have you to prove," Vernon asked quickly, "that this is the genuine Karinof necklace, Mr. Drouet?"

"The papers with the Customs House stamp on them, delivered to us by Prince Karinof himself when he purchased it, entered into with him for the selling of his necklace."

Mr. Drouet opened his wallet and produced declaration papers showing that duty amounting to $6500 had been paid by Prince Karinof to the Customs House on his necklace.

A gleam of malicious triumph not unmingled with fear darted like some serpent across the Prince's features, then as quickly vanished. His face became mask-like.

"Thank you, Mr. Drouet. Will you take this necklace back now, and give me a receipt for it?" Vernon asked quietly. "Tomorrow morning I shall come to your shop to take back my father's check for $50,000, the amount of the insurance of the necklace. You can then send or return to me the note I signed for it, making my transaction void."

"Certainly, Miss Tyson. Is that all? We had been hoping—as that you might be—interested in purchase these exquisite gems?"

"No, thank you. We are not in the market for them." She showed the two men out, and then quickly returned to the dining room.

"Since this transaction is over, I presume we can now take our leave?" inquired "Prince Karinof" sarcastically.

"Not until I have given you my ultimatum," Vernon replied quietly. Her glance went from her father to the Prince, and then on to the woman known as Martina de Bray. "I could have you committed to prison, Mr. Metcharex, because you deliberately stole that necklace from me, and it was only fear—only absolute certainty of a showdown—that made your wife there—the lovely woman as Martina—"return it to us now."

"As for the Customs papers which Mr. Drouet just showed us, where you are alleged to have paid a sum of $6500 on this historic gem, I've no record of any such transaction at the Customs House—therefore the papers are a forgery. I shall advise Mr. Drouet to have them examined tomorrow morning by an expert."

The Metcharexs remained silent, while with fear and anger.

"You heard what your acquaintance from abroad, Mrs. Naomi Walters, said, when she greeted you in our drawing room," continued Vernon. "You are not Prince Karinof, but you are Serge Metcharex, and your passport in my possession bears that out. The real Prince Karinof, as you well know, died a bachelor, without relatives. In assuming his name, you stole his papers and his necklace. Constantinople has an American consul who would trace every detail for us."

"Since you're so smart, what are you going to do now, Miss Sherlock Holmes?" Martina Metcharex spat out.

"I'm going to give you a chance to clear off before the exposure," Vernon answered calmly, "and if my parents and I ever run into either of you again, we do not know you." She opened her handbag. "Here, take your passport. You may need it. Remember, however, that I have in my possession a photostatic copy of it."

Martina grabbed the passport nervously. At a nod from Vernon, she and her accomplice hurried from the apartment.

The moment the front door closed Stella Tyson burst like a whirlwind into the drawing room. "Oh, have these terrible people gone? Why, Maggie, it's perfect! Ivan—they've been married all along—the ladies have told me everything they know about them!"

She came over to her husband and daughter. Jake had his arm around Vernon, Vernon was crying.

"Maggie dear—forgive me—I was all my fault, pushing him—on—to you the way I did—oh, the horrible fantastic fraud!"

And Mrs. Tyson flung her podgy arms around the two people who were dearest in the world to her, and wept disillusioned tears with her young daughter.

In a costly upholstered corner of the smart Pilgrim Express, bound for Rushington—a pretty picture in Maggie Tyson clothes—was lunching with her equestrian companion of the morning, Terry Shannon.

She had wanted to take him to her favorite speakeasy. Firstly, because a plot was hatching in her mind, and—as everyone knows—potent drinks will loosen the tongue and free the emotions, and generally give one foolhardy courage for the moment.

Secondly, Terry was so handsome and attractive, and she wanted all

Ahead of them Zoppigo, the carnival warrior, was on an abrupt halt. For an instant he stood listening intently, then he dropped to his hands and knees and placed his ear against the ground. Soon he arose, tense and alert, seeking to interpret the approaching sounds.

"the gang" to see him with her. The fact that they were both in riding kit would give an added intimate touch to the meeting.

But Terry apparently had other views as to a correct luncheon menu. Devour, Tresome of him not to approve of young girls drinking cocktails, particularly in the middle of the day.....

Of course that might prove his special interest in her. Had she been nothing in the world to him—so reasoned Nan—he wouldn't have cared either way.....

THE TARZAN TWINS

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

The carnival warrior, making the rounds of his snares, was of the tribe of Galla Galla, who had sworn vengeance on Tarzan because the ape-man had punished him for a raid on a peaceful village. Jane, Galla Galla's dismal country that Tarzan and his twin sons, Dick and Doc had wandered!

Cautiously the boys climbed down from their high perch, fearful that the lion which had charged them the day before might still be lingering in the vicinity. Once more they set out and soon came to the same trail which they believed would lead them to the railway.

They were certain that their trail had left them, but there would be other trains. Even if they were travelling in the wrong direction, Doc was so positive they were on the right road that his spirits rose high, and the optimistic lad broke into a gay whistle.

The plague of injuries which went on big scale last year, when the Cleveland Indians did not figure in last year's American League pennant race, appeared to be striking Uncle Sam's regular season games, however, Indeed there is little cause for worry from those sources. Between them Campbell and Pytlak made seven of the Tribe's 11 hits yesterday as they plastered the world champion Tigers 16-7. Campbell slammed four, including a home run.

Off to a bad start, when Detroit belted Willis Hudlin for four runs in the third, the Tribe fell on the world series hero, Tommy Bridges in the same inning when Hal Trosky hit a homer with two aboard and scored eight runs.

The heavy hitting, which marked the opening game of the season's second night down the line with only 20-year-old Harry Gumbert of the Giants turning in an outstanding record performance. Gumbert limited the Dodgers to four hits—including a boundary belt by Cesar (Old) Richardi to win a tireless contest 3-2. The high spot of the game came in the second inning, when Dick Bartell, Giant shortstop, let Mungo's foot as they raced for first and jumped up to lose a few pinches. Both were ejected from the game after teammates discouraged their "fraternizing."

The Boston Reds, abandoning the humble role for which they have been cast, did the day's second best job of hitting when they pounded Philadelphia pitching for 18 hits and evened the series with a 13-4 triumph. The Phils made only one less hit but couldn't come close to matching the nine run outburst with which the Reds drove Ray Benman to the showers in the fourth.

The Yankees belted three Washington pitchers as even steam safeties let went down for the second time, 6-3, when the Senators held into Monte Pearson and Johnny Murphy for four hits, which were mixed with an error and two passes for four runs in the seventh inning.

The White Sox outslugged the Browns to win the other American League game 6-3 as Monte Stratton hurled effectively in the clutches and aided his own cause by hitting a double and knocking in two runs.

The Red Sox and Athletics got the season's first postponement on the records when it rained at Boston.

WINDSOR FORDS MEET OTTAWA

Ottawa, April 16—(CP)—Windsor Fords, rated as one of the best cage teams developed in the Border City, will battle Ottawa Rangers here tonight in the opening game of the best of three series for the Eastern Canada senior basketball championship. Second game will be played tomorrow night, and the third, if necessary, Saturday. The winner will meet the Western Canada winners for the Dominion crown.

Julius Goldman and Tom Pandilidis, captain, lead the Windsor lineup while Moretsky, Gordon Aitchison, Malcolm Wiseman, forwards; and Metcalfe and Norman Dawson and Stanley Machala, defencemen, made up the Fords' starting lineup. Windsor did not make the trip. The Ford club was advised to play here as a part of competition after a protest from Hamilton.

Led by "Whank" Usher, Ottawa Rough Rider football player, Rangers will present a formidable team. Usher, Horace Higgs, and Ernie Hall, are a trio of outstanding guards, with Norman will heading the centre assignment while the forward line will be composed of Louis Bonnefant, "Budge" Crawley, John Baker and Hilliard Moodie.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

How many local ball players are desirous of playing senior ball in Belleville this coming summer? Of course we can answer this question, but if the players are actually interested in playing the summer pastime the future of the games lies in their hands today.

After a few weeks of studying the senior baseball situation locally, the representatives of the four local service clubs are agreeable to meeting the players on a common level and will address the citizens over on Friday night as the Y.M.C.A. Personally we can say all concerned that the future of senior ball in Belleville is rather drab at the present moment. These service clubmen, who have endeavoured to study the matter from angles are rapidly growing tired of their lot. We cannot blame them as they have not received any too much co-operation from the citizens in general.

Perhaps it may seem too bad to see senior baseball pass out of the picture in Belleville, but then too many fans really know how Belleville was assisted into the O.B.J.L. in the first instance, that is away back in 1932? It may not be in many, but the original Belleville application into the O.B.J.L. for the early part of 1932 was turned down and rejected then, after the league was formed ,one of the clubs bucked over the traces because they would not have an opening date on May 24th in 1919. Immediately the Belleville interests were approached and they accepted the franchise of the club that did the bucking, and have been the key club of the Central loop ever since.

Too much water has passed under the bridge since 1919 and the old game of baseball has seen many an up and down throughout the length and breadth of the O.B.J.L. Away back in 1927 the league could not operate for the lack of clubs and so it remained to have the Peterboro' squad, as a bye and represent the east in the Provincial playdowns. Belleville tried intermediate baseball that season without results and came back in the following season to win the senior O.B.A.A. title for the second time.

Now, we'd like to know, and a lot of others also, how history repeat itself, or in other words should Belleville retain from entering a team in the O.O.B.J. in 1936? We are not trying to assume that if there was not senior team in Belleville this coming summer that our 1927 team would repeat the feats of 1928, but is it advisable to continue operating a senior team in Belleville at a loss, is the question. Therefore, what does studying the matter today?

To be frank, the service chubmen are willing to assist the players, but they want the assurance of the players' absolute loyalty before they are willing to play ball with an executive, which may be appointed. The league of senior baseball in Belleville now lies in the hands of a representative few. If the players are desirous of assisting all they have to do is attend Friday night's meeting and say so. If they are not in attendance, well those interested in the game of baseball can decide and naturally turn their efforts elsewhere. Quite simple, after all is said and done.

Up along the Lake Shore region they are not letting any grass grow beneath their baseball cleats for a few seasons past they have been operating a Junior Lake Shore league, that has not actually paid its way, but those at the helm have visions and realize the value of such leagues to such an extent, that they organized a juvenile league in conjunction with their Junior league yesterday. Cobourg, Port Hope, Peterboro, Oshawa, Colborne and Bowmanville all "are the lights" and are sponsoring juvenile teams as well as junior clubs in the Lake Shore region. "The juniors of today are the seniors of tomorrow".

While the senior ballclubs are convening at the "Y" on Friday night, a delegation of junior diamond interests will also be on hand. Invitations have been mailed to Napanee, Picton, Wellington and our own squad of juniors to attend an open meeting at the "Y" on Friday night to the purposes of forming a Junior O.B.A.A. loop in the nearby vicinity. Locally the Wellington interests especially are asked to be present to talk over the possibilities of such a set-up.

Honoring their hockey team, the Belleville Yacht Club held a dance and social evening in their club rooms last evening. "Duke" Smith had a host of admirers on hand and a splendid evening of dancing was enjoyed. Incidentally the "powers" are endeavouring to contact Jack Adams, manager of the world's champion Detroit Red Wings, relative to procuring the services of Hec Kilrea, remaining the championship of the Bay of Quinte League as the cup is being held in trust at Napanee, but will change hands to Belleville when Jack, Adams learns of the situation.

"Hec" McDonald who starred for the local Cities Service hockey team a few years ago and also went great guns for the Tweedsmuir Maroons this past season, arrived in town yesterday and will be on hand also at the local Cities Service gas station. Incidentally if you want to talk over the possibilities of future hockey in Belleville, drop down and have the old scout chat with "Hec" he's still interested in Belleville's hockey.

It may be news to some, but recently after a bout the Unknown wrestler who is to oppose Ed. Meeks of Cleveland at the Arena on Tuesday night, has yet to land a clean fall once he commenced his rapid trek to wrestling fame early last fall. Those in the know say "The Unknown" is a young Italian wrestler and has a splendid ring future to look forward to. Of course Meeks is a veteran of the squared circle and has been called "the trial-horse of wrestling" by an opponent gains a decision over Meeks he is assured of further recognition in the world of wrestling. Local fans will naturally be interested in the showing made by The Unknown in Toronto tonight.

Only four major league baseball teams remain undefeated after opening ing; Chicago and Washington in the American League with Pittsburg and New York in the National loop.

REDWINGS AND OLYMPICS FETED

Detroit Clubs Presented With Trophies at Victory Dinner

Detroit, Mich., April 16—(CP) — The hockey season officially was relegated to the mothballs today after sports luminaries of this city and big league hockey officials had fed and feted the champion Red Wings and Olympics.

With one ceremonial and speech making last night at a "victory dinner" here, trophies were presented Detroit's two teams, which were supreme in the National and International Hockey Leagues.

Frank Calder, president of the National Hockey League, presented the Stanley Cup to Jack Adams, Sr., owner of the club. Gerald Mc-Hugh, K.C., Windsor barrister, did the honors in handing over the Prince of Wales trophy, given for the championship of the American loop, to Doug Young, Wings' captain.

John Chick, president of the International Hockey League, presented the F. G. Dilly trophy to Donnie Hughes, manager of the Olympics, and Hughes handed over his squad individually.

Mr. Norris, in his address, declared that while he might help finance minor league clubs in other cities, the major league championship contests were and would be in Detroit. Calder said he hoped Detroit might back major league teams in other cities.

SPLENDID SHOW OPENING NIGHT

Corcoran Sending The Best Available to Open Season

The Unknown, mystery wrestler, who is to meet Ed. Meeks, Ohio State champion in the main bout of the Queensbury Club's opening show at the Arena next Tuesday evening, first attracted attention in Los Angeles. He caused a decided upset by beating the 200-pound Man Mountain Dean, following, which he threw Sandor Szabo and other stars of the game. He continued his sensational career in the middle west and, arriving in the east recently, proceeded to add new victims to his list.

Meeks is one wrestler the masked heavyweight won't have an easy time against. The Cleveland star weighs 226 pounds, is remarkably fast and rates with the best of them as a clever mat man. It does not matter to him whether the opposition uses science or cleverness—he usually manages to get the decision.

Irish Jack Donovan, who will oppose Al Dunlop in the fortyfive minute semi-final, is going to be in the ring his favorite here. He is a beautifully-built athlete and has plenty of crowd appeal. As Dunlop has proved, he's not going to be denied and the rugged Dunlop will have to step along at a fast pace to escape defeat.

Andy Moore of Metropolis is another who will be instantly popular. He is one of the fastest, trickiest men in heavyweight ranks and Corcoran has matched him with an opponent just as speedy in Antoine Parkin, often referred to as the "Flying Frenchman."

The preliminary is scheduled for one fall of 30 minutes; the semi-final for one fall or forty-five minutes and the main bout best two out of three falls with a one hour time limit.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Frankie Frisch Cards: Hit homer with Terry Moore on base brought 3-2 victory over Cubs.

Harry Gumbert, Giants: Pitched four-hit game to give New York 3-2 win over Dodgers.

Wally Berger, Reds: Hit first homer of the year and drove in two runs in 13-4 victory over Phillies.

Paul Waner and Forrest Jensen, Pirates: Their singles in ninth and Waner's homer in seventh with Jensen on base enabled Pirates to beat Reds, 7-6.

Hank Greenberg and Bruce Campbell, Indians: Trosky's home run started rally in third and Campbell's four hits, one a homer led to 16-7 win over Tigers.

Jimmie Stratton, White Sox: His good work in the pinches and his double scoring two runs was vital in victory over the Browns.

Buddy Myer, Senators: Singled in the seventh scoring two runs to bring Senators from behind.

One More Hurdle for Victoria Cage Squad

Raymond, Alta., April 16 (CP)—Victoria Dominoes faced one more hurdle today before entering the Canadian finals and a chance to retain the Dominion Men's Basketball Championship they won last year under the name of Blue Ribbons.

The British Columbia champions gained a 51-43 win over Raymond Union Jacks, Alberta titlists, here last night to end the Western Canada semi-finals in two straight games. Dominoes won the first game 32-26.

They play in the western final against Winnipeg Tuxics,

Livestock

Toronto, April 16.—(CP)—Cattle trade was at a standstill as the Toronto Livestock market stated its Thursday session. Only a few early sales were made. The call drive showed steady and good conditions. There was no call for sheep or calves on the market. Cattle holdovers approximated 300 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: cattle 1,200; calves 120; hogs 50; sheep and lambs, none.

The call section brought steady prices at $8.00 to $8.00 for common to medium grades with a few good calves at $8.25. The market for hog mart showed indications about steady.

Yesterday hogs sellied unchanged at $8.00 f.o.b. cars basis. $8.15 off trucks and $8.75 off cars.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS

Toronto, April 16 (CP)—Pool of Canada 4 per cent. bonds of 1960 at a drop of ¾ to 34 on the Toronto Industrial market in the early trading. The recent report showing a loss on operations was apparently the basis of the selling. The general tone of the market was heavy and trading was quiet.

International Nickel, C.P.R. and Industrial Alcohol 'A' were slightly lower this afternoon and minor losses were posted in the steel, consumer and utility groups. Photo Engravers slipped back nearly two points and Riverside Silk was down nearly a point.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, April 16 (CP)—Mining shares opened fairly strong today on the Toronto Mining Exchange but narrow losses outnumbered gains by afternoon. Noranda, sold prices at 54 and was the strong centre of the Base Metals group. Hermitt ran into profit-taking and worked back more than 5 cents. Lower London prices for copper, zinc and lead furnished a depressing influence.

Senior golds were inclined to ease down a little and losses of a point or more were posted for Central Patricia, McKenzie, God's Lake, and McWatters. Silver group was quiet, mostly on the support of a firmer price for bar metal.

WALL STREET CLOSE

(By The Canadian Associated Press Financial Writer)

New York, April 16 (AP)—The stock market was firm only in spots today and, during the greater part of the session, the trading pace was the slowest in several weeks.

Among the gainers were Case, Johns-Manville, Indian Refining, American Smelting, American Chain, Columbian Carbon, Corn Products, Standard Oils of Indiana and New Jersey, Du Ponts, Rockefeller-Kennecott and Anaconda. Losers of importance were Industrial Alcohol, Allied Chemical and Du Pont.

The late tone was irregular. Transfers approximated 1,300,000 shares.

Changes Mind After Cold Dip

Windsor, Ont., April 16—(CP)—Mrs. Lucy Mink of Star, Windsor, who after a quarrel with her husband leaped from a Windsor-Walkerville ferry into the Detroit River, was reported virtually recovered at hospital today.

Mrs. Mink, 27 year old, said she had been drinking liquor during the day after she and her husband disagreed, and she decided to end her life. When she hit the chilly water of the river, though, she changed her mind about heading for oblivion. She hung on to a piece of driftwood and screamed for help.

Ray Arsenaut, 36-year-old housefurnisher, and his son Albert, 9, heard her cries and rescued her in their motorboat. The Arsenauts were rescued like that were nothing new to them. They have salvaged four from death in the river during the past two years.

3 Prisoners Escape From Guelph Jail

Guelph, April 16—(CP)—Three prisoners escaped from the jail at Guelph today.

Included in their escape the three jumped on Bodycott, the guard, as he opened the door in the cell block to give the prisoners their breakfast. He was knocked to the floor as they leaped on him at once, striking him over the head with their fists. They also used the official's billy to complete the assault before grabbing his keys and heading for the front door.

Fifteen years ago a similar break took place in Brantford jail.

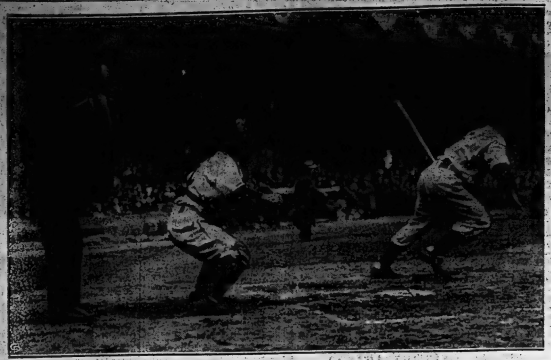
Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, April 16—Potatoes were the feature of this food product market yesterday, the result upward price trend continuing. Gains of 10c to 15c per 80 lb. bag were recorded during the day, as recent reductions in the acreage planted by an official Ontario report showing that farm stocks of potatoes are the lowest since 1930. Since early 11,447,000 cwt. against 18,740,000 a year ago. Quotations on No. 1s basis were withdrawn. Butter, cheese and eggs ruled steady in quiet trading. Recorded trade in eggs was possibly at the Board of Trade as 1,307 cases of eggs, 120 cases of butter and 1,000 lbs. of cheese. Further export sales of chickens are reported from the poultry market, with domestic demand called fair. Chickens were put down at 20c to 22c per pound, ducks were reduced 3c, quotations to the retail trade by wholesale houses.



The potato market was quoted as follows: P. E. I. Mountains, No. 1 80 lbs. $1.30 to $1.35; Cobblers, 80 lbs., $1.45 to $1.50; No. 2 Mountains 80 lbs., $1.45 to $1.50; 90 lbs., 90c; 10 lbs., 30c; Quebec Mountains, No. 1, 80 lbs., $1.40 to $1.45; Quebec No. 2 Whites, 80 lbs. $1.20 to $1.25.

SIMMONNS SLASHES BALL IN DEBUT WITH CHAMPION TIGERS—Going to bat for the first time on opening day in Cleveland, Al Simmons, clouting outfielder for whom the world champion Detroit Tigers paid the White Sox $75,000, is pictured as he slashed a grounder to deep short. Simmons was thrown out at first but later cracked a double and scored to help the Tigers win the first game of the season from the Indians.

CANUCK CHAMPION — William Travers of Montreal, Canadian ping-pong champion, is here seen practicing up for the U.S. national championship matches in Philadelphia, in which he competes.

STARTING THE STANLEY CUP ON ITS FIRST TRIP TO DETROIT—President Frank Calder of the National Hockey League hereby starts the historic Stanley Cup on its first trip to Detroit and, incidentally, signals the end of major professional hockey activity for the season. Calder is handing the trophy to James Norris Sr., millionaire owner of Detroit Redwings, after the speeding Wings had whipped Toronto Maple Leafs 3-2 in the final game, giving them the series three games to one. Jim Norris Jr. is on the EXTREME LEFT, and the smiling personage at the RIGHT is Jack Adams, pocky manager of the Wings.

Queens of international ladies' basketball since 1922, Edmonton Grads started their campaign in defence of the honor by whipping Des Moines Iowa Business Girls in two straight games. The scores—54-40 in the first set-to and 43-37 in the second—were less impressive than earlier Grad victories have been and a stiff tussle is forecast for Coach Percy Page's quintet before they again annex the International championship. They meet the best United States ladies' teams with Tulsa Stenographers, American national champions, their next scheduled opposition. The crack Tulsa squad and the 1936 edition of Grads are shown above. Left to right the basketeers are: Tulsa (at top): Peggy Lawson, Lois Poole, Lillian Justice, Lorence McDaniels, Nora Cain, Alberta Williams, "Cotton" Wilkie, Madge Bennett, Helen Goodwin and Frances Dunlap. Edmonton Grads (below): Gladys Fry, Mabel Munion, Rita Dann, Sophie Brown, "Babe" Belanger, Doris Neale, Helen Northup and DEMPSEY SHOWS WHITE HOPES HIS RING TECHNIQUE—Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion of the world, is promoting an international heavyweight tournament with hopes of finding a new contender for the title now held by Jimmy Braddock. Here the "Manassa Mauler" is demonstrating some of the punches which featured his most famous of ring battles. 1. With Louis Nova, Jack demonstrates the blow which put Gene Tunney on the seat of his trunks for that well-known and often-talked-of long count. 2. This is the left which polished off Luis Firpo in that famous knock-down and drag-out brawl. (Firpo played by Stanley Ketchel.) 3. The right in Jimmy Ostali's side is the one that played havoc on the ribs of Jess Willard during the gory mess at Toledo which gave Jack his title. 4. Dempsey stopped Fred Fulton in 23 seconds. This was his quickest victory, and the left shown at Sam Portney's chin is the one that did it.

CANADIAN-OWNED INDIAN BROOM SETS NEW RECORD—Running sensationally in first presentation of the $10,000 Marchbank handicap at Tanforan track, San Francisco, Indian Broom from the Vancouver stables of Major Austin C. Taylor, set a new world record for the handicap mile and one-eighth by travelling the distance in one minute 47 3-5 seconds. The Canadian-owned three-year-old is seen here after the race with Jockey Basil Jones in the saddle and Major Taylor at his head. Miss Billie Taylor, the Vancouver sportsman's daughter, is also admiring the big purse-winner.

WHEN SELKIRK WHIFFS HE WHIFFS! A WHIFF THAT IS A WHIFF—George Selkirk of the New York Yankees, a former Canadian, takes a powerful swipe at the ball, connects with a lot of ozone, and ties himself into as pretty a bow as ever decorated an Easter bonnet. Even Babe Ruth's mark seems a satisfied expression as he "studies the horsehide in his mitt. All this occurred before 8,000 chilled fans who "thronged" Ebbets Field to see the Brooklyn Dodgers bow to the New York Yankees 6 to 3 in an early session of America's national sport.

Chalice — League was held on Friday evening with twenty-eight present. Quiet music was played, followed by prayer by Miss Marion Daniels. Mrs. R. Spence read the poem and after singing a hymn, the Scripture lesson was read by Miss Allan Clay. A story was told by Miss Helen Daniels and Mr. Dales sang a solo. Mr. Roger Hollinger read a poem and the topic was well given by Miss Doris Horne. The meeting closed with a prayer.

Mrs. H. Coe is spending a few days in Trenton, where she attended the funeral of her daughter the late Mrs. Wm. Hoffman.

Word was received on Monday of the death of Mrs. Egbert Ward in Montreal. Mrs. Ward was for some years a respected resident of this village.

Mrs. J. F. Yorke returned home on Monday after spending some time at Mr. W. Hodgens'.

Mr. and Mrs. Clare Pinkle and daughters had Sunday evening supper at Mrs. H. Longwell's.

Miss Laura Cooke spent Tuesday with her friend Miss Bernice Tovey.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Eggleton of Stirling had Friday evening supper at Mr. W. Daniels.

Mrs. Yorke has again moved back in the village after spending the winter months in Belleville.

There was a good attendance at Sunday School on Sunday morning and a large number attended service in the evening when the pastor delivered a splendid Easter message. Appropriate music was rendered by the choir and a number of W.M.S. ladies took part in the service. The front of the church was beautifully banked with ferns and Easter lilies which were afterwards given to the sick and shut-ins.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Prentice and daughter of Peterboro, spent Saturday evening at Mr. Wm. Prentice's.

Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Yorke and marl of Gilead, were Sunday evening guests at Mr. W. Hodgens.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Hoard and family spent Easter with relatives in the village.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Montgomery of Rose Hill, were Sunday visitors with the latters' daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Stevens.

The Mission Band of the United Church of Foxboro, held a splendid Easter concert in the Sunday School room on Friday evening, April 15th. The Sunday School room was very attractive being beautifully decorated with Easter lillies and Spring bloom. In the centre of the platform a white cross was erected beautifully decorated with tinsel which improved greatly added to the nature of the occasion.

Rev. Horton acted as chairman for the evening's entertainment and each item was entirely along the lines of Easter. The program included choruses, solos, duets, exercises recitations also a dialogue, "The Easter Angels" and a pageant, "The Easter Offering". The pageant was splendidly given when ten boys and girls brought a symbol of Easter and placed it at the foot of the Cross. During the pageant many of the beautiful old hymns were sung, each boy and girl recalled in their part and everyone present thoroughly enjoyed the program. The Sunday School room was comfortably seated, the two other Mission Bands were present namely Marsh Hill, and Mr. Sylvester Patrick Band of Foxboro. Each contributed two numbers to the program.

At the close, a silver collection was taken and candy served.

BONARLAW

Bonarlaw—The April meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of St. Mark's Church was held at the home of Mrs. J. F. Baker on Wednesday, April 6th.

Mrs. (Rev.) W. G. Swayze presided and opened the meeting with prayer and a hymn. Mrs. John E. Brown read the scripture lesson. There were 13 members and 2 visitors present.

The roll call "Saying of Jesus on Love" was well responded to.

Mrs. J.F. Baker was appointed as delegate to the Annual Diocesan Womens' Auxiliary Convention at Kingston April 23rd and 26th.

Mrs. Morley Barlow, convener of the program, then took charge.

Mrs. Douglas Brown gave an interesting reading on Palestine.

Mrs. A. Y. Brown gave a review of an address recently delivered in Campbellford.

"Garden of Eden to bloom again" was read by Mrs. D. Brown.

The Indians 23rd Psalm was read by Mrs. Jean Baker.

The meeting was closed with a hymn and prayer after which lunch was served.

The annual meeting of the Ravenna Rifle Association, was held on Monday evening of this week. Capt. Geo. F. Wilkins presided.

The secretary's report showed that the Association has had a very successful year. The winner of the silver plate donated by the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association was Pte. Gordenier of Marmora.

It was decided to hold shoots on the range in May and June as in former years. It was also decided to assist the annual presentation and dance in Springbrook Orange Hall on Friday, April 15th, with a good orchestra in attendance.

The Easter Festival was observed at St. Mark's Church with celebration of Holy Communion at 11 a.m. Choir evensong at 7.30 p.m., splendid congregations being in attendance at both services.

The Rector, Canon W. G. Swayze, delivered appropriate Easter messages.

The choir sang the anthem 'Awake Thou that sleepest," and the congregation joined heartily in the various familiar Easter hymns.

The altar was beautifully decorated with lillies and daffodils, in memorial to James Stocker from his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Morley Stocker, and Easter lillies from Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Barlow in memorian of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Mason, and also lillies from Mr. John McKeown in memorian of his wife, Margaret McKeown.

Master Glynn Foxbay returned home from Belleville Hospital on Monday of this week. He is much improved.

Mr. John McKeown is in Toronto for a few days this week attending the annual convention of the Ontario Educational Association.

BETHEL W.M.S.

The April meeting of Bethel Woman's Missionary Society was held in the vestry of the church on Good Friday at 2.30 p.m. The meeting was well attended—13 members answering the roll call to a verse of Scripture containing the word "Hope". Mrs. Harold Fraser, president led in prayer then as a special theme read "An Easter Thought".

A letter of appreciation from Mrs. Thompson was read by the president. The only item of business for the afternoon was the appointment of a press secretary. Moved by Mrs. Herrington, seconded by Mrs. Bert that Mrs. Cullen fill this office. The motion was carried.

The devotional exercises were taken from a leaflet based on the traditional greeting used in many of the older Christian countries on Easter morning "Christ is Risen" and the reply "He is Risen, Indeed".

In the absence of Mrs. Grills, the convener Mrs. Fred Blakely took charge of the meeting. During the meeting favourite Easter hymns were sung with the pianist. A pleasing solo was rendered by Mrs. Harry Fraser.

A most interesting and instructive report of The Belleville Presbyterial Women's Missionary Society held on March 30 and 27 was given by Mrs. Fisher.

Mrs. Herrington moved a vote of thanks to the delegate Mrs. Fisher for her splendid report.

The meeting closed with all repeating the Lord's Prayer.

Quebec, April 13 (CP)—Quebec Liquor Commission gross receipts for the fiscal year ended April 30, 1938, were $11,888,819 it was shown in the report tabled in the Legislative Assembly by Provincial Treasurer, Bleakney.

The Commission turned over to the Quebec government $4,500,000 leaving a surplus of $3,700,190 for the year.

MOTHER OF FIVE PAYS PENALTY

Mrs. Dorothy Waddingham Hanged For Poison Slaying of Two

Birmingham, Eng., April 13—(AP)—Mrs. Dorothy Waddingham, 34-year-old mother of five children, was hanged in the Winson Green prison today for the poison slaying of a 56-year-old crippled patient in her Nottingham nursing home.

King Edward himself was the only one, who could have saved the woman from the gallows by granting a last-minute reprieve, after Home Secretary Sir John Simon denied appeals for clemency.

A wave of protest throughout Britain over the hanging of the mother of five children, instead of the convicted baby, was countered by press statements, terming the poison death of the patient, Mrs. Lord of Bagsley, a flagrant offence.

Newspapers insisted the crime must have been premeditated and that, even the strong recommendation of mercy by the jury which convicted Mrs. Waddingham Feb. 27 should not be allowed to deter the punishment.

Appeal Fails

A last overnight appeal to the Home Office having been rejected, the nurse was led to the gallows and the trap was sprung shortly after 9.00 a.m. (4.00 p.m., E.S.T.), on the ninth woman to die by the rope in Great Britain since the start of the century.

A crowd of 2,000 persons stood in nearby streets, watching a demonstration against capital punishment. Mrs. Violet Van Der Elst, wealthy London woman who has led anti-death penalty demonstrations during three previous hangings, headed the demonstration.

Car Turned Back

Riding in a limousine equipped with a loud speaker, Mrs. Van Der Elst attempted to drive through the gates to the Winson Green prison, but was turned back by police.

Her automobile bore a large sign reading:

"Men and women, I appeal to you to prevent the hanging of a mother. This barbaric act would make the mother of five children!"

Mrs. Van Der Elst then circled the streets bearing placards:

"Stop this terrible crime of hanging of a mother of five children."

Streets Blocked Off

Police blocked off the streets leading to the prison, and 100 reserves were held in readiness at a nearby theatre.

The state charged that Mrs. Waddingham, poisoned her invalided patient, to obtain the £1,000 (about $5,000) legacy which Mrs. Bagsley had willed to her nurse.

Mrs. Waddingham and Ronald J. Sullivan, co-operated with her at the Nottingham Nursing Home, were arrested July 30, charged with slaying Mrs. Bagsley and her daughter, 50-year-old Miss Ada Louise Bagsley, to death, slowly with drugs.

Sullivan was acquitted.

Woman Is Hanged

The criminal appeal court rejected Mrs. Waddingham's appeal March 30, the Home Secretary denied a first appeal for clemency March 31, and took similar action again last night on the ground that no cause could be found to justify a reprieve.

After the hanging women dropped to their knees, praying and weeping as the black flag was hoisted.

The automobile of Mrs. Van Der Elst drove back and forth along its loud speakers booming the hymns, "Nearer My God to Thee" and "Abide With Me" from phonograph records.

Piles Go Quick

With Dr. Leonhardt's Prescription

Many sufferers from itching, bleeding or protruding piles have found one that quick relief can be had with an internal medicine.

Bad circulation of blood in the lower bowel is the cause of piles. The veins are congested and flabby, the bowel walls weak. That is why an internal medicine like HEM-ROID should be used. HEM-ROID stimulates the circulation, relieves the pressure of blood in the veins of the lower bowel and helps to heal and restore the sore, tender parts.

HEM-ROID is the prescription of Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, after a specialized years of his professional life in finding the cause of piles and the medicine that would remove them. His medicine succeed, because it tends to correct the cause.

No matter what kind of piles you have or how long you have had them, if you want to try HEM-ROID, you have our promise to give you back your money if you do not find quick and satisfying relief, after using just one bottle.

J. S. McKeown or any druggist can supply you.

CURTIS CUP TEAM ON HIGH SEAS

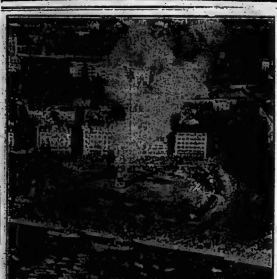
Expect to Retain Golf Trophy in Contest in Scotland

New York, April 16 (AP)—The United States Curtis Cup team fortified with youth and experience steamed over the high seas today for Scotland and the third international match battle against Britain's golf stars.

We believe we have a fine chance of keeping the trophy we never have lost," said Mrs. Glenn Collett Vare of Philadelphia, United States champion and team captain.

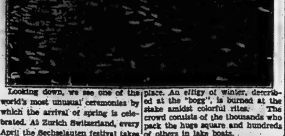
Members of the team, in addition to Mrs. Vare, are Mrs. Maureen Orcutt Crews, Miami; Mrs. Opal S. Hill, Kansas City; Mrs. Leona D. Cheney, Los Angeles; Patty Berg, Minneapolis; Marian Miley, Lexington, Ky.; and Charlotte Glutting, Orange, N.J., and Mrs. Frank Goldthwaite, Fort Worth, Texas. The Curtis Cup matches will be played at Gleneagles, Scotland, May 6.

All of the United States team members planned to compete in the British Women's Championship.



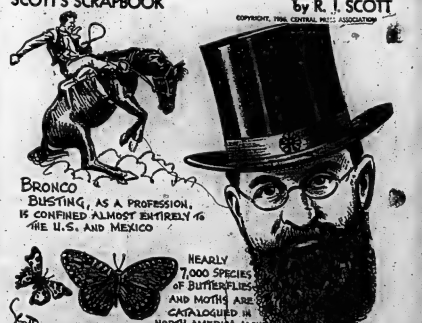
Patty Berg was all excited about the journey as she stepped on the gangplank leading to the liner Hansa.

"Gosh, I hope I don't get sea sick. If I hope I don't get the fitters," she said.



SAYS RELIGION NEED IN SCHOOL LIFE

Toronto, April 16.—(CP)—Necessity for religious education in the schools of the province was stressed by Mrs. R. S. McLaughlin of Oshawa, in her presidential address to the Ontario Federation of Home and School Associations.



"It has been said lately we do not need religion in our schools", said Mrs. McLaughlin. "Were all our homes the religious centres they should be, that statement might bear weight. During the life of each child from cradle to grave, from home to school, let us see religious influences envelop it."

Looking down, we see one of the world's most unusual ceremonies by which the arrival of spring is celebrated. At Zurich Switzerland, every April the Sechseläuten festival takes place. An effigy of winter, decorated at the "hogs", is burned at the stake amidst colorful rites. The crowd consists of the thousands who pack the huge square and hundreds of others in lake boats.

TURK TROOPS MARCH TO DARDANELLES ZONE

Sensation is Created In Diplomatic Circles By Turkish Occupation

Official Statement Indicated Judicial Means Would be Used

PLAN TO AVOID DELAY

Territory Has Been Barred to Troops Since Lausanne Treaty

Ankara, April 17.—(CP-Havas)—Turkish troops today marched into the demilitarized Dardanelles zone. Havas News Agency reported.

The move, which created a sensation in diplomatic circles here immediately after official confirmation of the Turkish government's decision to send troops into the zone, followed a note delivered to the Council of Ministers, which were presided over by President Kemal Ataturk recently and approved the action taken by him with his chiefs of staff and other military and naval advisers.

Reasons to Discuss

London, April 17.—(AP)— Great Britain's reply to Turkey's notification on Turkey's request to remilitarize the Dardanelles was given today in a note handed the Turkish Ambassador.

The British government pointed out that it, must consult the Dominions that it must be given time to enter into discussions without delay and that they should be carried on in London. The Dominions' views, it was understood, supplement those of Britain.

The British note, it is said, expressive reference to Turkey's comment of approval and expressed gratitude that Turkey had given assurance had used legal instead of other means of attaining its objective.

SHELLS DROPPED ON ADDIS ABABA

Several Persons Wounded by Bombs From 3 Italian Planes

Addis Ababa, April 17.—(CP-Havas)—Several persons were wounded when two Italian war planes passed over the Ethiopian capital today and blasted the grounds of the Imperial Palace with repeated machine gun fire.

The planes also sprayed the area for short distance beyond Haile Selassie's palace, but no members of the Imperial family were reported injured.

Earlier today two big Italian bombers droned overhead and for half an hour spilled clouds of red, green, white and red fireworks upon the capital.

French Police Recover $440,000 from 2 Men

Paris, April 17. — (AP)—Police today said they had recovered $440,000 in United States Treasury certificates from two men arrested by United States authorities for the theft of $1,307,838 in securities from a New York bank robbed January 28, 1935.

The prisoner were Bernard Klein, a Hungarian and Jacob Schwartz, a Czech.

Parisian authorities said they were making possible recoveries.

Police, watching for the stolen securities since early in 1935 recently declared that a man was trying to sell the bonds in Paris.

PEAK PRIMARY LOAD UP

Toronto, April 17 (CP)— The maximum 20-minute peak horsepower primary load carried on all systems by the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario in March showed an increase of 8.1 per cent over March, 1935, it was announced today. The March, 1935, primary and secondary loads on the five systems totalled 1,570,-482 horsepower compared with 1,520,056 in March of last year, a decrease of 3.5 per cent.

King George Who Didn't Bet Gave Long Shot Winning Tip

The Prince of Wales Now King Edward And Sir James Sexton Won on Royal Tip

By THOMAS T. CHAMPION
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, April 17.—(CP Cable)— The story of how Sir James Sexton took the advice of King George 15 years ago, put his money on a long shot in the Grand National Steeplechase and saw horse win after the race was told today with publication of reminiscences of the 80-year-old knight.

Sir James, who went to see at the age of 13 and in 1906 was president of the Trades Union Congress, is commonly called "Jimmy" for short.

One of his reminiscences of his being called to the royal box on Grand National Day at Aintree in 1924. At the time Lord Derby was entertaining the late King and the Prince of Wales, now King Edward.

"His Majesty asked me what horse I had backed and when I said 'Shaun Spadah' he inquired 'who gave you that tip'." Sir James replies in the book "I told him I got it from the Prince of Wales.

"The King laughed and said: 'Why, that is the worst tipster I know. Take my tip. Back Master Sam'. I put it down to mean," the King added, 'but the owner it stayed at Knowsley' (home of the Earl of Derby) and the whole party is backing it."

Sir James on Sexton, "would have been enough for the most cautious backer in the world to plunge." Betting himself said I could have 30 to 1 against Master Robert, I ofcourse would not do it the way. She wants to stop "this ruthless slaughter of harmless, useful creatures."

She was notified by the chain grocery company that they had a few snakes in their warehouses to which she would indeed be welcome, she found "in the warehouse and found 16 men standing around the snake, all frightened and that it would make a move. She picked it up in her hand, took it home, placed it near an electric light so it would get warm, allowed it to take a bath and fed it.

Then she took it out for the evening. Oddly enough people at the de Vinoni fencing club did not appear anxious for the appearance of Mrs. Hughes-Hallett with her snake. They sat around and watched with pale faces the gracious curled up in her lap and slept. The snake was perfectly well behaved for its own sight and eleven feet in length. Mrs. Greene is "very docile and interesting".

SNAKES ARE LOVELY DOCILE CREATURES SAYS MRS. HALLETT

Snakes are Lovely Docile Creatures Says Mrs. Hallett

Detroit, Mich., April 17.—(CP)— Anxious to show the world that snakes are "lovely, docile" creatures of inestimable value in mankind and one what most people think, Mrs. Leslie G. Hughes-Hallett, wife of the British Consul here, attended a gathering as an exclusive fencing club here last night accompanied by a four-and-a-half foot boa constrictor.

Mrs. Hughes-Hallett obtained the baby boa, which she describes as a beautiful creature," from a Detroit chain grocery company, which received it inadvertently in a crate of bananas.

Officials of the company telephoned her yesterday upon learning of her request that the police department refer to her any calls from citizens, who went snakes killed.

Mrs. Hughes-Hallett said she gladly would care for any snakes other people want out of the way. She wants to stop "this ruthless slaughter of harmless, useful creatures."

She was notified by the chain grocery company that they had a few snakes in their warehouses to which she would indeed be welcome, she found "in the warehouse and found 16 men standing around the snake, all frightened and that it would make a move. CROAT-SERBIAN FRICTION BLAMED FOR NINE KILLINGS

Enraged Croatian Peasants Slay 7 Men, Woman and Girl

MOB IN CASTLE

Six Chetniks Are Cornered And Slain in Bathroom

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, April 17.—(AP)—Intense racial resistance, roused throughout Yugoslavia today following the killing of nine persons, including a woman and a girl, by enraged Croat peasants at Kerestinets near Zagreb, was reported.

The slayings were regarded as due to the friction between Croats and Serbs, which caused the assassination of a deputy April 13 and other killings.

Peasants of many villages in Lika province joined Reutjem Masses for the victims.

On the same farm where Mass at the village of Syvianedjela, one group of peasants fell upon another group to be Chetniks (provocateurs), were in the castle of Anton Mihalovitch, former Zagreb mayor, in the province.

Release Demanded

The peasants laid siege to the castle gates and demanded that the former mayor be given up to them, saying they feared the seven wanted to kill Croat leaders.

The former governor refused finally, shooting started and the group, seeking to get a man smashed his way into the castle. Its members climbed the governor and pursued their quarry through the castle, corridors and rooms.

The seven Chetniks finally were cornered in a bathroom.

Some broke down the door and their bodies thrown from windows.

Then the mob of Croat peasants passed the home of a former Chetnik leader. The peasants alleged fired into the crowd.

Home Burned

The mob broke into his house, killed him, his wife, and their 17-year-old daughter, then burned the house down.

HUNT MANIAC IN VAULT BLAZE

Women of Delanson, N. J. in Terror After Vault Destruction

Delanson, N. Y., April 17—(AP)— District Attorney Leon W. Bagley said today that authorities were hunting a maniac responsible for a mysterious fire and partial dissection of a woman's body in a cemetery vault here yesterday.

He admitted the case had investigators baffled, however.

Bagley said excitement ran high in this village last night as the investigation proceeded. Sheriff's deputies in uniform were assigned to guard the vault and to allay the fears of women.

The District Attorney discounted robbery as the motive of the person or persons who set fire to the cemetery vault and dismembered the bodies lay.

He said that a person of unusual strength must have handled the corpse, as the woman weighed about 200 pounds.

Clemency Denied Two Scheduled to Hang

San Francisco, April 17 (AP)— The State Supreme Court has denied clemency to Stanley McKay and Joseph Kraty, scheduled to die in the San Quentin Prison break last year.

Former Warden James B. Holohan, who was severely beaten, and four prisoners, officials were abducted in the rifle escape plot. The State Supreme Court yesterday declined to reverse the Lower Court ruling despite the intercession of Acting British Consul General Cyril H. Case in Mackay's behalf on grounds the prisoner was a British subject.

Kraty is a native of Scotland. His stepfather lives in Montreal.

DIES FROM INJURIES

St. Catharines, Ont., April 17.— Mrs. Minnie E. Dunn, widow of Robert Dunn died early today from internal injuries received in an accident on Saturday night when she was knocked down by a car as she was crossing the road in front of her home.

A COUPLE OF CANADIAN ADVENTURERS—This picture received from Beyrouth, Lebanon, shows two happy-go-lucky Canadians aboard camels in the camp of an Arab sheik in Arabia. ROCK MINERS NEAR

All in Readiness For "Last Blast' at Moose River Mine

Moose River, N. S., April 17 —(CP)—"Hello! hello!" mine manager F. D. Henderson yelled today down a pipe line of the Moose River gold mine where three men have been trapped at the 141-foot level since Sunday.

There was no answer.

Soundings had been taken every day on the pipe, used to pump water from the depths, but never went farther than 100 feet. Evidently a thick blast 200 feet away early this morning cleared the pipe, for after listening to a bolt he had dropped, down, Henderson rose and said:

"Nobody can tell me that didn't go down to the 200-foot level."

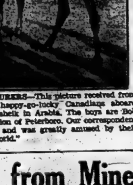
Rock Mines Approach

Moncton, N.B., April 17.—(CP)— Four Ontario rock miners arrived by train today with their life-saving equipment and were rushed to the airport where a big biplane was ready to fly them to Halifax on the second-last leg of their long journey to aid in the attempted rescue of four Toronto men, trapped in a mine since Sunday.

From Halifax the four Porcupine miners, W. H. Hannigan, Sinclair Mitchell, Thomas Mitchell and Elmer Shaun, would have to be taken across 95 miles by car over bogged roads to the desolate mining district.

The flight from Moncton would cut five hours from the time required for the train trip to Halifax. Take 3 Moose

The Ontario miners, sent here by J. F. Bickell, President of McIntyre Mines, probably will help drill the holes, for which charges before the blast.



Next Blast Important

"The next blast may drive through," R. C. Gordon, assistant mining engineer of the Acadia Coal Company, who is inspecting the shaft down to the Old Meagher slope.

Gordon did not think the blasting would weaken the rock seriously outside the direct range.

Miners were of the opinion it would weaken the hanging wall of the Meagher slope.

When it was suggested by some miners that a drive into the Meagher slope would fall because of the 13 gallons in quarters.

Gordon said the probability was the bottom of the shaft was weaker than his sides because of the rock pressure against the sides. Explosives would be placed against the bottom and the sides. Meagher, Moose River mine superintendent, said almost to the 141-foot level where the three men are imprisoned. If it can be followed when the shaft reaches it only a few feet more of tunnelling will be required to extend it to the level.

Hospital Unit Coming

Moose River, N.S., April 17.—(CP) —A complete emergency hospital unit, under direction of Dr. Colin MacDonald, widely known Halifax surgeon, was en route from Halifax today while eager miners saw a passage opening that may lead with comparatively little difficulty to three Toronto men buried in the Moose River Gold Mine since Sunday night.

Dr. MacDonald was accompanied by an assistant and three nurses to lead aid if Dr. D. E. Robertson, Herman R. Magill and Alfred Gosling are returned alive from their 141-foot deep prison.

ONE OF ESCAPEES TAKEN IN TORONTO

Charles Williams Arrested as He Walked Along Street

Toronto, April 17—(CP)—Charles Williams, one of three Toronto youths, who escaped from Welfare Farm jail at Guelph yesterday, was captured by Toronto police today near the corner of Gerrard East and Sackville Streets.

The two other fugitives, Russell Messinger and Edward Johnson, escaped, when officers in a police motor car spotted them in a taxicab along the street. Messinger and Johnson fled through back yards of the east-central section of the city, clambering over fences in their flight.

A police cordon was immediately placed about the area and officers began combing the district.

The three made their jail break early yesterday after charging and using Turnkey W. S. Dodycott over the head and using his keys to open the jail front door. They reportedly made their getaway in a stolen car. They also forced entry into a store in the Stratford district, and nearby they overpowered a farmer at Tillsonburg that netted $54 from a pool room kid police to believe the trio responsible.

License Plates Stolen

The stolen money was mostly in quarters. Automobile licence plates have also stolen from a car in a warehouse owned by A. M. Shaffner.

At Simcoe, a car answering the description of the stolen one and bearing the missing licence plates stopped for gas. Its occupants paid for the 13 gallons in quarters.

NURSES ADVOCATE WIDER ADOPTION EIGHT-HOUR DAY

Brantford Nurse Says Nursing Education "Too Cut and Dried"

Peterborough, Ont., April 17 (CP) —Wider adoption of the eight-hour day for public health and supervision of regulations in connection with training schools were being discussed today by committees appointed by the registered nurses of Ontario in convention here yesterday and today.

Miss Jean Gunn, O.B.E. superintendent of the Toronto General Hospital, moved the resolution calling for the appointment of the 8-hour day committee. She was strongly supported by Miss Isabella Baker of London who said adoption of the plan would be of great assistance to nurses themselves in good health.

Miss S. Margaret Jamieson of Brantford suggested the age limit of admission to training schools in Ontario schools be raised to 24 or 25 years. "Maybe problems arising out of a time of young people are living placed too great a strain on young shoulders," she said.

"Essentials of nursing care in tuberculosis," was the title of an address given by Miss Hodgson McCol, Superintendent of the Niagara Peninsula Sanitorium at St. Catharines.

Miss McCort pointed out that rest, good food, fresh air and medical supervision were principles in tuberculosis care. "The home is the most difficult place for treatment," she said. "It is where it is spread. The ignorant and self centered individual, the housing problem and social strain contribute to the spread of the disease.

Home Nursing Commended

Miss M. Margaret Jamieson of Brantford led a discussion on nursing education in which she declared: "Nursing education is too cut and dried" and does not tend to individuality. She recommended the idea of extending nursing education by incorporating actual duty work in junior-home nursing but leaving the student's course.

Miss H. McKee, superintendent of the Brantford General Hospital, reported on activities of the Ontario Registered Nurses' Association. The report showed 73 training schools in Ontario of which 27 are general hospitals, six provincial hospitals and one each devoted to the care of children, mental and tuberculosis cases.

Miss Ethel Cryderman of Toronto, in charge of Victorian Order of Nurses, gave the results of a questionnaire which showed that certain districts of the provinces were not being adequately met as 50 per cent of the people, who require skilled nursing care do not get it.

The Department of Health will be asked to assist financing a board of nursing service, supported by private duty, hourly and visiting service as well as supply carefully-selected nurses. A motion to this effect decided upon completion of Miss Cryderman's report.

Los Angeles, April 17 (CP)— Mrs. Cecelia De Mille Gallagher told Judge Thurmond Clarke she was greatly surprised when her husband, Cecil B. De Mille, director, asked for, because he usually was opposed to divorce proceedings.

She was even more surprised, Mrs. DeMille-Gallagher testified, when she tried to spend the income—"I was deeply humiliated the first time I had only $5 to spend."

Mrs. De Mille was granted a divorce.

Associated Press Staff Writer

Nutley, N.J., April 17.—(AP)— Seven bandits armed with sawed-off shotguns and revolvers looted the baggage car safe of an Erie railroad train today in a daring morning robbery at a tiny station in the heart of a residential section.

First reports, obtained from New York detectives, set the amount of the loot at $58,000 but subsequent official information raised the sum.

The figure came from State Police, who said the loot was composed of one thousand rolls containing $300 packages of coins, one $60 package of bills, and another package of $25 in coin.

State Police said a package of $1,000 in currency valued at $60 also was stolen.

Witnesses said the robbery took only a few minutes.

Ride Behind Strubbery

The gunmen, hidden behind shrubbery on either side of the station platform, leaped into the train when the train pulled in and covered the train crew and railroad inspector William Sutherland. Two of them then entered the baggage car and disarmed Express Messenger Frank Dufty, the messenger-guard. There remained on the station platform, Sutherland and the train pulled in the automobile in which the gang escaped.

"I was cool to meet the "110" Sutherland said later. "Duffy had the express car door open but was open to hand some letters to me. The first thing I knew a man came up behind Duffy and covered him with a sawed-off shotgun into my ribs and told me to 'stick up my hands'. Two others covered Duffy. He didn't have a chance."

Samuel Cummings of Jersey City, crane engineer for the Erie, was unloading trucks at the station platform.

"A fellow with two silver revolvers told me to stand back," he said.

Custody of Triplets Regained by Mother

Miami, Fla., April 17 (AP)—A 32-year-old mother regained custody of her young boy-triplets here today after marrying one of the two men claiming to be the children's father.

Everyone seemed pleased with the outcome of the case except the other father, Joseph Ferrara. Attorney, George Oksil, he stoutly maintained he was the real father and threatened to appeal from the court proceedings.

Juvenile authorities took the children from the mother several months ago and placed the quintet in another man, when the question of their paternity arose. She was charged with neglecting their social welfare.

The mother first said the father of the husky, few-months-old babies was Ferrara. Later she asserted the children's parents was a West Palm Beach resident. The marriage to Ferrara followed soon yesterday married the West Palm Beach man.

The names of the principals in the case were not announced.

Armless Youth Seeks Arms, Sees Hopes in Operation

Newark, N.J., April 17.—(AP)— Anton John Reski, 16, of Nutley, based his hope today for arms although he was told he must be in a train accident on an operation conducted by surgeons who generally discarded by the medical profession.

Dr. Henry H. Kessler, Newark orthopedic surgeon, performed the first of a series of operations designed to give the youth artificial arms which he may operate by use of his muscles in both Israel Hospitals yesterday.

The principles followed by Dr. Kessler in the operation were discovered by an Italian physician, Vanghetti, about 1885 when amputees Italian soldiers were returning to Italy from the ill-fated Ethiopian campaign.

When surgeons in Italy, Germany and England had indifferent success with the idea it was gradually abandoned.

The Newark surgeon, interested in the rehabilitation of industrial accident victims, revived the principles, adding credited by his profession with his successful operation.

In the operation a flap of the patient's skin, is drawn into a tube and inserted under the muscle. When healed, cine-plastic arms are attached to the flaps.

SEED POTATOES MAY BE SCARCE ARTICLE

Although no actual famine is anticipated, the supply of registered seed potatoes will be somewhat less this season in the district, it is reported by local producers and dealers. There will be a scarcity, even with shortages from the Island of Prince Edward Mr. Chas. Bishop, local dealer, "Even now buyers have been active with the result that the price for the registered seed are going up."

Fall Wheat And Clover in Good Shape

Fall wheat and clover crops come through the winter well in this district, according to reports from outside areas. In the Brantford district, however, high mortality of young pigs is reported in the weekly crop report of the Department of Agriculture. The counties of Hastings, Prince Edward and Lennox are particularly affected, it is stated. Backward spring and wet weather is held at fault.

REGISTRATIONS FOR GARDEN PLOTS START

First registration of local unemployed desirous of caring for their own gardens this summer commenced today at the office of the city engineer.

"We want to get an early start this year," commented Mayor Harry Hill, "and hope to have supply lots, that could be used for this purpose, available so that all the land will be showing a true commercial spirit," added the Mayor in his appeal for assistance in this respect.

"It will cost the city a little more this year. Seed, especially potatoes, will be high. We expect to have the land plowed for those who apply for the gardens, but the question of furnishing seed from will have to be given consideration."

Whitby Refuge Inmate Struck by Car, as He Seeks Lift

Colborne, Ont., April 17.—(CP)—Struck by a car, Patrick Gelbon, Rosedale, Toronto, died in Refuge at Whitby, died in hospital here early today, three hours after the accident.

Gelbons apparently was seeking a lift, as he ran into the centre of No. 12 Highway south of Brooklin. A car driven by Lewis Sandwell of Greenwood Corners R. G. Donnan R.C.M. Surrey case will be further investigated, but was allowed his liberty for the 30 day period of enlargement.

A number of cases laid under the Highway Traffic Act were also disposed of including a local motorist, who was alleged to have been operating two different trucks. While only in possession of one pair of license plates, he admitted the conversion of the license plates at a previous date, but added he had procured a second set of plates recently. His case was further enlarged. James Frith, Bloomfield, was found guilty of exceeding the motor car with defective brakes. Frith informed the court he had had a paragraph to adjust the brakes of his car the day previous to his examination. Traffic Officer Ervine informed the court, that the brakes of the Frith car were inadequate and gave figures to prove his testimony. The minimum fine was paid by the disgruntled motorist.

The minimum fine was assessed a local citizen, who was caught driving with the wheels of the Bay of Quinte with a gill net and not in possession of the proper fishing permit. The case was presented by Game Warden McCabe, who also confiscated about 100 feet of gill nets at the time of the arrest.

O.B.C. GRADUATE REVISITS COLLEGE

Talks to Students of His Experiences Since Graduation

Mr. Cecil C. Cardoza, Vice President and Managing Director of Viking Gravity Cleaning Limited, Toronto, visited Ontario Business College, yesterday afternoon. Mr. Cardoza was introduced to the students by Principal I. L. Moore and made a brief address in which he related some of his interesting experiences since graduating from O.B.C. Nine years ago Mr. Cardoza (then a lad of seventeen years of age) arrived at O.B.C., having travelled 2,000 miles from his home in British Guiana, South America, without even writing to the College for information or to announce his coming. He made the venture solely on the recommendation of Mr. A. M. Barcellos, a successful business man in British Guiana, who received his business training at O.B.C. about fifteen years ago. Mr. Cardoza emerged for one month, during which time he will be made to place the elderly man in a home. "This 70-year old age pension will have to be stopped if he does not discontinue the practice of cribbing from the aged," added His Worship. "Perhaps it would be a good idea to establish where the man procures his pension check and bet his disguise if he suggested Crown Attorney R. G. Donnan K.C. Mr. Berry's case will be further investigated, but was allowed his liberty for the 30 day period of enlargement.

A number of cases laid under the Highway Traffic Act were also disposed of including a local motorist, who was alleged to have been operating two different trucks. 15 DAY TERMS FOR BICYCLE THEFTS

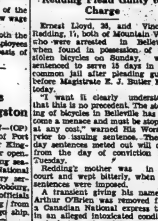
Ernest Lloyd And Vincent Redding Plead Guilty to Charge

Ernest Lloyd, 38, and Vincent Redding, 17, both of Ameliasburg, who were arrested in Belleville when found in possession of two stolen bicycles on Sunday, were sentenced to serve 15 days in the common jail after pleading guilty before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C. today.



"I want it clearly understood, that this is no precedent. The stealing of bicycles in Belleville has become a menace and must be stopped at any cost," warned His Worship prior to issuing sentences. The 15 day sentences meted out will date from the day of conviction last Tuesday.

Redding's mother was in the court and wept bitterly, when the sentences were imposed.

A transient giving his name as Arthur O'Brien was remanded when a Canadian National express train in an alleged intoxicated condition early last evening. O'Brien pleaded guilty to a charge of drunkenness when arraigned before Magistrate Butler today. The usual ten dollars and costs were imposed with the accused man having to take the jail sentence in default of payment. O'Brien was removed from the border of a large C.N.R. engine by C.N.R. police authorities, where he had clung after leaving Kingston.

"DANCING FEET"

GENERAL STAFFS CLOSE PARLEYS

British, French And Belgian Officers Agree

LONDON, April 17.—(CP-Havas) —Concluding families were all that remained today in the consultations among the British, French and Belgian general staffs on plans to guarantee the security of the conferees against any unprovoked aggression by Germany pending final settlement of the Rhineland situation.

Although the utmost secrecy surrounded the sessions it was learned from usually reliable sources that Great Britain's share in defensive measures in fulfillment of its Locarno obligations would be concentrated in air and sea activities.

It was understood that Belgium in a general meeting of the representatives of all the fighting services after the aviation, naval and military experts had met in a series of conferences ahead of time.

Meanwhile Italy's iron-clad terms for ceasing the Ethiopian campaign were criticized by many newspapers as a bid for "Germany's peace" imposed upon a vanquished people" and as a slap in the face for the League of Nations.

Some newspapers urged the lightning of sanctions in order to force Premier Mussolini to moderate his terms.

PIN MACHINE IN CANNIFTON RIFLED

$15 in Cash Taken After Rear Window of Garage Broken

Ross Downey, 18-year-old Canniffton resident was arrested in his own home late today charged with the breaking and entering of Downey's Garage, Canniffton last night. When taken into custody Downey had produced the cash key from which the cash drawer, which Provincial Police say, was stolen from a garage following the pin break-in and entering of the Canniffton Garage, was opened and in the county jail on remand. The pin machine was confiscated by the Provincial Police.

Gaining entrance by means of breaking a rear window, and subsequently opening it, robbers rifled the slot pin machine in Downey's Garage. Canniffton last night early $15.00 in cash. The break-in early $15.00 in cash. The break-in also was discovered by Mr. Lywood, when he arrived at the garage to open business this morning. The provincial Police were immediately notified and the investigation.

Judging from the appearance outside the building, the robbers first tried to gain entrance by means of forcing a north window, but were unsuccessful. They then took a piece of glass in a window on the west side of the building later removing and unlocking the window catch. Once inside the robbers apparently were only interested in the money that could be procured. The slot pin machine was rifled first but was found empty, Mr. Lywood having taken the money earlier when he closed his business late last night. The tin cash drawer of the pin machine was forced open and all of the money removed.

Nothing else was disturbed in the garage, although valuable tools, gasoline, oil and automobile accessories were available.

"It looks like the work of irresponsible boys of a tender age, as money was the sole object of the robbery," commented Provincial Constable L. C. Carr after going over the ground today.

Neighbors reported they heard no disturbances during the night to warrant any suspicion of robbery.

PINKHAMS STILL AT LOGGERHEADS

Rest Their Case of Management With Supreme Court

Lynn, Mass., April 17—(AP)—Heirs of Lydia E. Pinkham, whose compounded name still is a household patent medicine business, are still "at-feudin" about its management, controlled equally by three women, and by three men.

Today's setback, so implacable the two factions cannot even agree on the exact degree of contentiousness they should be, rested with the State Supreme Court for solution.

Before it for the 14 years' standing continues, the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company, still capitalized as it was 60 years ago at only $1,200 goes on returning breaking dividends.

Provincial police are investigating.

Seven Business Places In Arkona Entered

Arkona, Ont., April 17.—(CP)—Appearing to be the work of thieves, that has made spectacular multiple robberies in small towns and villages in Lambton Ontario descended last night on this village and ransacked the property.

Stores robbed yielded an unascertained amount of silver and in one garage the pump was broken and 7 gallons of gasoline stolen, indicating the existence of a gang of motorized burglars, who are sweeping from town to town for rich loot.

Seven business places in the village were entered and small amounts of money taking from cash registers and boxes. Silverware in each instance was gained through breaking windows.

Provincial police are investigating.

Would Be Suicide

London, Ont., April 17 (CP)—In a midnight encounter with a would-be suicide, Wilfrid McAlpine, London policeman, won.

McAlpine saw a well-known young London man on the bridge; rapid preparatory to taking a 40-foot jump into the Thames River. He grappled with the man and relaxed his hold when he had the young man's promise to give up his attempt.

Suddenly the man dashed to the end of the bridge, down the embankment, and plunged into the river. McAlpine followed and pulled him out.

JAIL BREAKERS AT TILLSONBURG POLICE BELIEVE

Think Three, Who Slugged Turnkey at Guelph Gaol, Are Working West

OFFICIALS FIRED

Fugitives at One Time Sighted But Out-Distance Police

LONDON, Ont., April 17.—(CP)—Man-hunting police of Western Ontario turned to the Tillsonburg area, 26 miles southeast of here, early today in an effort to stop the break-and-runaway of three Toronto youths who slugged a jail turnkey at Guelph to gain freedom.

Russell Wessinger, 22; Edward Johnson, 21 and Charles Williams, 18, fled from the Wellington County jail yesterday and escaped vigilant police at one point by racing a stolen motor car at 80 miles an hour between Stratford and St. Mary's. They outdistanced their pursuers.

While Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon moved quickly to 166 Jail Guelph Jail of what he called an inefficient staff, police over a wide part of Western Ontario stayed up all night to watch principal highways. The Detroit trio were believed to be not far from Tillsonburg, where Wessinger's mother is visiting.

The three were sighted late yesterday at Tillsonburg, East of Strafford, by Traffic Officer Charles Anderson, who followed the big stolen car into Stratford, where he advised two other officers that he was continued west on the main highway, but near St. Mary's the all-breakers sped away.

Believed on Reserve

They turned south, it was believed, and police did not abandon the idea that they may have gone to an Indian Reserve seven miles from London. There is an Indian Reserve on the hill dressed in jail garb as far as police knew.

Provincial Secretary Nixon sent two officials of the Don jail at Toronto to take charge of Guelph Jail, leaving Governor Lorne Cosby and Turnkey Ernest Hall under suspicion. Cosby and Topham were discharged but were held pending investigation into a previous escape from the Wellington County Jail, and Hall was to be retained in charge until May 1.

Acting Deputy C.C.C. Bodycott was struck over the head with his own "Billy" and Wessinger, Johnson and Williams used his keys to free fifteen fellow jail birds held on charges of automobile theft and breaking and entering.

In announcing the discharge of Cosby and Topham at Toronto, the Provincial Secretary said: "The present officials are to have nothing to do with the investigation at Guelph. They can find more ways of disregarding the regulations regarding prisoners than all the other jails in Ontario."

RESCUE

Man is ordinary life does not always inspire great admiration of his fellows but in the time of crisis he responds to the great deeds and whole-hearted desire to help.

The Moose River Gold Mine disaster which has closed the shaft on three men 141 feet below is an instance which has brought out the best in men. Miners are at the mine mouth willing to follow down the removal of rock and try to save the men, even though they know that there is very real danger. What is there in man that makes him so great in times of peril? Is it that for a great share of the time most men have their minds clouded as to real values but in a crisis the vision becomes very clear and there is no doubt what are the true values and what are the unimportants?

The efforts to bring mechanical equipment to the mine have written a page of heroism in mining history which cannot be blotted out. Such deeds will abide the wrecking by time. A man why knew the mine a third of a generation ago and knows the tunnels intimately now, lives hundreds miles away but offers to take a plane and fly to the scene to help though he has never flown. A group of rock experts from the McIntyre Gold Mine have planned to make the flight from Montreal to the Nova Scotia mine in order to help, the expense all being borne by the McIntyre Mine Corporation. Wives of the entombed men went to the fairway scene to be near the rescue work.

There is but a single thought in all this —the only thought of those other men who must be brought out from the fallen rocks.

TH FOOTBRIDGE

East Side, West Side, and the other sides of Belleville if there are others, will be pleased when once again there is a footbridge across the river. The bridge which is to replace the former wooden structure destroyed by the flood as its predecessor in 1918 will be of steel and the "swing" will be a thing of the past. But whatever the type of the bridge, it will not be of as much importance as the completion of the bridge and its opening for pedestrians.

If there ever was one thing in Belleville about which there has always been unanimity it has been the need for a footbridge. In a city with a river like the Moira cutting through the heart of the settlement, the oldest part of Belleville, it is but natural that there should be enough bridges. Not one fewer would do than the number which are now serving and have been serving the city.

The footbridge is one of the busiest structures for its size and cost of any to be found anywhere. Probably no one has kept a record of any extent to show the pedestrian traffic across that link between the two sides of the city, but some claim that not seven the vehicular bridges accommodate so many walkers as this middle bridge opposite Catherine Street. Whether this is nearly correct or not it indicates the fact that this is one of the real arteries of movement in the city.

Perhaps the need of the footbridge has been increased or felt more by reason of the contrast in recent days with the ease with which motorists get to the concrete bridges, the upper and lower bridges. The speed of a motor eats up space and time, seems hardly to exist as those in such conveyances reach one or other of these vehicular bridges. But the pedestrian on the average does not walk any faster than his father or grandfathers or great grandfathers did in the past. So the interruption of traffic across the footbridge sets in higher light the necessity for this structure.

Those who first envisioned the footbridge were persons to whom the city owes much. It seems impossible that even in the far distant future such a bridge should disappear. If changes come they will probably be in the shape of a larger bridge at or near the same site.

Now the citizens will watch with keenest interest the progress of replacement.

SELASSIE'S FAITH

The Lion of Judah is not going into conference with the other lion, Il Duce, to settle the East African affair. He pays a tribute to the League of Nations and holds out for agreement within the covenant.

Ethiopia is in a peculiar position and Emperor Haile Selassie knows this. Duce has knowledge of the League and feels bitter. The Emperor is weak and sees strength in the League. He sees little chance for his empire when discussing the settlement with the descendants of those men who were fostered by the prehistoric wolf to whom is given credit for the settlement at Rome.

There is no doubt that the League would wish itself more powerful than it is to enforce justice. Shall it be that the weakness of Ethiopia will lend a hand of strength to the League whose sanctions are largely crippled because of half-hearted participation by some of the nations? Shall the confidence which the little but doughty Emperor has indicated in the League, strengthen the League and give it desire to be good enough to stand for justice to Ethiopia?

If Selassie can do this, he will accomplish a great deal.

FOG AT SEA

The winds have long since died;
A silly hush broods over all,
Save for the league-long heave
Of restless movement
Underneath a sombre sky,
As tho' a power in leash
Was straining there to leap.
Horison and perspective merge,
While slow comes evening on.
O'er the wide waves
A dimness forms
Thin films, like ghostly fingers,
Reach out across the sea,
The cloudiness grows denser;
A misty blanket
Stealthily muffling the world
In darkness.
Winding, weaving, clinging,
Silkenly round
Till all is blurred.
Intangible and vague;
Veiled in a dense obscurity
Wherein strange evils hide;
Disasters threaten,
And all may be malignant.
The gallant ship,
That e'en thro' storm
So proudly ploughed the waves,
As tho' rejoicing in the strife
Of blustering elements,
Now bows submissively
As tho' Leviathan
Lamented fearfully
A world of menace,
Soiled with weird clutch
The shuddering ship
With sinister resentment.
The dreary night drags on;
A haunted night of muffled sound,
Of sibilant murmurs;
Raucous throated roars
Of melancholic siren
Rend the unmoving air.
Cold, clammy dampness
Drips—and drips—and drips
Where misty lights faint flicker;
While each hoarse call "Whoo-oo"
Makes stout hearts beat faster
As the ship's sad soul laments
Fog!
Fog in the night!
At sea.

IKE FALK CONDUCTS THE MORGUE

In a large New York newspaper, That means that Ike Falk collects and preserves all newspaper clippings that may be of future use to editors nd reporters on his newspaper. Most of these are for use as obituaries. The morgue is also an encyclopaper mention of folks in the public eye and when they die or anything of unusual interest happens them the data is at hand for an article. Famous court cases are also embalmed in the morgue to await resurrection perhaps years later when something pertaining to that case becomes of interest again. Now Ike Falk is a baseball fan and keeps close records of what transpires on the baseball diamond in the big leagues. His favorite team is the New York Giants, and when the schedule of games come out in the spring Ike Falk checks them up carefully for his own satisfaction. Ike works at night hence can attend the home games in the afternoon. He has always been a cash customer until this season, now he has a season pass to all National League games and may also be favored for the American League. Ike Falk is methodical and that's how he won the pass. He was checking up on the game schedule just issued and discovered that two teams never permitted home dates to City August 20, the Giants at the Polo Grounds and the Yankees at the Stadium. This seemed wrong to Ike who knew the tow teams never permitted home dates to conflict. He went to the sporting reporters room and old his tale. The bright boys of the press box told him he was crazy and to go back to the morgue where he belonged. However, Ike persisted until the chief sporting editor saw the light and phoned the big man behind the Giants. The Giants-Brooklyn game was switched to Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, and everybody was happy, especially Ike Falk, for whom the sporting editor asked and received a season pas and one, good in all of the parks where the big teams play. And is Ike happy, the happiest man in any morgue in the world.

New Styles Touch Peak of Fashion

Times have changed. We've come a long way from the days when our wardrobes bothered us. Things are swift and worrying clothes. Not the days when a few fabulously rich Parisiennes set the styles and the rest of us followed humbly, imitating, attempting and emitting. Now we have clothes for every occasion, for every season. Now fashionable and above all, appropriate. Nowadays we must be smart; and most of us must be economical. But fortunately, we have the good sense to be proud of our thrift.

Spring, 1936 offers unexcelled opportunity for the expression of modern good taste. Dr. Belleville shops in the chief centres have just on style boom direct from New York and Paris, expoding the successful efforts of the style experts this season. Indeed the creators of fashion have styles boon so enchanting and so suitable, and never in the memory of the generation have they been so inexpensive.

Arthur's Ladies Wear on Front Street seem to have secured a goody share of these new creations. They're sorely fulfilling their obligation to those many Belleville women who depend upon them to give them the "made of the hour" fashions and very often disappointing task of going the rounds of the drive shops is spared those who place their style trust in Arthur's. Ladies Wear" included among these are women of this city to whom these shops on Fifth Avenue, New York City make a special appeal, and the average miss and matron is their patron ess, for though quality is never sacrificed, prices are low and within reach of all. We understand that experience in buying makes this possible. That our readers may profit from our observations, this editorial appears as feature reading interest for the women of this city.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

30 YEARS AGO

April 17th, 1906

Mr. Donald M. Ross of the Collegiate Staff, has been appointed choir master at John St. Church.

Col. W. O. Kelcheson, the popular commanding officer of the 80th Battalion, entertained the married officers of the Battalion and their wives at dinner at the Hotel Quinte. The affair was most enjoyable.

On May 1st, a motor bus service will be established between Belleville and Tweed in place of the stage now running.

Dr. J. F. Salsbury, veterinary surgeon, has moved from Pinnacle Street here in the near future.

30 YEARS AGO

April 17th, 1906

The annual meeting of the vestry of St. Thomas' Church was held last night at which the rector, the Hev. Rural Dean Beamish presided. The financial report presented was most encouraging showing that all liabilities had been paid. The following officers were elected: Vestry Clerk, Mr. S. B. Gormanly; Vestry Warden, Mr. T. N. Ketcheson; Delegate to the Synod, Messrs. S. B. Gorman and Dr. Clinton. The rector appointing Mr. J. F. O. Phillips as his warden. The committee composed of Messrs. J. F. O. Phillips, T. N. Ketcheson, W. A. Ringsford, J. A. Kerr, H. Ross and F. R. Lingham was appointed to look after the repairing of the stone wall about the church property. It was moved by Mr. W. A. Ringsford and seconded by Mr. J. A. Kerr that the vestry deem it advisable that a new Parish Hall be erected in order to meet the requirements of the Sunday School and parish organizations. The motion was carried. Mr. W. H. Spence was re-engaged as organist at an increased salary. A vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. A. A. Roberts the retiring vestry clerk.

It is possible that there may have been a spring when the streets in Belleville were in worse condition than they are at present, but few people will be able to call it to mind.

Little Benny's Note Book

We was eating supper and ma said to pop, "Pa, I want you to tell a story today about an absent minded man, I don't think I could remember it.

I wish I could remember it for you but perhaps I've never even heard it, pop said, and ma said, I'm sure I don't remember it either so tell it to you, that's why I'm draining every story to try to remember it It's something an obsetn minded man did, that's my only clue, she said.

Was it the story about the absent minded man that climbed into the umbrella stand and threw his umbrella upstairs so it would get washed up for supper? pop said, and ma said, I'm sure that is so, I mean of course not such an idea, Fanny Hyson told me the story, but what was it she said.

Maybe it was the one about the absent minded man who stuffed his hands into his pockets and wiped his lips with his fried egg, pop said, and ma said, Now William now can I concentrate with that sort of thing going on? Do you want to hear the story pr dont you? she said.

Yes, yes, unless it's the one about the absent minded man that put his handkerchief behind his nose in his pocktt, pop said. You know I can't remember stories unless I get to buy yourselves a little notebook and sit down as they come along, he said, and ma said, Williyum that's the very story, I mean it's about an absent minded man whose wife told him to buy a notebook and he was so afraid he'd forget it that he went and bought an absent minded man a book and wrote in it, Remember to buy my wife a notebook, ma said.

By gollies we both win, would you mind passing pea? pop said with ma did.

Discovered After Dynamite Blast Said to Aid Rescuers

Moose River, N.S., April 17 (CP) —A possible new entrance to the Moose River Gold Mine, where three Nova Scotia miners have been entombed since Sunday, was discovered today, engineers said.

Workmen immediately began in exploring the new opening to see if it would lead to the slope towards the 141-foot level where Dr. D. E. Robertson, H. B. Magill and Alfred Scadding were trapped by a cave-in.

"We are going to stop for nothing," John Hemlgar, in charge of the rescue operations, said after the successful explosion of a ton and a half of dynamite stuffed into 36 holes drilled in a face of eight square feet.

"As fast as the shovel can clear away the rock we will blast again, and sweep it up until we get into the tunnel."

The blasting last night and early today considerably loosened the difficulties of volunteers attempting to enter the mine. Beginning of next winter, when year gardens are removed. SATISFACTION GUARANTEED! OUR REPUTATION IS EXCELLENT . . . TRY US FOR TRULY SATISFACTORY SERVICE.

Shipping Trade Expects Better Season Than

(By The Canadian Press)

Black smoke soon will trail across the horizon of the Great Inland Empire from Port William to Montreal as freshly-painted freighters and trim passenger liners begin the Great Lakes shipping trade for another year, Activity on the Lower Lakes has already started.

Quiet optimism pervades shipping circles, where a better season than last is expected. The feeling has spread all along the 1,000-mile waterway. Business is going to be better, fewer boats will be laid up, more men will be given work, passenger trade will reach a new postdepression high point.

While navigation has already opened at Toronto and Hamilton, lake traffic will not become general until next week or May 1. Short runs on Lake Ontario have been made during the last two days. The first vessel of 1936 is expected to put into Kingston harbor today.

Port Weller, engaged in charge of the Welland ship canal, expects to open the locks April 26, later than last year. The delay is due to large fields of ice in the upper part of Lake Erie, according to Tom Dunkirk, N.Y., to Port Maitland, Ont.

It will be May 1 before Sault Ste. Marie locks are opened, accordingly to latest estimates. Prevailing cold weather has deferred the breakup of ice in the St. Mary's River, but when the season opens, that marine men expect it to be a busy one.

W. E. Tummon Addresses Stirling Welfare Club

Stirling (Special)—A large number of members of the Stirling Community Welfare Club attended their final meeting before the summer season, when the Club played host to the Stirling Rotary Club and were addressed in a most interesting fashion by Mr. Wesley Tummon, ex-M.P., and former representative to the Federal House of Commons for South Hastings, on the subject, "The Canadian Coat of Arms."

As the dinner gong sounded about seventy-five members took their places at the tables which were attractively arranged and after doing many good things to eat by the ladies of the Stirling Women's Institute, proceeded to do justice to the meal. Mr. Fred Mallory very capably officiated as Sergeant-At-Arms and community singing was directed by Arthur Dunning, song leader, following the toast to the King, proposed by W. Solmes after which the introduction of Mr. Tummon and Mr. Joe Wilson introduced his father who was well received by the club for the first time. Mr. H. Dafoe was also introduced as a guest. Several new members were then introduced in the persons of Mr. Tom Fraser, Trenton and Mr. Mark Sloots and all were heartily welcomed by the president. Mr. Gray thus the members of the Stirling hockey team, champions of the Central Hastings Hockey League were introduced in a body and given a rousing welcome. Mr. Harry Lovibond in a very efficient manner with Mr. William Whitby performing well known coach and manager of the team made the introductions and Mr. Joe Wilson introduced his father who was then presented to the club for the first time. Mr. H. Dafoe was also introduced as a guest. New members were then introduced in the persons of Mr. Tom Fraser and Mr. Mark Sloots and all were heartily welcomed by the president. Mr. Gray thus the members of the Stirling hockey team, champions of the Central Hastings Hockey League were introduced in a body and given a rousing welcome. Mr. Solmes also was the introducer of Mr. Tummon and Mr. Joe Wilson introduced his father who was then presented to the club for the first time. Mr. H. Dafoe was also introduced as a guest. New members were then introduced in the persons of Mr. Tom Fraser and Mr. Mark Sloots and all were heartily welcomed by the president. New members were then introduced in the persons of Mr. Tom Fraser and Mr. Mark Sloots and all were heartily welcomed by the president.

Speaking on the subject "The Canadian Coat of Arms" the latter selected orator revealed an intimate knowledge of the subject in its every origin. Modestly stating at the outset of his talk that he was not an authority on the subject, he reviewed ancient history to reveal the original purpose of the Coat of Arms which began in the middle ages to become a means of personal identification. People in those days adopted red, real and white as colors so they adopted the system of "quarter writing" and the spoke of all the quarterings in addition. A still ailing to the idea in many ways, Canada's case for five leaves, Ontario, Clubs, lodges, colleges and even commercial institutions have some distinctive emblem which is in a real sense a coat of arms and a means of identification other than the actual name. The emblem has a lasting appeal and is used on the letterheads of the up. Early in the sixteenth century the practice of granting arms to men making their grandparents no longer.

Mr. Tummon then traced the Canadian Coat of Arms from its inception, Mr. Richard and Sidney Cleary attended Easter services at Bethesda on Sunday.

REGARDS MILITARY STRENGTH

Paris, April 16 (AP)—French look cavely stock of 84 years military strength and hastened to increase it today, facing the prospect of extension of collective security, built up under the League of Nations since the Great War, might collapse.

Virtually all French sources anticipated that a final showdown on sanctions at Geneva not only would demonstrate the League is impotent in the face of Italy's defiance, but also would create a new peril — British abandonment of France against Germany.

Corporation Tax Legislation Appeal Urged by Trustees

Toronto, April 16—(CP)— A resolution demanding "the earliest repeal" of Ontario legislation granting separate schools a larger share of corporation taxes was passed today by the Ontario Educational Associations Trustees and ratepayers' section.

The resolution, sponsored by W. J. Miller of Grey County, urged: "Since this iniquitous legislation has already passed the Ontario legislature, this body strongly protests such action and calls upon all public school supporters to repudiate the betrayal of the public school interests and that we demand the earliest repeal of the separate school tax bill."

Obituary

WILLIAM J. BAKER
(Wartworth)

William J. Baker, one of the pioneers of Percy Township, is dead in Wartworth in his 82nd year. Born in Stirling, Mr. Baker has spent his entire life in Percy Township.

Last Christmas Day he and Mrs. Baker celebrated their golden wedding.

Mr. Baker took a keen interest in municipal politics. During the later part of the last century he was Reeve of the Township and again four years ago he occupied the same position with very much success and credit.

He is survived by his wife and six daughters survive.

The funeral will be under Masonic auspices and will be held Sunday afternoon to St. John's Anglican Church, Wartworth.

AT THE REGENT

Chaplin's Fans Unleashed by Five Years' Absence

There is in Hollywood one star, and one only, who could desert the silver screens of the world for almost five years and suffer no diminution of his wide popularity. That star is Charlie Chaplin.

When "Modern Times" comes to the screen of the Bella Theatre, tomorrow (Saturday) for four days, matinee daily, it will mark the comedian's first film in that space of time....."City Lights" was the last. Yet, he still stands out in the news columns of the world press, thanks to the magic that is Charlie Chaplin.

There is much to attest to this magic, but no more tangible evidence of it exists than the solid wall of shelves in a huge vault at the Chaplin home, filled with books containing press clippings concerning the famous comedian from every part of the world.

There are those of a number of years ago, when he appeared in picture after picture, adding millions to his following with each production. There're the clippings of more recent days that speak of Charles Chaplin as an artist, a genius, one of the world's great, and what not. As one thumbs through the clippings of today and yesterday and last week and last year, one notes in the monotonous verbiage the realization that Charlie Chaplin, the man and the artist, is constantly before the world.

Three Ambitions!

The original imitations of Chaplin that swept this country five years ago are still going on. Recent clippings from Japan tell of a contest for the world championship of Charlie Chaplin" in which hundreds of men and boys surrounded, swarming the streets with oriental contortions of the famous Chaplin walk.

In England, a half-Scottish-bastet carrying championship was sponsored by the Borough Market Charity Sports at Merne Hill, London. To the winner went the trophy. Chaplin was asked and agreed to donate a special prize for the winner. He contributed a suit, an overcoat and a gold watch. The prize department store recently offered prizes of a gramophone and a woven Chaplin hair in a similar contest.

A huge statue of Chaplin stands on the parapet of a certain bridge in Rotterdam, Holland. The comedian has been the subject of innumerable cartoons and comic strips. Many books and articles on his life have been published. Puppets of Chaplin are featured in both Tony Sarg's marionette show and that of the Yale Puppeteers.

Distinguished Company

Vanity Fair recently featured a page of celebrities who play the violin for no other reason than they like the instrument. Chaplin was represented in such varyingly distinguished company as Benito Mussolini, Wynn Richard and Albert Einstein. In another issue of the same periodical, he was pictured with Marconi, Edison, and Byrd as among the most prominent men of our time.

Paderewski on his last visit to New York, said in an exclusive interview that his trip was a disappointment" because none of the Chaplin films was showing."

In Hungary, a vote was taken in one of the leading newspapers, on the leading men of the world. Famous figures were in danger and only one was to be saved, whose name would be printed. Charlie Chaplin won the majority of the votes. Scores of similar tributes could be cited emphasizing the undiminishing celebrity of the man who dared to lay aside the well famous symbols of his time....the amusing hat, the stick, the trousers....for almost the trick moustache.... for always.

2 Sparkling Hits

To launch that genial prince of humor, Irvine S. Cobb, in a motion picture starring vehicle, one must fitting a vehicle could have been chosen than "Pest House Joe Man," which opened yesterday at the Bella. It is a rollicking, congenial picture that will keep you rocking with its gentle mirth, and shocked every minute or two by the with its happy romantic story.

Norman Foster, Rochelle Hudson and Johnny Downes are seen in the leading juvenile roles.

Booth Tarkington's funniest story, "Penrod and Sam" featuring Jane Withers, Tom Brown, Martha Hunt and Jackie Searl is the second feature attraction on the same program, Plus a novel and different oddity in technicolor "Peculiar Science."

The entire program will be repeated again tonight for the last times, the last complete show starting at 4.30 p.m.

AT THE CAPITOL

Saturday Only—Two Great Action Features, "Federal Agent" and "Here Comes the Navy"

Although not a detective story, "Federal Agent" which comes to the Capitol Theatre on Saturday, starring Bill Boyd, demonstrates the methods of government men in tracking down conspirators against the government and gives proof to the oft-made claim that every action in the world is suspicious of the other, and what it has in the way of war weapons and explosives.

Taking the part of the central figure in the story, that of a Secret Man, Bill Boyd goes on the trail of an international spy ring after his partner has been killed by its leader in an attempt to wrest the secret of a powerful explosive from its inventor, an American.

Women are, of course, instrumental in unravelling the plot, and the solution comes after an exciting climax in which romance has its fling.

"Here Comes the Navy"

Probably the largest cast ever assembled for a single picture will be seen in the Warner Bros. production of "Here Comes the Navy," in addition to the regular actors and actresses, 2,000 of Uncle Sam's jack-tars take active part in the film.

James Cagney and Pat O'Brien have Dy similar roles, as in "G" seamen, who hate each other with a bitter intensity, which is augmented by the fact that the former is in love with the latter's sister. They carry on a feud that is punctuated by rapid fire action and many thrills, winding up in a smashing airplane climax.

Gloria Stuart, the pretty University of California girl who recently joined the Hollywood picture colony, is responsible for the romantic angle, being Jimmy's sweetheart. Hilarious comedy is furnished by Frank Hyers, Frank McHugh, Maude Eburne and others.

CARMEL W.M.S.

The April meeting of the W.M.A. was held in the home of Mr. Geo. Moorman. The worship period opened with hymn 92 and the Lord's prayer in unison. Psalm 8 was read by Mrs. Hosmer. Hymn 91 was sung. Mrs. Simmons gave a reading on Thanksgiving and offered Prayer. Fourteen members answered the roll call. The minutes were read and adopted.

Mrs. R. Homans gave a reading. Several hymns followed the watch tower. Mrs. Moorman then took charge of the program. Hymn 98 was sung and prayer was offered by Mrs. Hosmer. A duet was given by Mrs. Pitman and Mrs. Homans. Mrs. Moorman gave the chapter from the study book. Mrs. M. Foss spoke in Ruthenian centime, that was very interesting as there was a Ruthenian settlement only a few miles from her home in the west. The meeting closed with hymn 83 and the Mizpah benediction. Mrs. Ross entertained with a contest, and the hostess served lunch. Collection $2.36.

Poor Quality Lenses Increase Eyestrain

A prescription for glasses from the best Eyesight Specialist in the world would do your eyes more harm than good unless it was filled with first quality, flawless lenses, properly adjusted in correctly designed mountings.

IT COSTS NO MORE TO GET THE BEST.

We recommend Tillyer Lenses because their superiority is obvious, they are built up to an ideal, not down to a price, and yet they cost no more than other first quality lenses.

Stirling and District

Stirling—After about three weeks' skating weather and what the curling season had been definitely closed for the season a month ago, curling enthusiast discovered that there was still good ice and a game was held in the Stirling Arena, with a fairly good surface. The news travelled with lightning speed and the arena looked the rink over and decided it was still fit to stand on. Therefore they gathered permission from the proper source to open it out. The rights had not been disconnected for the season, but that problem was solved by getting cash to the doorkeeper and enabling the headlights over the ice with different car owners using their lights in relays.

It was considered a joke by many but when they saw fifteen or twenty young people enjoying fairly good skating, they dashed home for their skates and have one merry evening at winter sports in summer weather. During the winter the rink was under the management of Mr. George Tulloch who with regular flooding supplied about fourteen or fourteen inches of ice of which nearly five inches still remains. With the final hockey match of the season taking place early in March the rink was considered closed for the season and the discovery of the ice was only made recently. Those who enjoyed this novel experience had an unbirthday such party on Friday evening, April 17th which will no doubt establish a record in the annals of curling on natural ice.

Among those present on Monday evening were: Harry Lowbond, Oakley Graham, Fred Eggs, Frank Sather, Bill Morton and Son, Winnifred Ward, Dorothy Eggleton, Helen Embury, Audrey Embury, Mr. Arthur Eakman, Lorna Adamson, Don Williams, Tommy Ward and Harold Alcombrack.

St. Andrew's Guild

The regular weekly meeting of St. Andrew's Guild took place in the Sunday School rooms on Monday evening under the direction of the Literary Dept. with Mrs. Connolly in charge being responsible for all business matters arising. The program opened with the usual song service with Mr. Duncan Montgomery leading and acting as Chairman and Rev. J. A. Kofford leading in prayer. An Easter reading taken given by Shirley Montgomery was appropriately given. During the business part of the meeting which followed a committee composed of Duncan Montgomery, Arthur Duncan, William Dermidy, Mrs. J. M. McCoy and Margaret Rosebush was appointed to arrange the stage for the play which is to be presented by the Foxboro Dramatic Group next Tuesday. Miss Gena Sedgwick secretary, also read the called report of the last meeting. The Sedgwick lesson was read by Obea Sandwell and the speaker was Arthur Sine who gave an instructive talk on the "Crucifixion". Mr. William Dermidy then offered a short prayer which is the devotional part of the meeting. Mrs. Connolly then dismissed and the Benediction after which a social hour was spent in charge with Miss Aletha Spry directing "A Vegetable Contest". The attendance number system reveal ed a good attendance.

St. Paul's Y. P. U.

The Young People's Union of St. Paul's Young People's Union took place in the church parlours on the evening of Easter Monday under the direction of the Citizenship Dep't. with Mr. Ernest Singleton in charge. Mr. E. Bilkh was in charge of the opening service and devotional period which included a song service of Spiritual hymns and prayer by Rev. R. W. Rowland. The Scripture lesson for the occasion was taken by Miss Margaret Singleton and Romans, verses 5 to 21 and was read by Miss Ruth Drake.

Miss Singleton officiated from the piano during the remaining part of the service and the first number was a saxophone duet by Lloyd Bowman and Clarence West. Mrs. Alta Rowland at the piano. The speaker of the evening was Rev. Don Williams who delivered a splendid address on the question "Does Jesus Live — in us"? The next number was a vocal duet by Misses Ruth Drake and Muriel Long, "Long Ago" accompanied by Mrs. Rowland. This was also very greatly enjoyed. The gathering was then divided into two groups for a Spelling Geography test with Mr. Ray Matheson and Lloyd Rowland as leaders, with the latter presenting group winning by a close margin. During the business part of the meeting Mrs. Wescott gave the secretary's report of the last meeting and the treasurer's report was revealed about forty members present. The meeting was brought to a close with the Mispah Benediction.

Unique Birthday Greeting

On Good Friday afternoon a group of friends gathered at Orson St. gathered at the home of Mrs. Georgs Livingstone who upon that day celebrated her birthday. Mrs. Livingstone who is one of Stirling's oldest residents is a fine cheerful with all the children of the neighborhood who pay their daily visits to her home. On Friday a group of her young friends visited her and by bringing a tiny gift for their friend. Among them was little Erma Monroe who also celebrated a birthday on the same day. Those who called to present their gifts were Erma Monro, Allan Monro, Joan Monro, Allan Munro, Benny and Rose Munro, Faye Tomlinson and Dorothy Bleiln.

Bride of a Day Has Fractured Skull

Listowel, Ont., April 16.—(CP)—Bride of a day, Mrs. Claude Knobbauch of Britton was unconscious in the hospital today suffering from a possible fracture of the skull and other serious injuries, as the result of a crash between a passenger car and a road grader, on the county line road four miles east of Listowel late yesterday. Her condition was critical.

Five persons were in the car which plunged into the ditch, hitting a hydro pole after colliding with the grader, driven by William Thompson, Listowel. They were all members of a wedding party on their way to Listowel to have the wedding group photographed.

All of the five were injured, but Mrs. Knobbauch was the most seriously hurt.

Double Fracture of Thumb Puts Joe Cronin of Boston On Bench for at Least Month

Jimmie Foxx Starts to Pay Dividends by Hitting Homer

YOUNGER DEAN BEATEN

Cubs Win But Frisch Plays Last Innings Under Protest

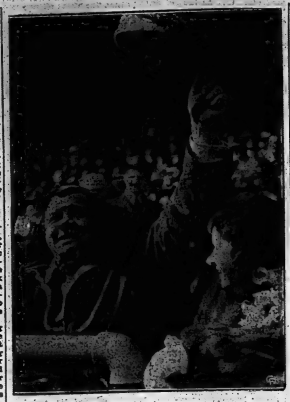
Jimmie Foxx, who tied Hank Greenberg for home run honors with 36 each last year, started paying dividends in this respect yesterday with his first round trip socker of the year.

Cronin is expected to be out of action for two or three weeks with a double fracture of the thumb received as the Red Sox drubbed the Athletics 10-4. In the second inning, Pinky Higgins charged into second base and Cronin, after fumbling the ball, tagged him. The manager continued to play but when he reached the bench an examination revealed the breaks. Eric McNair was moved over to Cronin's shortstop berth and Johnny Kroner, a rookie from Syracuse, played third.

Paul Dean, who watched brother Jerome's dismal performances in the opening game, was the victim of a 5-3 defeat by the Cubs. The Cards' established a two-run lead in the second inning but the Cubs came back in the fifth to score four and ever up the game. Vest hit Jurges with a pitched ball to initiate his downfall and three hits and two more passes completed the damage.

There were shades of the days, when Babe Herman did acrobatics in the pastures as the Giants notched their third straight win over the Dodgers 7-6.

The tying and winning runs crossed the plate in the ninth inning when Jordan and Lindstrom of the Bridegrooms collided while attempting to catch what appeared to be an easy fly.



Yanks Down Senators

The Yankees defeated Washington Senators 6-3. Five pitchers, three for the Senators and two for the Yanks, saw service in this game and they yielded a total of 20 safeties. Two of the Yank's 13 hits were for extra bases, George Selkirk getting a homer, a triple and a single. Selkirk is a native of Orillia, Ont., taken on last season to fill the mammoth shoes of Babe Ruth.

As the Senators were dropping their first game in three starts, the Pirates also were getting their first taste of defeat. Cincinnati Reds hung up their first victory of the year as they downed the Bucs 7-4. Homer whaled out his second homer of the year in the first inning, while Critz and Goodman of the Reds hit for round tripe.

Only 500 fans turned out to see the Phillies down Boston Bees 7-5. The Bees went into the eighth inning trailing 7-1 tallied three runs on a homer by Hal Lee Spd—came back to get another in the ninth.

The Chicago-Indiana, Browns-White Sox games were postponed because of cold weather.

SPECTATOR FOR THE FIRST TIME IN 38 YEARS—For the first time in over 20 years, Babe Ruth attended the opening of a baseball season as a fan and not as player. Here the Babe is pictured with his wife in the stands at the Polo Grounds, New York, when Giants opened the season against Brooklyn Dodgers. The spectacular was the occasion of applause that greeted his appearance, proved that the mighty slugger still holds a large place in the hearts of baseball's faithful.

ROYALS BEAT ALBANY

Five Home Runs And 12 Doubles When Orioles Defeat Bisons

Despite lamentable lack of cooperation from the old gentleman who controls the barometers, International League is off to a good start on another season, which is expected to draw well over a million fans through the turnstiles. Old man weather erased one of the opening games from the schedule yesterday, when rain kept the Syracuse Chiefs and Rochester Red Wings idle and provided chilly winds and cloudy skies for the other three. Still some 23,000 fans turned out to see the Champion Montreal Royals, the Toronto Maple Leafs and Albany Senators win the first games amid a barrage of home runs.

Montreal, which won the 1935 pennant but lost out in the Governors' Cup playoffs, got off to another good start by trouncing the Albany Senators 9 to 3 before a 4lizi crowd of 3,000 at Albany. Home runs by Gus Dugas and Del Bissonnette sent Montreal away in front with three tallies in the first. Albany got to Lauri Myllyrtanpaa in the fifth round in the second but the Royals landed on Al Benton with both feet in the sixth and piled up the game when four hits and two errors produced five runs.

Toronto Wins

The day's biggest crowd, 13,000 fans, Toronto came out ahead 7 to 5 in a nip and tuck battle with the Newark Bears. Leroy Hermann, one of the many Cincinnati Reds "Junkers" on the Maple Leaf squad, gave only six hits but two were homers by Roy Schalk and Dick Porter and two walks and three errors gave Newark three runs without a hit into the ninth. Toronto clipped relief flinger Frank Makosky for three runs, winning out, when Lou Scarsella singled home Hank Brickson and Johnny Burnett.

Playing in the beautiful Baltimore Park before 8,000 fans, Baltimore and Buffalo started slugging for the fences and wound up with five home runs and 12 doubles out of a total of 26 hits. The Orioles won the slugfest 15 to 11 as Walter Casey smacked two of the home-dary bells and Ab Wright one. Ollie Carnegie and Beauty McGowan hit a homer apiece for the Bisons.

GOLF

BY ALEX MORRISON

We are quick to note when a dancer is off balance. We don't have to be educated about the technique of dancing to know good balance. The proper balance and rhythm are things which we all sense.

Why this sense, which helps us to measure a dancer's balance, doesn't function for us when watching a golfer is more than I know. I have my own idea as to why most observers fail to make the proper check on a golfer's balance, but few people seem to have any notion; in fact they're not even interested. It would benefit them greatly if they were.

For example, the best and the balance, that balance which you'd note if you looked at the player's right or left side, is a vital part of every swing. The average player apparently gives it no consideration, with the result that he invariably falls toward his toes during his swing.

The experts does just the opposite. When he moves away from a steady balance it is to lean back toward his heels. You'll find that it pays to keep more weight on your heels.

George Selkirk, Yankees: Led 18-hit attack on Washington pitchers with home run, triple and single.

Jimmy Foxx, Red Sox: Hit first home run of season with two on against Athletics.

Hank Leiber, Giants: His second double in the ninth drove in the two runs that defeated Brooklyn 7-6.

John Moore, Phillies: Found Boston pitchers for homer and three singles in five times at bat.

Larry French, Cubs: Kept Cards' 10 hits well scattered to beat Paul Dean.

Kiki Cuyler and Ival Goodman, Reds: Their home runs were the factor in 7-4 victory over Pirates.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE ZELETZ
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, April 17 (AP)—Casey Stengel and Umpire "Beans" Reardon fired at each other throughout the Giant-Dodger series....One of Stengel's quips was: "You would be a fine asset to baseball if you just stayed in the movies."..... When Bill Terry removed Freddy Fitzsimmons from the 21 a year list, he handed Freddy a blank contract and told him to fill it out for what he wanted.....Freddy did, Terry said O.K. and the Giants had another contented athlete.

Ox Eckhardt and Danny Taylor, Dodgers' outfielders, were born on the same day of the year..... Thad Leroy Haynes must have something, at that..... Remember, Hale Bevera stayed 19 round with Joe Louis.... Old timers say Tommy Baker, Dodger colt pitcher, is a dead ringer for "Smoky Joe" Wood, ex-Red Sox star and now baseball coach at Yale..... Gil Hall, one of the rank-ing amateurs, says Barclays Bank tennis has improved 50 per cent over his amateur days.... The Mitchell Field Bombs it has another fistic world beater in Adolph Winter, 21-year-old 200-pounder. Joe Louis said Winter gave him his hardest fight.

Mike Brady offered to commit Hari-Kari if Babe Didrikson outdrove him....On the first tee, after the drives, Brady handed Mike a jackknife with the blade open....The Babe collected 14 smackers off the other long male driver, one buck for each hole on which she whanged a longer ball..... There were four par-three holes on the course..... The Dodgers tried to sell Joe Stripp to the Cards for $10,000..... Frankie Frisch's top was $4,000..... I believe he'll be worth all of that."

Leonard Gettelson of North Long Branch, N.J., comes up with some more opening day records. For instance, Bill Rogell, Tiger shortstop, went through the opener without getting a chance in the field....Red Morgan of the Cardinals made his first Major League homer on his first time at bat, while acting as a pinch hitter....First time on record that was ever done in big league opener..... And Bill Herman on the Cubs equalled the record set in 1927 by Al Tyson of the Giants, by banging out five hits.

CURRENT SPORT
DAY BY DAY

Whether they are putting the cart before the horse or otherwise cannot be determined, but those entertaining in baseball circles in the elevation of senior ball in Belleville have about come to the end of their patience. The service clubmen have tried in vain to form an executive to carry on senior baseball in Belleville, but without the desired results to date. Now they are going at things in a different manner. Frank Domenico, Joe Shortt and other service clubmen announced they will meet, on a common level, the players who are desirous of playing senior baseball. The players are asked to attend an open meeting at the "Y" tonight.

If the players are desirous of playing senior ball and want a team to represent well they'll have to "play ball" with those behind the scenes. The golden age of sports is the sensible commodities is all over. From henceforth the players will have to assume some of the financial burden, if the game is to survive through a period of restrictions. We can remember, and not so many years ago either, when the players banded together, bought their own equipment and even paid their own entrance fee into leagues. The present heads of baseball are not asking local players to "dig down in their pockets" and "pay the shot," but they intend to have some kind of an understanding if they sponsor a team locally.

Perhaps, after all is said and done, it might be a good idea to suspend senior baseball activities in Belleville for a year or more, then perhaps more interest would be shown and the game might revert back to its former status.

The late Lou Marsh was an ardent angler and used to delight in relating some of his fishing experiences in his Pick and Shovel column. Now that Gordon Sinclair is the Star sport columnist we wonder why he doesn't tell his readers all about his sucker fishing trip to Podgers' Creek, near Clarkson, some time ago.

Efforts to form a district junior baseball league will be made at the "Y" tonight. Invitations have been sent to Napanee, Picton, Trenton and Wellington to have delegates at the meeting. Coupled with Belleville, it would mean that a five-teamed loop could be formed. Perhaps Trenton might be interested in junior ball and then a splendid four-teamed loop for junior baseball would result.

The Picton interests, however, are up in arms against Napanee using Vern Bishop on their junior team. The Prince Edward County mogul feel that a pitcher who has hurled successful baseball for two seasons in the intermediate ranks with Napanee Gibbards in 1934 and Picton in 1935, should not be allowed to pitch in a newly formed junior league. The fellers suggested for the new set-up, Personally, we doubt very much if Bishop could qualify to play junior ball, as he looks to be over 20 years of age. At any rate the question of Bishop playing in the proposed junior loop will be thoroughly aired tonight at the "Y". Belleville and Picton interests will object to Bishop being used as a junior by Napanee, they say. Of course, Bishop's application for transfer was held up by the O.B.A.A. recently. This will be Bishop's third move in three successive years.

It may be news to local wrestling fans, but Jack Corcoran personally informs us that "The Unknown", that mysterious wrestler who opposes Ed Meske of Cleveland in the main bout of Tuesday night's Queensbury A. C. card, only signs contracts on one consideration; the winner takes all of the purse, when The Unknown wrestles. To date this system has proven to be very good business for him and simply because he has won 47 of his last 49 bouts, having drawn with Joe Savoldi and Ernie Dusek. Local wrestling fans are to be congratulated, however, in being privileged to have the Unknown-Meske bout staged in Belleville, Meske is well-known all over the continent and can just about call his own figure, when it comes to demanding prices for his services. Meske, the wrestling world's trail-blazer, has never met The Unknown in the squared circle and we understand that even Jack Corcoran is coming "to Belleville on Tuesday night to see this bout. "Mark my words the Unknown-Meske bout will be the talk of wrestling fans in Belleville for weeks," boasted Gen. Harris, Corcoran's secretary, this week.

The Toronto Maple Leafs commenced their season's baseball activities auspiciously with a win over Newark. In the major leagues the Giants, White Sox and Red Sox are the only undefeated clubs this morning. After Dizzy Dean lost the opening game on Tuesday, brother Paul was roughly handled by the Cub batters and the Cards lost again yesterday. Manager Frisch is DRAKE CONNECTS—Teddy Drake, famous centreforward of the Arsenal, photographed as he went into the air to head one of Sunderland's attacks at Highbury, home ground of the Gunners. The ball is seen after Drake had connected.

DUNLOP'S OPPONENT

..."IRISH" DONOVAN...

For the past six months Al Dunlop, the Cleveland rough-house grappler, has been wrestling in the "big time" in and around his Ohio home town. Dunlop is reported to have made rapid progress in the wrestling game since he was signed by Matchmaker Corcoran last November. Dunlop was always a favorite in Belleville and is being brought from Cleveland especially to satisfy local wrestling fans. He meets one of the better known grapplers in the business when he takes on "Irish" Jack Donovan, the Irish villain. Donovan weighs 230 pounds and has plenty of speed. These two boys meet in the semi-final bout at the arena on Tuesday night when Ed Meske, the Yankee veteran, tackles "The Unknown" in the main bout.

protesting the loss regarding the umpires' decision relative to the infield fly rule. The Red Sox suffered a severe loss when Manager Joe Cronin suffered a fractured thumb and will be out of the game for at least a month.

Apparently Belleville is not the only club in the doldrums in the C.O.B.I. The following story, now penned by the "combinations" at Kingston will give some idea as to the baseball situation in the Limestone City—— "Prospects of a C.O. B.I. team functioning here this summer aren't any brighter now than they were a month ago. It is learned that members of the executive of last year are paying off the big deficit and naturally aren't jumping into organization for this summer, with the prospects of again operating at a loss. Obviously, if there is going to be a C.O.B.I. team this summer, it's mostly up to the players themselves to organize. There are plenty of good ball players in the city and "Chief" Jack Williams is at Verona and available for pitching duties. Stan Scrutton Joey Callis and others are willing and anxious to play senior ball and ought to get the chance this summer."

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

MONTREAL, April 17—There was a slightly easier tone yesterday on the local butter market, quotations being 1-4c per lb. under Wednesday's prices. The demand was firm. The potato market ruled firm at the week's advance. Eggs and poultry were unchanged. Receipts for the day were posted at the Board of Trade as 1,144 cases of eggs, 363 boxes of butter and no poultry.

The potato market was quoted as follows on No. 1 grade, per 75 lb. bag. P.E.I. Montalns. $1.50 to $1.60; P.E.I. Gobblers or N.B. Mountains, $1.45 to $1.50; Quebec Gobblers, $1.40 to $1.45. For 15-lb. bags of N.B., or P.E.I. Mountains prices were 20-21c. On Quebec, 15-lb. bags, 18-19c. Bags 100 lbs. $1.20 to $1.25 per 98 lbs. On new potatoes prices were $2.35 per 90-lb. crates for Texas stock.

The butter market was 31 1-4c to 32 1-4c for No. 1 regraded in carlots or 1-2c less.

On the egg market graded shipments in cartons or 1-2-1 lots were 24c to 25c for A-large; 23 1-2 cents for A-medium or B, and 16 1-2 to 17c for A-pullets or C.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, April 17—(AP)—There was buying in the oils and a new sustained speculation in today's market, but declines elsewhere were general.

Indian Refining got up about 5 points at one time but, near the start of the final hour, had reduced this to 3. Others, up fractions to a point, including U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Simms Petroleum Co., Atlantic Refining, Standard Oil of Indiana, Ohio Oil and Texas Corp. Among the losers were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Auburn, Case, Chrysler, Santa Fe, Central Canada, Consolidated Edison.

Sales today were the irregular. Transfers approximated 1,600,000 shares.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, April 17—(CP)—Trading slackened as the Toronto section of Toronto exchange this afternoon but prices were practically no change in prices with a few exceptions. Paymaster was under heavy accumulation and, after advancing to 8 cents and San Antonio, McKenzie Red Lake were stronger.

An advance of about 3 cents for White-Amulet was about the only feature in the oils. Canadian Oils were steady to strong but slow. In the gilt Texas-Canadian firmed narrowly.

Among the cheap issues Arbon, Davies Petroleum, Empire Oklahoma and Franklin inc., a little ground. Sterling in Pacific Coast gave the price a mild set-back.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS

Toronto, April 17.—(CP)—British American Oil sold down and the other oils advanced narrowly on the industrial section of Toronto exchange this afternoon while a general move of advance prevailed. Trading, which was light on the whole, bulked in the oils, nickel and Ford.

Nickel recovered an early dip but consolidated fractions toward declines of a point or two and the big gilt-edged stocks, Walkers Common and Distillers-Seagrams registered fractional declines. Food and Bank issues recorded irregular gains and fraction losses predominated in the steel group.

JUDGE ACQUITTED

Washington, April 17—(AP)—The United States Senate today acquitted Federal Judge Halsted L. Ritter of Florida of the first of seven impeachment charges. The other counts remained to be voted on.

The first article charged the 65-year-old jurist with allowing an excessive fee of $75,000 to E. J. Ranklin, a former law partner, in a receivership case and with "corruptly" accepting $4,300 from Rankin afterward.

"GLITTERING GIRL"

By MAY CHRISTIE

Still, the Pilgrim was a charming spot, and there were plenty of women there never around the Broadway hotels. Jim, returned glances at the good-looking pair. It would help Nan's prospects for the young Canadian to be the sooner the better, and plenty of it!

Nan chuckled inwardly when she recollected the exact manner in which she had first met Vernon Tyler. Jim had been out of town on business, and Nan was crazy to see a native element. She didn't have the wits—like Nora—to grab him for herself. It was a strange coincidence, Nan thought, she should have strolled that night along the Mall path in Central Park, almost upsetting Nan's apple-cart. Probably coincidence—after all, thought Nan the wily—she wouldn't put it past Vernon to have telephoned Central, and known she had gone home to dress. Anyway, he had gone horseback riding, and gone old-fashioned in the Park to investigate—as she would have done herself.

Well, here he was alone with her now—in great good looks after his ride, and in excellent humor, to make her while the sun shone. And-do Vernon further.

Terry had ordered an appetising lunch. He had masterful ways that, even in their nonchalance, left you feeling that she wasn't yet quite added appeal.

She said now: "Oh, you turned beautifully sly all of a sudden, Terry! I guess partridge the best thing in her pleasant, little face. "Do you know, Terry, I simply love you when you're busy!"

He grinned boyishly, his teeth a flash of white in his tanned face. Then—you're going to be bored to death in a couple of days. You're not the sort to sit around and—"

"Don't say it! tell you you don't know you. Just because you see me here in the thick of a—a pretty scrambled—Gosh, Nan, you can't deny you were a bit hatched! Now, your pretty cousin has been an absolute age when we ran into her in the Park?"

"Oh! Vernon!" Nan, exasperated, her shoulders momentarily—she opposed a portion of cook not to be—"Did you think looking?" "Not in the psychological moment to get in the good work?" She said: "I didn't feel particularly sweet to Vernon. I'll admit I was a bit tight at the Gypsy Revellers' party, the Pageant, when you insisted on taking me home, you sweet, thing! But, Vernon, for all her shy manner, Verona is not a better! Oh, it's true, Terry, that quiet girls get to be lovelies when would-be—Shall still more run down?"

She saw Terry's face stiffen, before he could speak her, since his assessment of her lack of loyalty to her cousin, she continued in a hurry of deprecating way: "Of course it's largely her mother's fault—poor Aunt Sadie's such a mild, ineffectual, with that background! Trend hogs, you know—and then all of a sudden—it's all a starmaddie that Vernon ever went to a convention where twenty-five of a—Nan—and her mother's simply desperate to have her marry Vernon, and of as she calls it. Why, she offered Patsie Karinof, goodness knows how much cash if he'd marry Vernon! I suspect he balked

Just before Dick and Doc came into sight, the ominal warrior stepped into the grass on the jungle trail. The leaves and branches dropped back, forming an impenetrable screen, behind which Zoplogs waited while the Tarzan Twins confidently pursued their course.

Now Zoplogs adjusted his shield and took a new grip on his fight throwing spear. The warrior did not see the boys until they were almost opposite him. Then he did the grip of his spear hand relaxed and a look of satisfaction overspread his evil countenance.

Seeing what he had nothing to fear from two unarmed white boys, he waited until a turn in the trail took them from his view, then he stepped out and followed them. Zoplogs was greatly elated. What matter now that his snares had failed to entrap a single victim?

Had all his traps been filled, the reward would not have equaled this windfall which had come without effort on his part. The victims of his snares he could have had to carry home; but this new quarry walked on their own legs, most accommodatingly toward his home village!

planted and will grow." she told herself as she smiled sweetly at him. She'd bring matters to a head tonight—at the Van Tyles', if she could contrive it, Vernon would not there. That would make matters easier.

T X T

It was exactly eight o'clock at Foxy' Hanson rang the door-bell of Ida Tyrone' lovee apartment. In his left hand he not only held his white sad gloves, but a large florist's box. His small, rabbit-like countenance had a bland look of satisfaction on it.

The maid opened the door. He took a quick look at himself in the mirror in the foyer, faintly yellow hair, meticulously brushed. High forehead. Much lifted nose. Pro-young girl vouched for by well-known Mr. Hanson. It would take her herself of that shocking interview with the Matchaera-de Bray-Karinoffs.....!

"Now here's your white gloves, Maggie—I mean Veronica—and don't trip on your train, dear—My goodness! She looks like a bride, doesn't she, Mr. Hanson?

It was a quiet Vernon who sat beside him in his car. The girl was certainly pretty, "but she lacked Nan's vivacity, the amazing fire of personality that was Nan's.

Rather a joke on Nan to have brought her own cousin! Now that he came to think of it, hadn't he seen Terry Shannon perusa this girl of the portals of the Pinky Club—he means it the Goldfish Tavern?—leaving Alma Fairbanks flat while he escorted Vernon Tyson home.....?

Alma had been pretty sore about it at the time, and had complained to "Foxy". He had stood her and her father and her many drinks in the little bar that Terry's absence. Nan had been with him at the time of the row between husband, 'Sugar' Sarrall, who had been on the track of Nan, was somewhere in the offing. It had been quite a delicate situation!

"Foxy" loved these kinds of mixups—darn—it all—that was what made this town so amusing! Wheels within wheels—why, of course he must have had this in his mind when he'd thought of inviting Vernon to the Van Tyles' party, tonight. Each member of that disgruntled coterie would be present!

CRISIS LOOMS OVER FAILURE OF PEACE PLAN

Italy Braces for Crisis In Strife With League As War Climax Nears

All Long Leaves of Absence in Navy May Be Cancelled

HOME DEFENCE GROWS

General Badoglio Hints Vellelly at Battle in Ethiopia

Rome, April 18 (AP)—Italy braced for a crisis today in its conflict with the League of Nations over the Fascist campaign for Ethiopian conquest, moving rapidly to a climax.

An informed source disclosed that sufficient men have been called to bring the Italian navy to its full strength.

The Fascist air fleet also has reached a peak of efficiency, this source said, ready to meet any Mediterranean foe.

Naval officers expected all long leaves of absence to be cancelled, or restricted to 36 hours at the most.

Failure of Conciliation.

The failure of the conciliation committee of 13 to effect peace and the calling of the League of Nations Council to consider Italy's Ethiopian option conflict Monday were considered in Informed Rome planning to cause one of the most delicate situations to arise since the days of the East African warfare more than six months ago.

There were indications that the government looked for simultaneous meetings of the Italian army and southern armies soon to place the Ethiopian issue finally out of the reach of serious interference by the League of Nations.

The chief diplomatic concern appeared to be to avoid any steps which might arouse Premier Mussolini's attitude of moderation before the campaign of conquest was completed.

Badoglio Confident.

Field Marshal Badoglio, conducting the Ethiopian forces on the Somaliland front, marshal Pietro Badoglio reported to Premier Mussolini, believed to refer to a battle on the line facing Harar, around city of the Ethiopian.

Rumors of a battle on this front have circulated in Rome military quarters for several days, together with reports of a clash between Italian army from Desgu toward Addis Ababa.

Badoglio's latest communication, believed to be a relief reference to the battle, came just as Italy fortified its home forces for a crisis in the conflict with the League of Nations over the Ethiopian campaign.

FAMILY REUNION OF BARTHOLOMEWS

Mother of Freddie, Child Actors Adopts More Pacific Attitude

Los Angeles, April 18 (AP)—This was "family reunion day" for the Bartholomews, with curly-haired Freddie, the child actor, basking in the spotlight of a real life drama.

A custody suit over the boy's custody was expected to come to a head today at a meeting arranged for Judge Mix between the rival parents and counsel.

Other principals here were Freddie's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Bartholomew, whose sudden arrival from England at this time was termed "coincidence" and several attorneys, including one for his father, Cecil Bartholomew, a Canadian Great War veteran.

Attorneys for the aunt, Miss Mylrea Bartholomew, said the boy was kept unaware of a contest that centred around him while he took a short vacation at Catalina Island, resting between pictures that bring him $1,000 a week.

Although the mother, Mrs. Lillian Bartholomew, Hollywood actress, announced intention of "taking my son back in my arms", she adopted a more pacific attitude on reaching here and said she only wanted assurance that he is contented. Her attorney said she wanted no money.

Canada Geese Saved By Arctic Areas

Chicago, April 18 (CP)—Canada Geese and Brant have virtually disappeared from settled parts of Canada, Jorye Lloyd, supervisor of wild life protection in Canada today told the Izaak Walton League of America in annual convention here.

"Nevertheless," said Lloyd, "the birds are holding on well." He attributed this to nesting areas in the Arctic and sub-Arctic areas where hunters were comparatively scarce.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Shelburne, Ont., April 18 (CP)—Judgment was reserved yesterday in the case of the city of Cobalt against Hon. Francis C. Latchford, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Ontario, for taxes alleged to be owing for six years on two properties owned by Justice Latchford in Cobalt.

Montreal, April 18 (CP)—Detective John Brooks was sitting in court yesterday when the deadly beard his name called by the clerk on three charges of theft. Brooks recovered from the shock shortly after when a man in the dock arose and entered his prisoner's box to plead guilty to the charges.

Calgary, April 18 (CP)—More than 200 Indians of the Blackfoot tribe of Gleichen, Alta., were given Calgary bet everyone was glad, especially merchants. Each Indian got $5 and $1 received from a recent sale of land.

Kitchener, Ont., April 18 (CP) "Typed letters are being shoved under doors and slowed away in business houses here. One came to the office and the sober day concerning a whatsisher who had been supplying his product to a friend living in another part of the country. It read:

"Please rush complete immediately one gross which is leaving by train this p.m. Then, beneath the signature, this:

"Don't forget solid samples. Traveller's plane changed."

Butler, Pa., April 18 (CP)—Mrs. Mary Miller, who "had dive department here three times in the same day, arrived at the home of Fireman Harry Miller, setting fire to the porch in the process, with his radio.

The second hit the home of Chief Earl McKinley. The third sped its fire siren out of commission.

Oshkosh, Wis., April 18 (CP)—"The reason I was arrested for speeding three times in one day," Ole Kraus, "was because I was a day ahead of time. Yesterday I pay an old fine for speeding."

"The new fine was speeding," remarked Municipal Judge Henry Hughes, "will be $15."

Chicago, April 18 (CP)—"I've always been a provider, Judge, and a faithful husband, Mrs. Charles Schmidt started to explain at a hearing of his wife's petition for support.

"Faithful my eye!" interrupted Mrs. Schmidt. "Twenty times in ten years she's left at o'clock in the morning with a pair of ladies' garters in her pocket that she never have explained, not to this very day."

JUST WANTED TO MURDER SOMEONE

Deserter From Royal Air Force Held on Murder Charge

London, April 18—(AP)—A deserter from the Royal Air Force at Hendon Field, who police said admitted strangling a south London woman "just because I wanted to murder some one," was held today on a charge of murder.

The alleged slayer is Frederick E. Field, accused of killing Beatrice V. Sutton, 48, who was found dead on April 4.

Formally charging him with the murder, police introduced a statement which quoted Field as saying: "I had never seen the woman before in my life. I just murdered her because I wanted to murder some one."

WOMAN NOW DRAFTSMAN

Toronto, April 18.—(CP)—Police who have been searching for a month for Henry E. Baker, 54-year-old stock salesman, found dead today by the disappearance of his wife, who had sought their aid to find Baker.

In a routine checkup yesterday, officers found Mrs. Baker was not and never had been at the address she gave them. When she sought police aid Mrs. Baker said her husband had left Perth March 11 intending to stop at Brockville and Kingston.

ABANDON HOPE OF FINDING MEN ALIVE IN SHAFT

Expect to Break Through With Diamond Drill at Noon

WILL SEND DOWN FOOD

Ontario Miners Sent to Scene Says Whole Area Dangerous

Moose River, N.S., April 18 (CP)—Another heavy dynamite blast today penetrated further into the Moose River Gold Mine, but disappointed rescue workers in their attempts to reach three Toronto men who have been entombed for nearly a week.

With a rock barrier of unknown depth still remaining between the rescue crew and shaft through which they planned to enter the 141-foot level, all hope of finding Dr. D. K. Robertson, H. B. Magill and Alfred Scadding alive was abandoned.

A giant shovel crane swung into action clearing away the debris. However, at J. P. Messervey, Chief Inspector of Mines, declared there was to be no let-up in the activity. He said he did not consider a 3-inch avenue of communication with the pit where the men were trapped by a cave-in Sunday night was drawn fast and had about 15 more to go. It was expected to break through by noon, when fluoroscope, food and emergency oxygen would be dropped down the bore.

A shaft leading direct from the surface to the level was open for 50 feet and would not be completed for a week. There the volunteers were going through solid rock and their task was to drive a tunnel to bring out the bodies if rescue attempts failed.

Should the terrific dynamite blast failed to make an opening for the weary volunteers, C. H. Ivey, K.C., of London, Ont., solicitor for the Dominion Securities Corporation, at last admitted he had given up hope.

Rescuers Can't Help.

For days he had assisted in the work while at the same time trying to keep up his legal practice in London, Ont. Dr. Robertson and John Magill, who had been watching every movement of the miners on the scene expressed.

Four experienced Ontario miners rushed to Moose River by train, airplane and car, could do nothing to speed the work.

On arrival last night they explained that it was practically impossible for rescue work and were no longer used in digging through the barriers caused by the cave-in.

The newcomers are H. Hennigan, Timmins; Jack McMillan, George Mitchell and Elmer Morse — carried 800 pounds of explosives and dynamite which they were unable to use.

Looking over the property with Messervey and mine manager F. D. Henderson, the Toronto men remarked that the mine was very dangerous.

"That's no place for you; the further you play back the better," Hennigan told Messervey. Hennigan and McMillan then descended into a cavern-like opening that seemed to be bottomless.

Two workmen from Bonda, miners, George Purdy and James Murphy, volunteered for the perilous task but Messervey would not permit it.

Messervey said that he knew that a man would be taking his life in his hands to go down even to the new shaft that were being opened because there was no telling when another cave-in might occur.

Toronto, April 18 (CP)—Lives of three Toronto men trapped in a gold mine at Moose River, N.S., depend on what the men did in the ten seconds that elapsed between the charging warning and the cave-in of rock and earth, according to A. L. Schneider, Chief Engineer of the North Star Mines, Ltd.

Schneider is well acquainted with Moose River mining properties.

The shaft which the crew went down was last used in 1905, Schneider said and then men made the descent on a tour of inspection to determine how much repair work was needed in the mine. He said the Moose River mine lay between two properties of the Nova Scotia Mines Ltd., and he had explored the Moose River mine on many occasions.

"If the men reached the cross-cut about 50 feet from their shaft, they might still be alive," Schneider said.

School Board Reduction to 10 Members Suggested

ABANDON HOPE FOR ENTOMBED MEN—Moose River, N.S., rescue workers are shown as they fight their way through almost solid rock to reach three Toronto men trapped in the Moose River Gold Mine since last Sunday. The men are Dr. D. K. Robertson, (INSET), prominent surgeon and part owner of the mine; H. B. Magill (BELOW RIGHT) attorney and another owner, and Alfred Scadding (BELOW LEFT) mine keeper. Little hope remains that the men will be found alive.

French Interest in Shakespeare Growing Says Granville - Barker

Quebec, April 18 (CP)—Harley Granville-Barker, English author and dramatist, arrived today with his wife on the liner Duchess of Bedford, enroute to Ottawa to serve as adjudicator in the Dominion drama festival finals at Ottawa next week.

They will remain in Quebec until tomorrow and then will leave for the capital to attend the festival opening Monday.

A resident of Paris for the last five years, Mr. Granville-Barker said he and his wife had been cruising writing prefaces to Shakespearian works. Actually, he said, they are writing Shakespearian dramas. Some of the work was translated into Spanish by his wife.

His life in Paris, the dramatist said, had revealed to him the French interest of latter years in Shakespeare's works, and he instanced the remarkable success of Comedie Francaise with a production of "Hamlet."

While the drama and moving pictures might be "international" he said, they do not "hinder each other artistically."

ROAD AND RELIEF PARLEY FORECAST

Meeting Next Week May Discuss New Road Program

Ottawa, April 18 (CP)—Conferences with Ontario, and possibly with other provinces on road-building and relief projects generally may follow passage through parliament of the Relief Act. Until that measure is approved, however, nothing of a definite nature can be arranged.

This was stated today at the Labor Department when attention was drawn to Toronto despatches indicating Dominion and provincial representatives would get together, possibly next week, to discuss a new road program for the province.

No definite appointment had been made, it was said at the Labor Department.

39 Knots For Queen Mary

Southampton, April 18 (AP)—The new liner Queen Mary established a top speed of more than 30 knots (approximately 35 miles an hour) in speed trials off the Isle of Arran today.

The giant new ship made five trips over a measured course.

CANON IS NAMED ST. ALBANS DEAN

Has Been Rector of Wigham For Past Fourteen Years

London, April 18 (CP)—An interesting appointment in the Anglican Church at home is that of Canon Thicknesse, rector of Wigan since 1922, to the deanery of St. Albans.

Canon Thicknesse's grandfather became a Bishop and his father an Arch-Deacon, and during his fourteen years at Wigan he has built up a singularly strong church life there. As an army chaplain, he was wounded at Ypres.

St. Albans is one of the most interesting centres in Hertfordshire. The fine Old Abbey Church, which has been the cathedral since the diocese was created nearly 40 years ago, possesses the longest Gothic nave in the world. The massive tower is largely composed of Roman bricks taken from the adjoining city of Verulamium, a mile or more away, which is now being excavated.

D. S. T. IN GREAT BRITAIN

London, April 18 —(AP)— Daylight saving time in Great Britain will start officially at 2 a.m. tomorrow morning.

HAMM KIDNAPING CASE IS SOLVED BY ARREST OF 3

J. Edgar Hoover Says Case Interlocked With That of Bremer Snatch

GANG BROKEN UP

Victim Identifies Home in Which He Was Held Prisoner

Washington, April 18 (AP) — J. Edgar Hoover announced today the rest of three men in connection with the kidnapping of William A. Hamm, Jr., St. Paul broker.

"I think we have solved the Hamm kidnapping at last," he told reporters.

The director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation said the Hamm kidnapping involved "the same gang" as the kidnapping of Edward Bremer, St. Paul banker. Hamm's gang was involved.

Those arrested were named as Charles J. Fitzgerald, Jack Peiffer, and Edward G. Bolander, all residents of Bensenville, Ill. All suspects are now in St. Paul or the environs, Hoover said.

Also involved in the Hamm case, he announced, was Byron Bolton, now in jail at St. Paul for the Bremer kidnaping. Bolton Farmer, also convicted in the Bremer case, Arthur "Doc" Barker, serving sentence in Alcatraz Island, California Penitentiary. Fred Barker killed a federal agent in a battle at Chicago, Florida, last year, and Alvin Karpis, the famous Bolshevik who is regarded "Public Enemy, No. 1", still at large.

Name Kidnapers.

The actual perpetrators of the kidnapping were named by Hoover as Alvin Karpis, Arthur and Fred Barker, Volney Davis (Zeigler) Harry Goetz, alone killed; Fitzgerald and Bolander.

Hoover said "there may be more arrests soon." He added that all three arrested today had been charged under secret warrants on April 11.

The investigation chief said that Mr. Hamm's testimony identified the home of Bartholomey as the house in which he was held while the kidnappers awaited delivery of $100,000 ransom which secured his release.

Hamm was kidnapped about 12.45 p.m. on Tuesday, June 18, 1935, immediately after he had departed from his office in the Theodore Hamm Brewing Company for luncheon. He was taken to a hideout where he was held until June 22, 1933. He was released at a point near Wyoming, Minnesota, after payment of the ransom. Hamm was president of the brewing company.

WOMAN SOUGHT FOUND IN LONDON

Search in New York Bond Theft Case Covers Europe

Paris, April 18 (AP) — United States authorities in Paris announced today they were informed that British police found a woman, sought in connection with a New York bond theft case, last night in a London hotel.

The woman's husband, also wanted for questioning about the activities of an alleged bond robbery ring which deals in millions of dollars, was still missing, the authorities said, while the search spread across Europe.

United States authorities told the American Consul in London was a "Mrs. Frankenberg", who the French Sureté said apparently fled from Paris after questioning.

French police said part of $440,000 already recovered in bonds, in connection with the case, apparently was found in a hotel room of Mrs. Frankenberg.

Other Sureté officials overseas the prisoner, one Marion, who was shot and killed as he tried to desperation at the end to slay the deputy police chief.

Marions lured M. Rulazlas into his car, overpowered the detective, then barricaded the door and threatened his life unless he was released from the car. Rulazlas, one of the deputy's aides, were unable to break in.

School Addition Needed, Board Reiterates View, Seeks Council Action

Cheapest Time to Build, Says G. F. Ostrom, Chairman

BOARD WANTS REPLY

'Council Should Tell as He Says, 'If They Cannot Afford Expenditure'

Piqued at what is considered the failure of city council to recognize the need for the Queen Mary School addition, members of the Board of Education at a brief meeting held yesterday went on record as protesting the attitude taken by the council in this respect.

"This addition seems to me to be absolutely necessary," commented Dr. C. P. Ostrom, chairman of the Board.

"This is a year when costs are low and the addition could be built at less cheaply than in other years. Now is the time to build."

"Have you had any report on this, Mr. Hyde?" asked Mr. Ostrom of Mr. Chas. Hyde, chairman of the Sites, Buildings and Repairs Committee.

"The matter hasn't been discussed, that is officially, as far as I know," replied Mr. Hyde. "I did tell them, though, that we needed this addition."

$500 Preliminary Expenditure.

The sum of $500 this week so far, and I think that is would be cheaper in the long run if there is need of it. I think that the Board should have been shown the courtesy of a reply to this at any rate. If they can't afford this money for the addition, believe the Board that they could do would be to tell us so," commented Mr. Ostrom.

"That same school needs repairs right now. I know that city council has been busy on flood repairs and so on, but I think that this evening at least the Board is entitled to a reply to our request for consideration on this matter. Council is not too busy that it couldn't take a half hour off and give this some consideration," he added.

"If we handle this sum (*?70,000) in the estimate this year we ought to get some benefit from it," J. H. Allin.

At the meeting Trustee Rep. Mon-crieff gave notice of motion that he would, at the next regular meeting, move that the salary of the secretary-treasurer be reduced in numbers to ten months.

"The Board, as it is constituted at present is unwieldy. Ten members are enough to carry on, with more especially that at present," declared Mr. Moncrieff.

Millions of Fish Frozen on Bottom

Lindsay, Ont., April 18 (CP)— Millions of fish perished in Pigeon Lake during the winter months by the unprecedented depth of the ice on Kirkfield Canal, a publication of the waters of the trent waterway system, which flows into lake northwest of Lindsay, according to Capt. Wm. Hall, superintendent of Fish and Game Department of Ontario.

Hundreds of crows and gulls are dragging the dead fish out of the open water, and the shores are to the frozen surface of Balsam Lake.

The dead fish are carp, suckers, muskinonge, and bass.

Long Term Prisoner Finally Routed in Cell

Athens, April 18—(CP-Havas)—Authorities today routed a lone convict from his cell block here, who held a member of parliament captive in his cell for 16 hours at the point of a gun in order to force the deputy to obtain communication with the premier.

Tear gas finally overcame the prisoner, one Marinos, who was shot and killed as he tried in desperation at the end to slay the deputy police chief.

Marinos lured M. Rulazlas into his car, overpowered the detective, then barricaded the door and threatened his life unless he was released from the car. Rulazlas, one of the deputy's aides, were unable to break in.

Mgr. Crespi Dies On Boat from Spain

Vatican City, April 18 (CP) — Brief dispatch reported today the death aboard a boat, carrying him from Barcelona, Spain, to Genoa, Italy.

In 1931 Mgr. Crespi went to Mexico as secretary of the delegation, which attempted to iron out religious difficulties with the government there. The mission failed and he was expelled from Mexico in 1926.

CROLL SUPPORTS TAXING OF HYDRO

Tells Niagara Falls Audience Municipalities Affected

Niagara Falls, Ont., April 18 — Hon. David A. Croll, Ontario Minister of Welfare and Municipal Affairs, announced his opposition to the principle of Hydro exemption from taxation as a joint meeting of the Kiwanis, Rotary, Lions and Hermes Service Clubs here last night.

"I am departing somewhat from my own particular field in discussing Hydro taxation," said Mr. Croll, "but I think my views will be welcomed by this audience. We, as a department, are deeply concerned with the financial responsibilities of Hydro's exemption from taxation. It is a question which concerns Niagara Falls and its suburbs more deeply than any one else, but it is important to every municipality in Ontario."

Mr. Croll discussed the recent announcement of the possibility of the purchase by the Province of the Canadian Niagara Power Company, which owns twelve annual loss to taxes to Stamford Township of $130,000 a year. Hydro said that said the speaker, "would be a severe loss to the municipality, but, thanks to my department's efforts on its behalf. Who would benefit? Only the Hydro Commission, because of the power generated by that company.

I myself see no valid reason why Hydro should escape this taxation, because of the fact that when the infant Hydro, as delicate and unusual a child as a quintuplet, needed a friend and was given a friend. A giant does not need to be spoon fed.

"So it is time in my view, that we in this area, at least, took this respect; time we canvassed the situation in the light of existing conditions and not merely followed the traditions of the days of the early days of Hydro's infancy. I am convinced that if one man's suggestion and not as a panacea for all ills, but I do think it is something that deserves the most careful consideration of all the provinces. I hope that the Ontario Hydro will give an expression of their views."

ONE EGG FOUND INSIDE THE OTHER

One of Nancy's freaks was brought to the Ontario Intelligencer office yesterday by Ray Fisher, of R.R. 3, Stirling. A hen of that locality laid a double yolked egg, made of which was another egg, complete in every particular. The egg was laid by a Black Giant hen, the property of Wesley Cleary, R. R. 3, Stirling. The large outside egg had the usual hard shell but measured slightly over three and one-half inches in length. The white portion of the larger egg was hatched, although accompanied by no yolk. Directly inside the white of the larger egg was another ordinary sized egg, soft-shelled, but fully developed with the white and yolk.

Asparagus was also plentiful with Delicious quoted at 60 cents per peck. MacIntosh at 50 cents and Snows at 40. Cooking apples were also offered at 25 cents the peck.

Little pigs were the chief outside offering, with six as average price of from $8 to $6 being asked.

Little change in live stock or grain prices were registered by local dealers.

Among the first of the season's offering, fresh mackerels were sold at 15 cents the pound.

TRENTON

REJUVENATION OF FORESTERS NOTED AT TRENTON MEET

Delegates From Brantford to Quebec Present For Convention

22 INITIATED

Visits Made to Air Force Camp And Hinde And Dauch Mill

Trenton, April 18.—(Special)—Delegates from Brantford on the west to Aylmer, Quebec on the east gathered at Trenton yesterday to witness the rejuvenation of the Canadian Order of Foresters Lodge 474.

Ritual Gilbert presided at the headquarters for the delegation and all preliminaries were carried on from there. At 2.40 a large group of delegates met High Chief Ranger Harper, K.C., of Montreal and all fraternal honours were displayed in the ceremony with the fraternal goat garbed in red, white and green, colors of the lodge. After making appropriate the group marched to the R.C.A.F. station where, by the courtesy of Wing Commander O. O. Johnson inspected the entire camp and Fit. Lieutenant Sampson, F. Belleveau and P. D. Warnicker acted as guides during the inspection. Flight Lieutenant D. Hinde gave a display of acrobatics in a single seater station. The group then proceeded to the Hinde and Dauch Paper Mill, where Mill Superintendent J. O. Dauch took them in order to watch the process of making straw into paper. Other interesting parts of the town were taken in with Chief Ranger W. H. Turney of Trenton acting as guide. Dr. Harper, assisted by High Chief Ranger W. W. Cooper, K.C., of Montreal took the Ontario delegation into the side and explained the developments, which were greatly enjoyed by the town and although it was his first time here, he hoped that he would be able to visit the community on the next time "our future."

Welcomed by Mayor

At 7.30 p.m. the banquet hall of the Hub Hotel Gilbert was opened and after the initiation four of the guests of honour addressed the delegates. The first speaker on the program, Mayor Cory, stressed his views on the town's industrial future stating that the city would be a booming industrial centre within five years. He was cited, and gave reasons why. The new Rinfret Wood Products Company are spending the grand sum of a million dollars here this year, and five new industries will be established almost the year round and turning out products of every description he said. He said that he hoped he would run but not as every municipality was striving to get such industries the new employment situation will be solved as the refinancing plan has gone through the Provincial House at Toronto. A hearty welcome to all visiting members of the order.

W. M. Couper, K.C., of Montreal, High Chief Ranger of the Canadian Order of Foresty as one of the strongest organizations in Canada, spoke briefly but he failed to bring about the district meeting held here in Trenton. He stated that he has been a member of the Order since 1882 and has never known of that he has not striked in the capacity of the organization. He also spoke highly of Wing Commander O. O. Johnson for his courtesy and said that "we cannot be too proud of our air force and the part that Canadians were shown by them during the war." He also said that in his speech disclosed that he had joined the Canadian Order of Foresters in 1882 at this city of Ontario, and though not "

LORD GREENWOOD ALWAYS GUARDED

Native of Whitby, Ont., Was Former Secretary For Ireland

(By Thomas T. Champion)—(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 18—(CP Cable)—It was revealed today that a police guard is still maintained outside the chambers in Gray's Inn of Lord Greenwood, chief secretary for Ireland during the storm years 1920-22.

Lord Greenwood, a native of Whitby, Ont., retired from politics some years ago. But the police guard remains, all the chambers and he is constantly shadowed by Scotland Yard men.

These precautions date back to the turbulent period preceding the signing of the Anglo-Irish Treaty of 1922, creating the Irish Free State. Lord Greenwood, then Sir Hamar Greenwood, was the chief person to hold the office of chief secretary for Ireland as it was abolished under the Treaty.

Lord Carson, Solicitor-General for Ireland in 1885 and a prominent figure in the pre-war political struggle between pro-Britain and Nationalist Irishmen, to Hirwine guarded until the day or his death a few months ago.

Carson constantly grumbled at the residence of the police upon his carrying a revolver. He said it was a nuisance because it made his pocket bulge.

DUMMY CASH BAGS FOOL 7 BANDITS

Train Robbery Was Expected For Several Weeks

Hawley, N.J., April 18.— Train robbers successfully carried out a daring hold up on the Newark-Delaware branch of the Erie Railroad Friday.

Seven of them crowed the crew of the Waldwick-Jersey City train, threatened the stationmaster and two clerks into silence, kept seventy-five passenger chiefly women, in ignorance of their operations while they took $656.36 and $20 worth of Kelvy machine equipment from the baggage car strong-box and made off in a stolen automobile without firing a shot.

They were miles away before the first alarm was sent by radio and the police automatic printer system, whole alarm was over in a few minutes, and the train, six minutes late, proceeded on its way while the stationmaster counted the plunder.

First reports made by detectives were that the bandits had actually taken $54,000. Detectives later disclosed the railway and the railway express agency had expected a holdup for some time, and had even gone to the trouble of stuffing bags with paper to mislead gang spies.

Six months ago an employee of the railway, whose name was withheld, was approached by a man who tried to get his promise to help in a hold-up. He consulted with police, the police, and the company took precautions by continuing to ship dummy bags of "money", so that not even the train crew knew how much was being carried.

REVIVAL CAMPAIGN HELD IN KINGSTON

Returned Missionaries From China Conducts Services

The Prophesy of Joel, "In those days will I pour out my spirit", was witnessed in the city of Kingston, in the Holiness Movement Church' when a revival campaign of seven weeks ended on Sunday night. The pastors of this church are Rev. and Mrs. S. Carswell, returned missionaries from China, who have spent several years in that country and have seen good results. Their attracted meetings in Kingston would remind one of forty years ago. The doctrines held before the large congregations were justification by faith and entire sanctification of believers. God honored these truths as they were delivered from night to night. There is still great attraction in the plain old fashioned gospel and this was plainly seen as from night to night the church could hardly accommodate the crowds. Evangelists Mr. Tompkins and D. Chairman were the special speakers for first four weeks and as they by the aid of the Holy Spirit, held up Christ as the only Saviour to save from sin, conviction seized hold of scores and they wended their way to the mourners' bench, repented of sin and found the world's Redeemer.

Interest was so manifest that even after four weeks of revival effort it was impossible to close, and Evangelist was engaged, Rev. C. S. Grassie of London, England, and as this servant of God stressed the great necessity of the new birth, God again honored the effort and many more were heard to cry out, "What must I do to be saved?"

The Ricoubeck Brothers of Russell, New York, rendered splendid messages in song accompanied by guitar, These songs were inspiring and uplifting and the Tompkins sisters of Ottawa, rendered many beautiful selections.

The last Sabbath of this campaign was very inspiring as a number of those new converts were added to the church and others to follow. Those who were privileged to attend this great spiritual campaign will long remember it.

We give God all the glory.—An Observer.

DENIED RIGHT TO BREAK AGREEMENT

Cannot Demand More Than $100 a Week From Rudy Vallee

New York, April 18 (AP) — The Appellate Division upheld yesterday a decision denying Mrs. Fay Webb Vallee the right to break a $100 a week separation agreement on which she might demand a larger income from her husband, Rudy Vallee.

Mrs. Vallee began her action in November, 1932, contending the orchestra leader misrepresented his financial status when he settled the $100 a week on her.

Shortly thereafter the Appellate Division upheld Vallee's right to seek a Mexican divorce and made confidential recording "tapped" telephone conversation between Mrs. Vallee and Garfield Leon, a dancer. Mrs. Vallee had charged Mrs. Vallee for $150,000, charging alienation of affections.

Mrs. Vallee went to court then after three months additional funds from her husband, with threats of legal action in California complicating the situation.

SWEEPING DECREE AGAINST FASCISTS

Spanish Leader Abolishes "All Leagues of Fascist Type"

Madrid, April 18 (CP)—The strike-torn second republic struck out against Fascist forces yesterday as Premier Manuel Azana issued a sweeping decree abolishing all Fascist groups and "all leagues of Fascist type".

Workers, who earlier today had paralyzed the city with a general strike, announced the walk-out would be prolonged indefinitely, so long as the threat of Fascist rioting remained.

Tacitly approved by the powerful Socialist Congress, the strike began to creep out into the provinces, paralyzing all commercial and industrial activity.

By the Azana cabinet decree all retired military figures accused of participating in agitation against the regime were stripped of their civil rights and their pensions were revoked.

A movement to stamp out Fascist and reactionary elements in the army was also instituted. Officers and men suspected of disaffection will be dismissed from the ranks and otherwise disciplined, it was indicated.

OBJECTIVE OF THE RED CROSS $1,000

Local Branch Praised For Work Accomplished During Flood

Officers of the local Red Cross met yesterday afternoon in the office of the president, Mr. T. C. Hefkey to confer with Mr. N. R. Yukon, field secretary of the Ontario division. The question of an appeal for the 1936 was discussed and it was decided to hold the campaign this year during the week of May 18 to 25 with an objective of one thousand dollars. This objective is one hundred dollars more than was asked last year but it is felt by the Red Cross that an extra effort should this year to take care of the local emergencies bound to arise as a result of the flood.

Mr. T. C. Hefkey reported that the Red Cross supplied blankets, mattresses and cots to the total number of two hundred, to those burned out by the flood disaster. This equipment belongs to the Department of National Defence and was loaned through the Red Cross Society to localities where an emergency arises.

Mrs. Stuart Leslie has been appointed chairman of a committee to follow up on the families who suffered in the flood, particularly to check on the matter of undernourishment among children of these families. It is felt by the Red Cross that extra food and new oil stoves be supplied to families where there is undernourishment and that the initial allowance does not provide the extra food necessary.

It was pointed out by Mr. Hefkey that the Red Cross of Belleville stands ready to undertake any last of relief which properly comes under the head of Red Cross Emergency Relief. The Red Cross of Belleville not registered for relief, who suffer by the flood disaster will be the special care of the Red Cross.

Mrs. Vinton complimented the Belleville Red Cross on the way it handled the emergency situation which arose last month. The committee, it was stated, would be back them in whatever they undertook here as a branch.

SECOND OF TRIO TAKEN IN HOUSE

Russell Wessinger, Jail Breaker Captured After Long Chase

Toronto, April 18 (CP)—Howard Johnson, 21-year-old Indian, was the only one of three Wellington County jail-breakers still at large today. The other two, Russell Wessinger and Charles Williams, were held in jail here.

Slugging the aching tarnkey over the head with his own "billy", Johnson, Wessinger and Williams escaped from the jail at Guelph early Thursday and took a round-about way of reaching Toronto in a stolen car. They drove towards London, then cut back.

Twice they were sighted in Toronto yesterday, and each time police made a capture. After chasing the trio over fences, up and down lanes, Detective Arvesdale 24-year-old Williams at noon yesterday. But his companions eluded by running through a house and jumping from the bathroom window.

Last night Sergeant of Detectives Harold Waterhouse, Detective Fred Hunt and Plainclothesmen William Meldrews and James Hawken went to a Jarvis street rooming house where they thought Wessinger was staying. They waited more than two hours before the fugitive came home.

When he did arrive, the watchers permitted him to go to his room, then followed him. Wessinger pushed one more towards his pal's pocket, then put up his hands. He said: "You got me". A revolver was found in his pocket.

WOMAN HONORED IN DEATH

Today there was placed at rest within St. Paul's Cathedral, the body of the first woman who has been buried within this edifice since the Great Fire of London in 1666. It is also worthy of note that this is the third burial in St. Paul's within a month, the others being the funerals of Lord Jellicoe and Lord Beatty.

If Mrs. Louise Creighton is honored in her death she is no more honored than in her life. She was 86 years old and the widow of a former bishop of London. Her husband was one of the greatest of historical scholars and she was a woman of great intellectual gifts. After the death of her husband King Edward VII granted her apartments at Hampton Court Palace. Later she removed to Oxford.

Places of honor go to the great political, martial and literary dead men, and it is but fitting that this woman should as representative of her sex be accorded final rest in so hallowed a place."

WISE ASTROLOGERS

If peacemakers and diplomats have not troubles enough they must now beware, not the Ides of March but the lovely month of June, according to the astrologers. Three hundred of them took a peep at the starry vault the other night and thereupon decided that they should warn the League of Nations against any treaty made in June as likely to cause trouble.

When the sun darkens the sky on June 19th, "there will be even more muddled thinking" on the part of European statesmen. "If we live through this time of unusual upheaval, we shall be very lucky indeed" says a woman student of the stars' effects on human life. Mrs. Rhodes thinks that only days favorable to them should be used by British diplomats. Where would that 'land' them?

How much of guessing is in the statement of James Carter, one of Britain's leading astrologers, "he says that Mussolini's horoscope is one of the most powerful ever found and it is likely to give him a good run for his money."

If wise astrologers, more wise in using knowledge of public affairs than in casting horoscopes from the starry hosts!

SAVE HIGHWAYS FROM FROST

Frost-resistant highways have been the subject of an intense study by Professor Arthur Casagrande of the Harvard School Graduate School of Engineering. He has found that a treated soil greatly decreasthat the tremendous ice pressures that form beneath highways in winter, causing heaving and cracking of the roads. At low temperatures tremendous ice pressures are found and if freezing is slow, ice layers may continue to grow indefinitely, he finds.

Every municipality knows something of heaving roads. Some places have been reported as showing as much as six inches of heaving beyond expectation and under extreme conditions the heaving has exceeded one foot. The Professor has reached the discovery that the pressure exerted by crystallizing ice is not constant for all freezing temperatures but has been found actually believed. In certain soils the water in the voids will not merely freeze but ice crystals will continue growing, gradually forming layers of considerable thickness.

It is this additional water which he says, segregated in the form of ice which causes the heaving resultant in an uneven road surface. This same concept may break and in some cases may lead to its destruction. During the spring the liberation of large quantities of water brings about a seperacration of the soil, which becomes very soft that it affords insufficient support for heavy traffic loads. It is under these conditions that macadam and oiled pavements may be completely destroyed by traffic of trucks.

One important point in his findings is that in clean sand and in gravel there is no growth of ice layers, according to either field or laboratory observation. There such materials are used in highway construction in the form of a thick foundation, in places where the underlying soil would cause serious trouble it is were penetrated by frost to any considerable depth.

The use of insulating materials is being considered to prevent deep frost penetration beneath modern pavements. The question of finding an efficient and economical method of insulating sub-grades against frost penetration is also being investigated in the Harvard Laboratory.

Such investigations may be expected to yield invaluable information. Transportation is known to be one of the great problems of the modern world and of transportation is one of the great needs of civilization. In countries where there is considerable freezing in winter, the cost of maintenance of highways is something of more than ordinary notice. The finding of proper methods of protecting the surface of highways by the construction beneath is freighted with possibilities of saving many million dollars in highway maintenance.

RETURN OF SPRING REVIVES INTEREST IN YACHTING and the sailors, young and old, of Belleville, are getting ready for a busy season of pleasure and profit. With the South End Yacht Club starting classes for embryo sailors, and sailing craft of all kinds being overhauled the old sailors along the waterfront are kicking the kinks out of their knees and stretching out with a yo! heave ho!, with or without a bottle of rum and oh for the days of long ago on the bounding billows when we were young and lusty, eager to lap up the ozone with a wet sheet and a flowing sea—and the reminiscing is on.

x

One veteran sailor and probably the last surviving member of the crew of the famed Atalanta is Sergeant Major W. Haslett, again a resident of Belleville after many years spent in the Canadian West and Yukon as a member of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police. Sergt. Major Haslett says a la Mark Twain, that all reports as to his demise, recent or ancient, are and have been grossly exaggerated, and he still takes pride in the fact that he sailed with Capt. Cuthbertson the famous Atalanta, constructed in Belleville, and raced outside Sandy Hook on the Atlantic for the America Cup over fifty years ago.

x

The Yankees kept the cup that time because says Sergt. Major Haslett, for one thing the Atalanta was not rigged right for a sea-going race, rather was she rigged for fresh water breezes.

x

However, the Atalanta won other races including the Fisher Cup at Chicago, and another race at Cobourg on the way home when in a heavy blow the topmast broke and came tumbling down bringing a mess of tangled ropes and canvas to free. The young sailor Haslett was sent aloft while the sailors below cleared decks, and away they went again despite the handicap, more determined than ever to win the race—which they did—just one of the surprises that the Atalanta and her gallant crew were noted for springing.

x

The Katie Gray whose owner is still alive, and other famous yachts which made yachting history on the bay of Quinte were recalled by the veteran sailor, as were the Peerless and Gracie which sailed out of Gananoque, and were built for speed honors. Twice he sailed the Peerless in races and twice won after rigging up tents to be his own taste and seeing to it that no barnacles clung to her hull or centreboard—sandpaper was cheap in those days.

x

And so, these paragraphs grew out of a half-hour or so chat with a sailor who still sails the seas, also the lakes and rivers—a sailor who saw the sea and what did he see?—says he the Atlantic was fantastic and the Pacific wasn't terrific, but the Black Sea wasn't what it was cracked up to be.

x

And, says he, young feller, me lad, don't say in your paper again that the last survivor of the crew of the Atalanta has gone out with the tide until I hear the Great Skipper's final call ordering me aloft.

x

And that will probably be some time yet for Sergeant Major Haslett although he has logged seventy summers, is erect and dusk with all the vigor of youth in his more than add years, and hopes to live as long as his mother who was 104 years of age when she died.

x

Being retired on pension and making his domicile at the Bellevidere Hotel, Sergt. Major Haslett meets many of the old-timers of his sailing days, and when he can be induced to open up and tell some of his experiences afloat and ashore nothing could be more interesting for, aside from his sailoring, he fought at Batoche in the Riel rebellion, went through the fiercest of the gold rush into the Yukon as a member of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police and had enough adventures to fill several books—so here's to you Sergt. Major Haslett, you're a dang fine sailing and fighting man.

The customer in the bookshop called up the assistant. "I want," he said, "Louisa M. Allcott's Jewish novel."

"I'm afraid I've never heard of it," said the assistant. "There is 'Little Women,' 'Little Man,' 'Under the Lilacs', 'Rose in Bloom'——"

"That's it!" replied the customer. "I knew she'd written one. Give me a copy of 'Rosenbloom'."

Poet's Corner

THE LOWER BRIDGE

Just a white-arched bridge in a winter's fog
With its white lamps mellowed slow,
While the coloured lights of a busy street
Shine on the softening snow,

Like shadowy forms going up in smoke
The maple trees on the hill
Show dark behind each curving span,
On the Heights more shadowy still.

In the sky, to make the picture complete,
A tinge of gold and of rose
Subdued by the grey of enveloping mist
Matching the light in the snows.

THE BIRDS WILL SING AGAIN
BRIDGE STREET WEST

It is always close to evening
When my shopping tour is done.
I must hasten to the bridge
Ere the sinking of the sun.

At the hour when witching shadows
Hide the fairy and the gnome
I turn into the avenue
That leads me to my home.

The trees are giant sentinels
In cloaks of darkness dressed.
The little birds in silence now
Are settling down to rest.

Far down against the darkling skies,
Etched out in blue and grey,
The trees have grown exceeding small,
They fade in mist away.

The sun drops down, his kindly glance
Along the road is sped,
His beams of laughter turn to lace
The foliage overhead.

The gloomy shadows dimple o'er
With flecks of rosy light.
The merry sun gives way to mirth,
In heavenly delight;

Into the sky flings up his hands;
From out his purple gown
Show gleaming folds of crimson vest
And gold lace hanging down.

His rosy fingers spread skirt
With precious stones are dress
From which gleam sparkling-emerald
And glowing amethyst.

So merrily he laughs and sinks
Into the realms of night.
Wending his way around the world
To spread untold delight.

At dawn he will appear again,
Dark curtains rend in twain
The sleeping world will yawning turn
And birds will sing again.

END OF HITLER SEEN

Montreal, April 18.—Dr. Norman Prince and German Jew joined today in predicting the downfall of the Hitler regime within the next two years. The nobleman, Prince Hubertus Loewenstein, now residing alternately in Austria and England, gave Hitler eighteen months.

The Jew, Dr. Kurt Rosenfeld, New York, former Minister of Justice of the German Republic, who once fined Hitler 5,000 marks for contempt of court, thought twelve months was the limit.

Doctor and Chemist To Cure Criminal

Galt, April 18. — Prof. Joslyn Rogers of the University of Toronto, in an address before a Galt service club, predicted that in time the chemist and doctor rather than the police, will cure the criminal. In relating some of his experiences in criminal research in the Toronto police force, Professor Rogers, who is Provincial Analyst, said the idea that crime is a disease, was gaining ground here and in England.

"If we do not approach crime from the viewpoint and attempt to cure it as a doctor would a sick person, I do not know where we are going to end up," he asserted.

He then made his prediction the solution of correcting the criminal lay with the medical fraternity, adding: "Though I shall not live long enough to see it come about."

Discussing alcohol and auto accidents, the speaker said it could now be determined by chemical analysis whether a man, even though dead, had been drinking and to what extent, which was important in fatal accidents.

"If the driver was killed, the driver of the other car could not be wholly responsible if the victim had been intoxicated.

In a reference to the Ruth Taylor case in Toronto, Dr. Rogers, whose evidence was an important factor in the conviction of Harry O'Donnell, commended: "It was a most difficult, exacting and delicate piece of chemical research. The nervous strain was terrific."

MINERS WORK HEROICALLY TO RESCUE TORONTO MEN ENTOMBED IN N.S. MINE—Though hope has been almost abandoned that they will be found alive, rescue efforts continue the three Toronto men, Dr. D. R. Sutherland, Herman Magill and Alfred Seadding, who have been entombed in Moose River mine, Nova Scotia, for more than four days. Miners are raising their lives in frantic efforts to clear the mine shafts filled with earth and rocks during an earth tremor. Subsequent tremors have greatly impeded the rescue work. Photos ABOVE show men digging in the Maugher shaft, working endless hours to reach the entombed men. Working day and night without rest, F. D. Henderson, INSET, noted maritime mining engineer, is directing rescue work.

Parliament Hill Hears

By Wilfrid Eggleston

The Scottish strain has always been much more prominent in Canadian parliamentary life than the English, but there are more native born English in the present House of Commons than for several years.

No less than eight Anglicemen are included in the present 'south east corner' of the House. Five of these are followers of Social Credit and the other three are members of the C. C. F.

There was one Anglicman in the Bennett Cabinet of 1930; there is one in the present government.

When Hon. H. H. Stevens retired from the Bennett cabinet he left it without a representative of the province of Ontario. Hon. Norman Rogers was appointed in his place, and Mr. Stirling is an Anglicman too.

Hon. Charles Dunning is of course the Anglicman in the present cabinet. He was born in Leamington and came to Canada as a lad of 17. Mr. Stevens was born at Bristol and came to Canada when eight years of age. Mr. Stirling was born at Tunbridge Wells and came to Canada when a man of 36.

Hon. Martin Burrell is one of the former cabinet ministers who was born in England. He is a native of Yorkshire and came to Canada when he was 18.

James Samuel Taylor, the C. C. F. member for Nanaimo, was born at Liverpool and came to Canada when he was 36.

James William Coldwell, C. C. F. leader from Saskatchewan, hails from Devon and was 32 when he crossed the Atlantic.

The Social Credit group includes the following natives of Albion: E. G. Hansell, member for Macleod, born at Norwich; came to Canada when nine years old; William Hayhurst, from Morland, who migrated at 23; Norman Jaques, a Londoner, came out when 21; Joseph Needham, born at Bromfield, Cheshire, and came to Canada at the age of 31; R. J. Tozer, born at Northwich, Cheshire, who was brought to Canada as a baby of two years.

A. A. Heaps, the Labour member for Winnipeg, was born at Leeds, and came to Canada when 20 years old.

Strangely enough, aside from the Minister of Finance and the ex-minister of national defence the English members are confined to the south east corner.

The Senate boasts two natives of England out of a membership of 96. Hon. Andrew Broder was born at Brighton and came to Canada at the age of three. Colonel Harry Mullins was born in England of Welsh descent and arrived in Canada when ten years old.

In addition several natives of England were members of recent parliaments but have either retired, been defeated or have died.

Harry Bodner, member for Mount Mountain, died. He had parliamentary experience as a study of election and franchise practices is a native of Greenwich, where the 'time is made'. He came to Canada when he was 21 years old.

H. R. Ashead, who used to sit for a Calgary riding, and was Labour leader, came to Canada when a young man.

T. W. Bird, a Manitoba Progressive, was a native of Westmoreland. He was 38 when he came to Canada.

R. A. Pack, who sat for Dewdney, came from Alfriston, Sussex; he came to Canada at the age of 31.

Henry Spencer, who defeated U. F. A. members at the last election came from Alcester, which is not far from Stratford on Avon, which in turn is the birthplace of the immortal poet whose birthday and birthday coincide in the Anglicman calendar, April 23rd.

Humphrey Mitchell, Labor member for Hamilton in the last House and now out of parliament, emigrated from Lancashire as a native of Old Shoreham, Sussex. He came to Canada as a lad of 16.

Recently Ripley showed a unique bridge built in the United States by a relief project. It has no approaches. I am advised by one of the relief authorities here that Canada has a good match for it: it consists of approaches without a bridge, and has been built in Saskatchewan.

R. B. Bennett once used against Sir Wilfrid Laurier a phrase which that statesman had employed ten years earlier against R. L. Borden? (not then a knight.) It was a rather amusing coincidence, and I doubt if Mr. Bennett knew that he was repeating a historic phrase.

Back in February, 1901, Robert Laird Borden was chosen at a party caucus to lead the opposition. He received a challenging note from Sir Wilfrid Laurier, when he took his seat in the House as leader of the Opposition, Sir Wilfrid said:

"I am quite sure my hon. friend will believe in my absolute sincerity when I tell him that I hope with all my heart he may continue to exercise for a long, long period the functions of leader of the Opposition."

Mr. Borden, in reply, said he appreciated heartily Sir Wilfrid's words: "The right honorable gentleman will permit me to say, in passing, that if I should remain leader of the Opposition for as long as that joke is old, it will be wholly beyond my own expectations and those of the generous party which has honored me."

Old or not, the same joke was apparently employed ten years later by R. B. Bennett, who had just come from the west.

Mr. R. B. Hansell, the new member from Calgary, although a young man, has had considerable political experience. He comes to Ottawa as the paper says, "with an assured twenty-year reputation, which will in the rate of his deliverance today soon become a Dominion one. Mr. Bennett replied to the Speech from the throne, and gave a most effective address, the entire House listening with the greatest attention.

"He congratulated Sir Wilfrid (the paper goes on to say) and said he hoped he would long be spared to lead the opposition."

Possibly, of course, the was one of the jokes when Sir John A. Macdonald was first leader of the Canadian parliament. Maybe it goes a lot further back than that in the British Parliament.

Thomasburg and District

Thomasburg Easter Day, the Feast of Festivals, was fittingly observed in the two churches in the village on Sunday.

In the Anglican Church a large congregation was present at the Children's Communion Service which was conducted by the Rector, Rev. F. C. Beasley, at 9.30 A. M. The Synod Lesson was read by the Rural Dean, special occasion, the altar being adorned with Easter lilies and other flowers, while other potted flowers from the home were tastefully arranged in the chancel. In the evening the congregation at this service the vested choir of Trinity Church, Belleville, were present. The choir rendered the "Song of Redemption" and "The Lord of the Dawning of Souls is come".

The Rector's sermon had been prepared for the morning service.

At the United Church on Sunday morning a large congregation was present. Special Easter music being offered by the choir, a duet by the Junior boys and girls also by the Senior choir. The Senior choir rendered the anthem, "Hallelujah", the Junior choir gave one number and also sang the hymn, "Jesus Christ is risen today" and Marion Jones, during the service.

Rev. H. R. Herrington, the pastor, based his address from Romans 6-11, "If the spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by His spirit, that dwelleth in you."

The church looked beautiful with its Easter lilies and other flowers on the front.

At the United Church Sunday school in the afternoon a special Easter programme had been arranged under the leader ship of Mrs. Lucille Herrington and her Sunday School assistants. All enjoyed a hike in the woods on Saturday afternoon.

The United Church Women's Missionary Society met at the home of Mrs. Wm. Bird on Wednesday afternoon for the Easter meeting with a good attendance. The president, Mrs. Malbourn Adams opened the meeting with the hymn, "Sweet hour of prayer" after which Mrs. H. Elliott led the group took charge of the programme. Mrs. Adams read the annual meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the Belleville Presbyterial which was held in Bridge Street United Church, Belleville, was given. Lunch was served and a social time enjoyed at the close of the meeting.

The last of a series of Lenten services was conducted in Christ Church on Good Friday evening taking the form of a Lenten Service. Address by the Rector, Rev. F. C. Beasley, who also rendered very appropriate solos. A large congregation was present to enjoy the service.

night as neighbors and friends, to spend a few social hours with you in celebration of the first milestone of your lives together.

We come with the most sincere congratulations and good wishes for you are both worthy of the best that we can wish for you in future years.

Gordon you have grown up among us. We older ones have seen you grow from a child, upright and showing forth the influence of your Christian home. We younger ones have been playmates, schoolmates and chums together and we have ever found you loyal, sporting and worthy of the name of friend. We are glad you are establishing your new home among your old friends.

Fannie we welcome you to our community and we sincerely hope your new acquaintances will learn to love and appreciate you for your many good qualities and jovial nature.

And now to back up our best wishes for your future happiness we ask you to accept these gifts, and may the years to come hold for you both, a great measure of joy and prosperity.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors; Verna Foster, Betty Foster, Norma Ketchesen, Verna Moreland, Bertha Emerson, Ruth Emerson.

Mr. and Mrs. Vandervoort were then presented with a set of dishes, a picture and some towels for which they suitably replied thanking their friends for their thoughtfulness and best wishes. After a musical program lunch was served and the gathering dispersed.

MRS. WADDINGTON MRS. HARDING

ONE DIES, OTHER WINS APPEAL—Both Mrs. Dorothea Waddington, mother of four children and Mrs. Ellen Harding, alo mother of four children, were sentenced by British judges to death for murder. Mrs. Waddington, a nurse, was found guilty of murdering an inmate of a nursing home; Mrs. Harding, of the murder of her stepmother-in-law. Both appealed, and for the first time in English jurisprudence, it is believed, a condemned woman won an appeal when Justice reversed the conviction in Mrs. Harding's case. Mrs. Waddington's appeal failed—even an appeal for clemency to the home secretary, Sir John Simon.

Dear Charlie and Molly,—

We, your friends and neighbors have gathered here tonight to express our appreciation for the numerous times and ways you have helped our community.

For the past five years you and Molly have been, always ready and willing to help at any time in any way which you possibly could and previous to that you lived among us and mingled with our young people in community, Club and Church work, always with the same genial disposition ever ready to help with your musical talent. This community will miss you greatly. However our community's loss is another's gain and we sincerely wish you the place into which you are moving will find you as helpful to them as you have been to us. You are not moving so far away that you can't still be with us all we hope you will be.

On behalf of these neighbors we ask you and Molly to accept this clock and these chairs as a small token of appreciation and as you use them from day to day may you think of the good times spent with us and in conclusion accept our best wishes for a long life of health happiness and success throughout all your future.-Signed on behalf of the community, we are,

Olive Russell,

Leader Thompson.

Sun Porch

Sun porches are living rooms open to the out-of-doors with screens in place of walls. They need shouldn't be drab. As a part of the house they must conform to the color scheme and furnishings but—and should be—gay and inviting.

In the first place, a sun room comfort can a room has the comfort of a porch in mind when it is furnished. The floor should be covered with waterproof linoleum or rubber tile in a color which contrasts with the walls and furnishings. Rugs are not to be used in winter or summer. In other words, bare floors, black or red is suggested is a bit feverish. Too much white in winter will make the room look cold and stark. Cream or white is best in cold. A good gray, bottle-green, green or soft yellow will make the most of your furniture would be a happy medium, and the upholstery could be in plaids as well. Be sure to choose a fabric which can easily removed and two coats as easily as one. Use gay colors in chintz, cretonne, gingham, striped linen or man's shirting for comfort . . . and beauty . . . you may have.

"Snowed Under" Motion Comedy Showing Monday

What is heralded as one of the maddest, merriest comedy romances of the season, "Snowed Under", a First National picture, opens at the Capitol Theatre on Monday, April 20.

The picture is enacted by a brilliant all-star cast which includes George Brent, Genevieve Tobin, Glenda Farrell, Patricia Ellis, Frank McHugh, John Eldredge, Porter Hall and Helen Lowell.

The action takes place in a New England farmhouse, where a young playwright, who is trying hard to finish a new drama, is snowbound with two secretaries, a new sweetheart, the lawyer for the second wife and a sheriff who is waiting to lead the author in jail for failure to pay his alimony.

Promptly also plays strange tricks with the gold digging divorcee, who is seeking to throw her husband into jail for failure to pay alimony, each week in sheriff.

There ensues a series of love entanglements.

The picture is not without thrills, however, including the wreckage of the co-ed's car on a railroad bridge and a battle royal between the first wife and her ex-husband in which she knocks him cold with a poker. The pictures up again happily in a most amazing and surprising manner.

AT THE BELLE

Charlie Chaplin Returns Today In Previous Film

A familiar and endearing little figure, carrying cane and wearing baggy pants, returns to Belleville today, wearing a seedy derby, a shaggy coat, a pathetic little moustache, enormous trousers, two huge shoes, and a shuffling mannerism, carries a cane and answered to the name of Charlie Chaplin.

Appearing in "Modern Times," his first film since "City Lights," almost five years ago, and his funniest to date, the prodigal is assured of a rousing welcome from Belleville and vicinity screen lovers attending the Belle theatre. It is interesting to notice that, not only has the inimitable Chaplin suffered no depreciation of his popularity during the long vacation from films, but he has actually gained a horde of enthusiastic new fans, as evidenced by enquiries of those who have sprung up in the interim and will enjoy their first taste of his particular brand of fun.

Plot Is Unimportant

His most pretentious film to date, "Modern Times" features some highly elaborate sets, notably the interior of the modern steel factory where the opening of the story finds Charlie a poor, overmechanic employed by the gigantic bolts on a moving track. The monotony of this job "gets" Charlie and he runs wild smashing everything and everybody in view with his big wrench, several scenes of this funniest scenes ever filmed.

The factory, with its monster dynamos and machines, proves a veritable nightmare to the "little tramp" and offers a perfect setting for Chaplin's comedy. From there Charlie finds his way into a hospital, a jail (where he innocently becomes a jailbreak and assists a cell-with all the comforts of home), and a series of short-lived jobs, serving with side-splitting effect in each highly diversified capacities, including shipfitter, night watchman and singing waiter.

Love comes into the little chap's life in the person of a comely gamin of the waterfront, whom he befriends and aids. The lovely Paulette Goddard makes her debut as Charlie's leading lady in this role, and certainly a discovery. Also prominently cast are Chester Conklin, Henry Bergman and Hank Mann.

Written, produced and directed by the star, who also wrote the music, "Modern Times" is the greatest entertainment to come to the screen in many months. Welcome back, Charlie Chaplin!

Added Short Comedy

"Starlit Days at Lido," a gorgeous star-studded musical revue with a host of stage, radio and famed screen personalities will be added to the all-talking program with the Belle Ladies' World Views feature. Performances start daily at 2.00, 7.10 and 9.15. "Modern Times" starts daily at 2.40, 7.35 and 9.40 p.m.

Teagle Reveals Ethiopian Oil Terms for First Time

Denies Fifty Million Dollars Was to Be Paid to Emperor

New York, April 18.—Actual terms of the Ethiopian oil agreement between Standard-Vacuum and Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, which raised an international furore in the early days of the Italian-Ethiopian war, were revealed for the first time today by Walter C. Teagle, president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

Describing the whole incident, which had the capitals of the world in confusion, from a tempest in a teapot, Mr. Teagle denied that fifty million dollars, or any other sum, was to be paid to the Emperor by the Standard-Vacuum concession. Writing in Collier's, he gave a full report of the negotiations leading up to the contract, which finally was cancelled at the request of the State Department.

Several times in years past, Mr. Teagle writes, the oil company had sent its geologists to other Mid-East spots, so far as they could with the national feeling in the war, and the territory was "in the future book".

"About a year ago they looked into the situation and thought they might obtain a concession," he explains. "They engaged an English agent, because of his prowess and influence in similar work, to trade with Haile Selassie. Since fantastic stories have been published that the concession involved a commitment of $50,000,000, it might as well be the actual terms.

"The agent's total was to be paid to the Emperor; the arrangement followed the general lines of a lease in the United States ports are increased United States. Royalties were established within five years, although would have received no discretionary royalty. Standard-Vacuum Consulting advanced their negotiations or $25,000 for expenses and agreed to pay him another $25,000 if he brought back the concession. He got what he wanted, but as Italy and Ethiopia were coming to grips, no further steps were contemplated until peace should be restored."

But news of the lease was prematurely published, Mr. Teagle said in such a way as to make it appear that the United States might become involved in the Italo-Ethiopian dispute, and the State Department stepped in and requested that it be cancel.

"Had the story not been published," he added, "the situation as regards Italy, Ethiopia and the United States would be today exactly what it is, but Standard-Vacuum would have had the right to drill for oil, which when peace is restored and carry through its plans for developing oil resources, which have been attempted in the meantime, and no money lost or expended, and no work performed.

In referring to the current conflict in Ethiopia, Mr. Teagle said that "it may surprise you to be told that war is injurious rather than helpful to the world oil industry." He added that that is "probably true of any business, but more especially so which is disrupted to an extent that is not realized when the temporary forced consumption due to the war."

Foreign sellers who appear only when the regular suppliers are out of the market by war have made money selling oil to Italy," he said, "but the Ethiopian campaign which was to be the foreign business before the Italo-Ethiopian War have been cut out. Italian subsidiary imported in 1934, from all sources including the United States, 4,300,000 tons. In 1935, with all the extraordinary demands for fighting ships, airplanes, motorlorries and airplanes, their receipts were actually less than in the previous year.

Mr. Teagle expressed strongly his opposition to any war by aggression and autarchy.

The air is full of talk of preparation for another war," he said. "There is unfortunately nothing else so much thought being given to the maintenance of peace. The world has had its share of war and devastation, or autarchy, has failed utterly either to prevent war or promote prosperity. It has worked in the wrong direction.

"I firmly believe that the best preventive of international conflict is greater freedom for international trade. For trade rests on confidence. It endures as long as buyers and sellers deal with each other in good faith.

"Perhaps the time is here to remove the artificial barriers, some of

REMILITARIZATION DENIED BY TURKS

Variance of Reports is Confusing on Actual Situation

Geneva, April 18 (AP)—The Turkish delegation to the League of Nations said today it had received no confirmation of the reports that Turkish troops occupied the demilitarized Straits zone.

Members of the delegation said the Turkish "Anadolian Agency" declared the reports unfounded, and that this denial could be accepted as authoritative.

Athens, April 18 (CP)—The official Greek News Agency announced today the government had received official communication confirming the report of the reoccupation of the Dardanelles by Turkish troops.

The announcement here came in the face of denials from the Turkish capital and coincident with reports from London, where it was announced officially that there was no confirmation of reports of Turkish reoccupation of the Dardanelles.

Britain Concerned.

London, April 18 (AP)—The government, already concerned over the Chanak Straits question and Mediterranean situations, looked for clarification today of reports Turkey unilaterally remilitarized the Dardanelles in violation of post-war treaties.

Dispatches from Istanbul, former capital of Turkey on the European shore the Sea of Marmora from the Dardanelles, said troops moved into the demilitarized zone around both the Straits between the Marmora and Aegean Seas.

Turkey Issues Denial.

A Reuters News Agency dispatch from Ankara, present capital of Turkey, however, said the Turkish government today there denied that Turkish troops occupied the zone.

The usually reliable sources which first reported the occupation by Turkish troops stated their information was correct, but it was impossible to contact Turkish officials for formal confirmation immediately.

The Turkish Embassy denied flatly the occupation by Turkish troops of the Dardanelles.

Turkish quarters in London expressed astonishment at the reports, a spokesman for the Turkish Embassy asserting, "I have heard nothing of it."

Reports Cause Surprise.

The reports of reoccupation of the Dardanelles, fortified by the Treaty of Lausanne, caused all the more surprise as the Turkish delegate called the signatories to the treaty formally for revision to permit remilitarization.

The British response to the request for an amendment to the Straits clauses was favorable.

The reports that Turkey reoccupied the demilitarized zone without the formal permission of the other signatories caused considerable comment in diplomatic quarters throughout Europe.

For the reoccupation to be carried out without the formal agreement by the signatory powers was regarded as embarrassing the League powers in their efforts to uphold respect for treaties.

The Turkish request for treaty revision had been expected to be considered by the Lausanne powers early next month, with favorable action anticipated. Russia has already given Turkey a note expressing the approval of the Soviet Union for the Turkish request.

Turkey's interest is centered in keeping an open gateway in the Dardanelles.

ONE MAN KILLED AS CAR HITS POLE

Victim Alleged by Police to Be Driving Stolen Car

Toronto, April 16.—(CP)—One man was killed and another critically injured early today, when a stolen automobile, being chased by police, crashed into a pole in the east end of the city.

The dead man is believed by police to be Robert Kenny, about 23, of Toronto. The injured youth, Wilfrid Brooks, 24, of Toronto, is in the hospital with a fractured skull and internal injuries.

Pursued by the police at a mile-a-minute clip the car straddled the iron pole as the drivers suddenly pulled alongside. The automobile was all but cut in half.

One of the men was thrown into the back seat and the other pinned in the wreckage. Citizens aided police on hoisting the roof of the car, to release the men. Kenny was dead on admittance to the hospital.

Church told police he did not know the name of the dead man. They had met in downtown Toronto and driven to the east end, he said.

Pickets Push Aside Scholars at Strike

Hilton, April 16.—(AP)—Possible settlement of a dispute at Hadeston Township School strike was hoped for today in a two-hour meeting arranged between members of the school board and representatives of pupils and sympathetic adults. Pickets from the Lairmont Public School No. 3 schools, protesting the dismissal of 13 teachers, disrupted classes. In the Japan Kid Catdida schools yesterday, pushing aside boys and girls who attempted to enter the building and creating such disorder that classes in the convention that classes were impossible.

In some quarters little optimism was felt for the success of the strike conference.

ROOKIE PIECHOTA OF NEWARK BEARS DOWNS LEAFS 13-9

Come in as Relief Pitcher After Toronto Had Gained Lead

BUFFALO WINS

Bisons Continue Heavy Hitting Against The Baltimore Orioles

Under New York Yankee "farm" administration the International League perennial has taken second place at Newark to the business of developing prospects for big league players. But so long as the Yankee parade continues to come up with good prospects the Bears probably will keep on being pennant contenders.

The newest Newark hero is Piechota, a rookie who left the Western League in shirtsleeves and in effect rescued last season. Despite the weather that was too cold for good baseball and held the attendance down to 100, Piechota put a sudden stop to the "easy" business that has marked most of the early season games and gave the Bears a 13-4 triumph over Toronto Maple Leafs yesterday.

Taking the club after Spurgeon Chandler and Red Laflamme had been battered into submission in less than five innings, Piechota stopped the Leafs to four hits in 4 3/3 innings whittled four and contributed a lucky triple to his own victory. Four double plays in the first four innings kept the Bears from suffering worst damage than they did and a five run outburst in the seventh put the game on ice.

Johnny McCarthy, another newcomer, was the slugging star, driving in five runs with three hits, while Marvin May hit the game's only homer.

Bisons Heavy Hitters.

The Buffalo Bisons continued the heavy hitting that marked the season's opener and evened their series with Baltimore with an 11-0 triumph as Bill Harris checked the Orioles' batsmen. Harris allowed only three hits, all singles, while his teammates hammered Larry Benton and Bill Lohrman for 12 safeties, including two homers by Howard Myers and one each by Buck Crouse and Moe Mulleavy.

Cold weather halted the Montreal-Albany and Rochester-Syracuse games and the Red Wings, halted for the second time in their efforts to open the season, blew themselves to a $150-practice session. They went home to Rochester, put in a two-hour session in the big University of Rochester gymnasium, then caught a train back to Syracuse.

If Combination Clicks Cronin Stays on Bench

New York, April 18 (CP)—Joe Cronin, personable young shortstop manager of the Boston Red Sox, intends to bench himself indefinitely if the new infield combination clicks.

One of the game for at least two weeks while Cronin recovers from the stomach trouble has shifted Ben Mateo at his shortstop berth to the catcher's mitt behind the plate, Rudy York to third base, Bill Werber to first, with Joe Vosmik still over the hot corner. Mel Almada is in Werber's right field position.

"I hope this new set-up clicks so that I can get back in the line-up," said Joe. "I'm young and I've still got a lot of baseball in me and I bet it's a winning club that I want and I will sit on the bench even after my stomach is right, if this combination operates as I hope it will."

Boxing Crowns Decided In Bruising Tourney

Cochrane on Sidelines as White Sox Down Tigers 5-3 In Opening Game at Detroit

Johnny Whitehead Had Too Much on The Ball For Tigers

CUBS SWAMPED

Cincinnati Reds Score 12-3 Win Helped by Cuyler and Herman

Whereas a total of 305,000 fans turned out for the sunny opening of the season, Tuesday, only 79,324 were on deck yesterday when Cochrane directed clipping for her break. The Cards-Pirates game was postponed because of the cold.

Managers were on the sidelines with injured thumbs and Bill Jurges, Cub shortstop, was forced to retire after injuring that member. Joe Cronin of the Red Sox, who says he will stay on the bench if his new infield combination proves effective, watched his team play, in spots, with a broken thumb encased in splints, while Mickey Cochrane, the driving pilot of the Tigers, also was confined to the dugout with a thumb injured by a foul tip Wednesday.

Bill Terry, Giants' manager, stepped to the plate as a pinch hitter, sore knee and all and delivered a double that drove in his team in 6-4 triumph over the Boston Reds.

Boston In Opener.

Cochrane saw his champions homered 5-3 by Chicago White Sox with the largest crowd of the day, 21,175, in the home park. With Johnny Whitehead pitching seven-hit ball, the White Sox turned on a rally in the seventh inning that netted three runs and resulted in Eddie Auker taking an early shower. It was a case of history repeating itself here for the Sox beat the Tigers in their opener last spring.

The Cubs were given a bad drubbing by the Cincinnati Reds, 12-3. Paul Derringer, ace pitcher of the Reds, held Chicago to seven hits while his mates, paced by two former Cubs, Kiki Cuyler and Babe Herman, pounded three pitchers for 11 hits of their 12 hits to score all of their runs in the fourth, fifth and sixth frames. Cuyler and Herman got two hits apiece.

Cleveland Indians turned on Mike Meeks in the tenth inning to score three runs and hand the St. Louis Browns their third defeat, 6-3, after 13-10. The hefty Babe Phelps stabbed the Brooklyn Dodgers to win their first game of the season, 4-3. With the bases loaded in the tenth inning, Phelps came through with the blow that beat the Phillies.

GOLF BY ALEX MORRISON

Howard Phipps writes from Delray Beach, Fla.: "I think it would interest you to know that I won both Golf Stories this week." To which Mr. Howard Phipps adds: "I read your instructions again carefully before the matches and am sure they helped me."

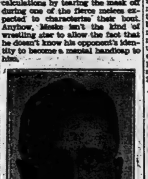
This welcome news brings up a point which should be helpful to you. Perhaps you've been under the impression that the correct swing calls for hard work in the learning stages, and even harder work to keep it in smooth working order. Well, I don't claim that learning the swing is a cinch, but I do hold that once it has been learned, it improves almost automatically.

All you have to do to polish and perfect every part of the correct swing is to keep repeating the main essentials. Repetition alone is doing about 75 per cent. of your smoothness and ease.

Slow motion movies would show the swings of Bobby Jones and Mac Smith to be better today than they were five years ago.

BUSY DAYS AT THE "Y" SEEN

Members in Practice Work For Coming Circus



Busier than the proverbial one armed paper-hanger, ADAy describes the situation at the Canniff Street institution these days as a complete cross-section of the membership is engaged in practice work for the circus being staged the last two days of the month. Practically the youngest member, on up to the senior ranks, both girls and boys are active in the preparations on the different numbers, which go to make up a full evening's entertainment. There will be drills, marching, apparatus work, ground gymnastics, pyramids on apparatus, dancing, tumbling, posing, comic stunts, clowns in action and what not. This occasion is really parents night as it gives the fathers and mothers an opportunity to see their youngsters in action and how those kids love to perform for mother and dad. Daily new members are coming into the Association taking advantage of the lowest summer membership rates ever offered by the local Y and a special effort is being made to work all these fresh members into one or other of the many numbers, which go to make up the circus performance. All in all this year's exhibition gives promise of being one of the greatest shown ever to take place within the four walls of the local Association.

REMOVES MASK AFTER DEFEAT

Unknown Expects to Become Champion of The World

Only under two specified conditions will The Unknown, who is to meet Ed Meske of Cleveland in the main bout of the Queensbury Club's wrestling show at the Arena next Tuesday evening, remove his mask and reveal his identity. One is if any opponent can beat him and the other is if he accomplishes his objective which is to win the championship of the world.

Meske, of course, may upset these calculations by tearing the mask off during one of the fierce mixups expected to characterize their bout. Anyhow, Meske isn't the kind of wrestling ace to allow the fact that he doesn't know his opponent's identity to become a mental handicap to him.

ED MESKE

While The Unknown is something of a sports secret, it can be said that he is a 220-pounder who will match Meske physically. He weighs 220 pounds against Meske's 225 and they are of about the same height. Both are remarkably fast for heavyweights and the fans are noted for their enthusiasm of a thorough knowledge of wrestling.

Irish Jack Donovan is a clean grappler who is matched with an opponent who wrestles that way but he can do plenty of damage with his elbow smashes when he meets a man of the rough and ready type. That gives promise of fireworks when he battles Al "Sunny" Dunlop. The contest between Andy Moen of Minneapolis and Antoine Parkin of France promises to be a sparkling affair for both are noted for their speed and science.

Yesterday's Stars

Hal Trosky, Indians—His home run and double drove in five runs against Browns.

John Whitehead, White Sox—Spoiled Tigers opening by holding world champions to seven scattered hits.

Jimmy Dykstra, Senators—Set the Athletics down with two hits.

Babe Herman, Reds—Hit home run and single to drive in three runs against Cubs.

Bob Grove, Red Sox—Shut out Yankees with two singles, both by Lou Gehrig.

Bill Terry, Giants—Cracked out a pinch double in sixth to clean bases of cacti in game with Bees.

Babe Phelps, Dodgers—Drove in winning run against Phils with his third single of game in tenth inning.

JIMMY WEEKES MEE.... Jimmy McLarnin, famous welter-weight scrapper from Vancouver gives his bride a ride on a baggage truck shortly after their arrival in New York. Jimmy went to town to fight Tony Canzoneri.

SPENT WINTER ON ROEBERG

Moscow, April 18 (CP-Havas)—A group of 15 Russian fishermen who were forced to spend the winter on a iceberg in the Caspian Sea have just been rescued by a Soviet steamer, according to word received here today.

The steamer Trifle found the men in a small boat on the high sea shortly after navigation had been resumed on the Caspian.

Berlin, Wis., April 18 (CP)—Eighty members of the Berlin Conservation Club decided that any hunter who failed to get at least one bird in the annual crow hunting contest must pay the penalty by taking an ounce of castor oil at the club banquet.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Senior baseball took a turn for the better in Belleville last night, when the players met three senior clubmen who are willing to assist in the sponsoring of the sport locally. The capacity part of last night's gathering was the indifference shown by the players, only four, Alex Web, Johnny Kerr, Cliff Bennett and Andy Knott being on hand. Various angles were discussed and subsequently Alex Weir and Johnnie Kerr were named as a committee to interview the available players relative to their desires of playing senior ball in 1936.

These service clubmen, along with Charles "Bud" Chew, pressed another, vetoed their opinion in the suggestion of "Some team" to be put on by a community possible. The names of the available players at the Trenton Airport were submitted and all in all baseball took a turn for the better. Indications are that Picton would not be represented in the Intermediate O.B.A.A. this year and maybe some of the Prince Edward County players would team up with the Tweed club, any rate Johnnie Kerr and Alex Weir have a good thing in store and all available players and report back to a committee made up of the service clubmen. Indications are that the service clubmen of this city are to be approached relative to the support efforts towards the sponsoring of a senior club in Belleville in 1936.

The question of junior baseball in Eastern Ontario is still undetermined, Belleville and Napanee were represented at last night's meeting, but Picton and Wellington failed to appear. The Picton interests are known to be interested in the sponsoring of junior baseball in the provincial district, but Napanee has refuse to enter a league with Napanee if that club use Verne "Lefty" Bishop as a junior hurler. On the other hand Coach Walter Cox personally assured the local delegation last night, that Bishop would not be used as a junior. "I intend using Bishop with my senior C.O. H.L. club," stated Walter. Sam Curry, publisher of the Tweed News, promised to pass the good word along to Tweed with regard to placing a junior team in that town. A splendid junior set-up could be arranged between Napanee, Picton, Tweed and Belleville, now that Bishop's case has been disposed of.

Taking all precautions against accidents, the wrestling ring at the Arena was inspected yesterday and strengthened before it was erected today. The Arena manager seemed realized the necessity of having a strong, sturdy ring for Jack Corcoran's heavyweight grapplers who open the wrestling season in Belleville on Tuesday night. The ring and ringside seats were all in place this afternoon ready for the paying of 2 of the 3d Tuesday. A few of the officials for the opening show have been booked by Jack Corcoran. Frank Demenico accepted the post of announcer, Steve Taylor, Belleville's popular wrestler, was named as the official timekeeper, while Bert Hall will be the third man in the ring as the referee. Personally we think that we see Bert get his chance with the "big parade" before the season ends, he will have less trouble than he did with the "park and beat" wrestlers, that Jack Neal Pearl introduced. Incidentally, the Unknown, who meets Ed "Strangler" Meske, is a man best, ran his string of victories up to 15 when he threw Joe Tremble on Thursday, but he wasn't tackling a tough heathen like Meske, the Ohio State Buckeye University football star.

Billie, the copy boy, says—"The year 1936 is going to be a leap for the girls, but to the pedestrian it is just another leap year."

Seven members of the Six National lacrosse team that appeared in Belleville two years ago at the Arena, left recently for Vancouver, where they will play with one of the Canadian teams on the Pacific Coast.

To date they have only six senior baseball clubs in the O.B.A.A. three at Eastmount Park and three at the Y. Belleville, Trenton and Picton news from Toronto is to the effect these two leagues will play intermediate baseball, with the championship decider individual winners. The O.B.A.A. should be set at the way to be the O.B.A.A. that the Central League winners would have to wait a month or so before they met the Interlake play-offs, as was the case last autumn.

According to Harry Moore, editor of the Trenton Courier-Advocate, the only thing that stands between Trenton and an O.B.A.A. entry, is the absence of an adequate field upon which to play baseball. A little work on the old race track might put it in shape to play junior baseball and thereby acquaint the citizens with the game, which seems forgotten at the mouth of the Trent. Then again, Mr. Moore has another suggestion relative to the elevation of hockey in Trenton. Harry advocates an artificial ice plant for the Trenton Arena. He contends the freezing power could be piped from the Trenton Cold Storage Plant, thereby eliminating the cost of a artificial ice plant being erected. All there would be necessary would be to place the pipes in the Trenton Arena. On paper the idea may read splendid, but is the Trenton Cold Storage plant's ice manufacturing plant sufficiently large enough to carry such a load, and if so, how could they expect to make an artificial ice plant pay in Trenton, when their present natural ice plant had to be closed a season or so ago? No Harry, it is tough enough proposing for the larger centres, to make ends meet with an artificial ice plant, but still it makes good copy.

The Carlisle Cubs bowling team from the Major League of the Dominion Bowling Association this morning to enter in the Canadian Bowling Association championship tournament today. The C.B.A. five pin tournament got under way with the Parkside Cubs entertainment stepped off in Belleville last night and piled up a total of 2,600 pins at the Recreation Alleys here in the city. The members of the local team responsible for the Cubs' total pin tonnage through their scores and handicaps were: Jack Cole, who scores hung up by the Ottawa team. The local five in the opening team: Jack Cole—Pete Bishop, Dave Tebb, Art Whalen, Leo Barrett and Bill Bennett.

The New York Giants, Chicago White Sox and Boston Red Sox are the only unbeaten and untied teams in the major leagues early today. Yesterday's big baseball feat was the two hit pitching duel by the veteran, "Lefty" Grove, when he pitched the Red Sox to victory over the Yankees with the defeated pitcher's opposite number, Leo Gehrig getting the two hits.

"Seein" Red Says Manager

Chicago, April 18 AP)—Take it from Manager Charlie Dressen, his Cincinnati Reds are going to win the pennant.

The Reds, Manager Dressen points out today, have burned the base paths, can field the infield league cellar and near-cellar positions so long. They're heading for brighter days.

They started their anti-respect campaign yesterday by whipping the league champion Chicago Cubs, 12-3. The titular bit of bunting at Wrigley Field, instead of properly impressing Mr. Dressen and company, only increased the latter's swelling tune of a vicious, utterly disrespectful 12-3 victory over 24 bases.

"Now you can't tell much about a club this early," warned Dressen.

"If we have as much good luck this year as we had last year—watch out for the Reds."

MAIDEN VOYAGE

BY KATHLEEN NORRIS

Synopsis of preceding instalments:

Antoinette Tait makes good as society editor of the San Francisco Call; but she is tired of it, and is not unhappy because of her love for Larry Bellamy, whom she first met when she was job-hunting and he was editor of the Journal. Since the Journal has been merged with the Call and Larry is associate editor, Miss Bellamy is a frail woman ten years older than her handsome husband. They have two children, Mary who is now covering a Piedmont carnival, they because that friends, Tony Di Lucca, formerly Larry's pal and it is time that she and Larry are all free. Drawn together, they realize they know that Larry toyed her despite his reserve; the older woman had married young Dr. Alvin Atwater of Monterey. Joe Vanderwalt, Ruth's half-brother's only friend, is deeply interested in biologic research, falls in love with Nonnie, the blue fish but cannot encourage him. Tony accepts an offer to go to Italy, Isabel and Tony to realize that she has been tricked into jeopardizing the job of an honest, capable teacher. She resigns, in indignation. Larry, returning home, finds Antoinette in tears; he knows that she return. Ruth's engagement to Bob Lee ends and Larry is saying, "I'm sorry, I'm mad. My beautiful, beautiful Tony. A week, perhaps, and then again, this time as his home where Nonnie, Joe, Isabel Cardelle, Ruth, stopped on her way to China. Seeing them together, Antoinette senses the situation. Using a forgotten book as an excuse, Larry follows Ruth to her car. Ruth drives away. "Lunch as one tomorrow" Tony asks.

Tony went out together and Tony walked with him to the garage in Montgomery Street, helping her up to the car together. Almost without speech they drove through the park and the Presidio, coming to the shore.

"This is a lovely place," Tony said almost timidly. For something in his manner was new, was a little breathless.

They were placed at a little window table and could look out across the wide ocean boulevard.

"Well, this is nice," Larry said when he had given the order.

"Had you forgotten our lunch date, Mrs. Larry?" he asked her. Tony asked.

"No," Larry put his hand in his pocket, took out a scrap of paper, opened it. Then, Tony looked up at him apprehensively when she had read it.

"Dear Tony," she read again, aloud, "I can't lunch today, something has come up that I can't put out of. I'm sorry, Larry." "Were you going to send me that?" she asked.

"I'll send it now," he said.

"Oh, Larry, and then I tele-phoned! I'm sorry!"

"Oh, that's all right. It wasn't importantly."

They were having an oyster cocktail, she and Lawrence Bellamy. She had said that he take the oyster, fiddedly somehow it was all very fun and a little like a honeymoon somehow. Why should she be having lunch with Larry and not be? It seemed all right dangerously exciting, but rather dull and unnecessary to go home to Isabel and here to the beach on an ordinary business day and look sobsquisly at each other.

"Well, what did you think of the Tonnets' Christmas?"

"Oh, she's beautiful." Had they talked of Ruth? Yes, they had.

"Isn't she? But of course it isn't Charm—personality—something, Nonnie has got that same thing. Nobody can't put it that Caroline's got, but she's got it."

"Her husband died?"

"Walt Polhemus, yes. Both husbands died."

"Both? She hasn't been married twice?"

"Oh yes, she has, and engaged all over the place! She's a perfect fool to decide between a perfectly splendid fellow, another splendid fellow, Walter Pettibone, the tennis champ, or we—and Phil Polhemus, her husband's brother."

"Between." They said it with a quite unpleasant sort of instinctive jealousy in her heart. "I'll bet she told you that!" she thought.

"As Caroline Vanderwalt she was a heart-breaker, Larry said with an air of making conversation. "I never knew her then. But I've been told she's a football game Reggie Bob Reed; he was the ace that year. Two years after he left college he went over a bank in the roadster; Caroline died, Caroline was dead. Bob was killed. Caroline was mourning that you could get Bob Reed, Caroline who years later she married Walt Polhemus—a military wedding, everything, all that sort of thing. Walt died two years ago and left Nonnie Polhemus and about her now."

"Never a dull moment for Caroline," Tony said, rather dryly. "Why is she going to China?"

"Paul Polhemus is there, but I don't know that it's that. Her great friends the Faulkners are in Peking — he's military attache and it's a chance for her to see China, and she's most pleasant company. . . . Tony, my dear," Larry said breaking off his brief history and threat of his conversation, changing his tone, saying the last three words roefully, hopelessly, appallingly.

She looked at him and the blood left her face and she could not speak.

"I'm so horribly sorry," he said. "I didn't mean to say it like—now to come to lunch today, not to ask you yesterday. But the minute I saw you I knew that I'd been a fool. I know," she said in the pause. "It isn't what I want to do, or ought to do, Larry," she said in a slow long looking down at the table without seeing it, not saying anything; "it's what I can do. Don't think that I plan . . . or that I use. It's no use."

The double notes of her voice died in the air. Larry was looking down, scowling; now he looked up. "Tony, let me say this." He broke off for a second then went on. "I'm so far and stopped short. He considered, frowning, and then looked eyes staring into space. "It's only," he began suddenly, "that there's only body like you — no one. You're — you're Tony, that means that everything. I'm not so much what I mean to say." Larry said stopped again. "I'm not so much my dear," he added simply. "I'm nothing but a fool."

Tony was silent, looking down. He saw two tears roll over her cheeks and splash on her white fingers.

"That isn't it," Larry began again with an effort. "No matter what—how much I love you, rather, that isn't the question, is it?"

"No, that isn't it," Tony agreed dully.

"Of course it's Ruth. And things have gone wrong for her. And she depends anywhere for us. Tony, no-body."

"No out."

"I'm not going over the whole thing with you, Tony," Larry went on, "what she's always done for me, what I've been to her, what I mean to her and to me. Larry said suddenly he had to be going. Alternating between words. "You know all that. You know her, how she clings to me, how helpless she is. What shall we do, Tony?"

"I don't know, Larry," she said, and looked at him.

"Dear, dear unhappy."

"She would be, if she knew," Tony said, looking away.

"Larry, you remember last week when Mary was sick at home, when Aunt Mag came in?"

"I had meant to say then what I'm saying now, Tony, but you were so little time."

"There was a fever since then," Tony said. "I've not been eating; I don't sleep — nothing matters, Larry, except if we could—if we could like yours, or walk the way you do, be free to take the chance."

"I know," he said.

"I've been going to love, isn't it?" the girl asked.

"I've been," he began and stopped short.

"And we're never to be with each other, and we've been more than that one time, when you kissed me, Larry."

She said the words slowly, thoughtfully, not looking at him. Tony exclaimed presently in a breaking voice.

"I've thought that. What a horrible pity it is! What a waste! I've thought of going away, but being just well started on the paper, and Mary's new home and I've got so—"

"Larry," Tony said after long thought, "how long does this feeling last?"

"I don't mean our caring for each other?"

"For it doesn't feel as if it would ever — very fast — Tony faltered with trembling lips.

"Tony, I've been long I am going to feel that you were made for me and I for you," he said. Larry said looking down at his knotted fingers. "I've been sick, Tony, I've been sick. It is going to last all my life, Tony. I don't want to let my mind wander to the thought of you as my wife — mine, keeping my home and my children and me at the end of the day. We have to go on from here.

The tonnel tone were tensed; their coffee was poured like amber into the white tin cups; the chops were brought in with the effect of perfection when there was a half hour's wait. Tony ate and drank and Joe looked up. It was Larry.

Tony, with her chop and her cup, instantly smiled at him as he came down the rocky stairway; she could not help it.

"Larry, what happened?" Caroline Rea cried.

"I got homesick for all of you, driving in last night, so I letthe-bed-and-breakfast-habit this morning, and started right off again! I thought I'd like to have a look at Joe's housekeeping and then maybe we could all have dinner at the Cliff tonight. But I've got to turn in to see Ruth and Bob Lee before I get out of the morning. Or maybe I'll go to Del Monte.

The conversation was happy, dealisfory. They were all related into comfortable positions; the food was good.

"What's that man out there doing?" asked Caroline.

"Absolutely fishing. They send them up to San Francisco," said Tony. "Are they any good?"

"Only," Tony answered, "when they're thoroughly disguised. Like this."

"Clams and hot butter, just hot butter," Joe suggested. "Nonnie doesn't nothing more."

"Ugh!" Tony ejaculated, shuddering.

"I gather you don't like clams, Tony," Larry said. It is the first time he had spoken to her. The girl raised her lashes and glanced at him; looked away again to see Caroline looking at her with a question in her face.

"Not one to the other; her face had wrinkled faintly.

Presently Tony said Larry had their moment. It came when Ruth, Joe, Caroline and Larry had climbed up the beach to a certain rock pool that Joe said was unique in that it had more than fifty specimens from it and believed they were there.

Tony, wedding cups in the tide pool, looked up at Larry on the car. That she would stay with Mrs. Patterson. But now the old lady was dead and Tony had wrapped about her legs and when Larry came back for her, Tony thought she was quite natural for Tony to say that she would go on with him and join the others.

"How good it, Tony?" Larry said with a look that said more than words.

"Sadly," the girl answered with a brief little shrug.

"Yes, I know. It goes badly," he agreed quickly.

They walked along, Larry waving the cameras at Ruth, a hundred yards away. Ruth was happy and that was all that mattered. The tide was coming in, lapping the cupboard and empty lobster, the pleased vanishing of the morning, feeling of bed, compounding of small economical puddings with cash in the bank, and considered, spelled full and glorious living to Tony.

Tony had another night with her; another morning, evening with Anthony's bath and bottle and nap. Then Dr. Joe came for her in the car and took her back with Caroline and Ruth's mother, old Mrs. Vanderwalt, who wore with the hot still satin-blue world of beaches and water, towering eucalyptus and crouching cypress trees.

Now Ruth. Don't expect too much," Joe warned her. "It's not a shanty, but I've sort of fixed it up."

"I'll love it."

He turned in at a field gate, followed a wavering dirt road toward the shore, brought them through a grove of trees to a group of cabins that stood ridiculously square and unpainted in the sunlight. Dr. Joe enthusiastically displayed the threesquare rooms that he had cleaned and made into more modern proportions. This wasn't finished; that was to be a bedroom. The floor was hardly started of course. Here was a kitchen, here was what was to be. And here bookcases wasn't very much.

Outside they heard the same story. Seeds had been planted all around the cabins. There were lots of them in, but you had to keep the chickens out, and the dogs.

Carrying chops and buns and coffee thermos to the rocky shore Joe said to Tony:

"Come down here—and run it, and I'll run it for you. Any evening or day you the Alexander place over Pebble Beach."

"I'll do it," Tony, laughing as she stretched a hand to Ruth, beginning carefully over the boulders, took like a stairway, stopped and looked down at the water. "You can get some dinner there!"

"Surely, Joe agreed.

"But what?" he asked in the unconcerned tone. His almost harsh manner he had used thoughtfully. "I shouldn't. But—it's just driving to Monterey and back and I thought nothing of our driving up from Salinas last night."

"Yes, but it's different now," Larry replied, still incessantly in a tone that brought the matter suddenly to her face. "But we won't be going back to Monterey, we're going to Los Angeles on Wednesday night."

"Add Cliff is to be married five weeks from Saturday, and after that—yes, there's no hurry," Joe said.

"It's it all ahead of you, my dear. With your beauty, your wit, the world before you. Because you love you, that makes you Tony."

"Don't talk that way."

"It's very beautiful in that white outfit, Tony."

"I got you think I am."

"I'll stop at the hotel anyway at nine-thirty tonight."

Her blue eyes met his for the fraction of a second; there was time for no more. Ruth called to Joe.

"Tony," said Ruth as they started home at sunset, "we all drive up Tuesday. Could you drive back?"

"Ruth, I'd love it. But I'm going back with the Brewers tonight; I've got to turn in a column tonight."

"Come up and have dinner with us Wednesday night, anyway," Ruth said at Brenda's doorway."

"Wednesday! I think I could."

Ruth rocked on the porch, inconspicuous behind a pillar. Tony was conscious of the heart-throbbing streams of hotel life come and go. Her suitcase was at her feet. The Brewers came and she went down and talked to them; came back to her stricken chair. Lue she was cast.

At six o'clock the wide drive, the porches and steps of the hotel were deserted; every one was dressing for dinner.

Her heart rose into her throat. It was here now, Larry's car—now, before—now.

"Thank goodness you're here," he said, big and handsome in his brown overcoat and driving cap. "Here, give me your bag; hop in. I'm taking you to dinner. What do you mean by not coming to Monterey tomorrow with your brother?" Larry asked, laughing.

"Yes. Chit's driving me. He can't! I hated Beach for Easter week. I'll be with Brenda."

"Were taking Caroline down to show her the sights. But I'm coming up Sunday night."

"Oh, let me at Joe's house-warming, then!"

"Tony, that's better this way. I There was a long pause. When Larry spoke again Tony was at the door of the big office building.

"I'll drop you here. I have to go up to the club for a minute."

"It's good-by then," Tony said. She got down and said a muffled good-by. Larry and Larry turned away. "Oh, my God, help me, help me, help me!" she said, one hand pressed against her heart, the other her heart. "What shall I do?"

GLASGOW RANGERS WIN CUP FINAL

Hampden Park, Glasgow, April 18 (CP Cable)—A goal in the first two minutes of play gave Glasgow Rangers their second successive Scottish Cup victory today.

It. McDonald scored the only goal of the match—winning contest against third division opponents, Albion Rovers.

A capacity crowd packed Hampden Park's huge stadium and terracing, the match being played under ideal conditions although a tricky breeze hampered the teams.

TORONTO MINES
(Close)

Toronto, April 18 (CP)—In heavy trading that reached a half million shares in the first hour, prices maintained an irregularly higher tendency on the Toronto Mining Market in the final session of the week.

Sudbury Basin, Ventures, Noranda and Wells-Arnold all had good ground and Sherritt recorded a gain of a few cents. Falconbridge weakened about 40 cents. Hollinger and Castle closed unchanged.

Among the golds McWatters advanced about 8 cents, Sylvanite did better in slow trading and other issues closing with gains of a few cents were Buffalo-Ankerite, Malartic, Beattie, Chibougamau and Base Metals. Pioneer, Teck Hughes and Perron remained back slightly. McIntyre boarded a loss of ¼.

Hard Rock pushed forward 9 cents to 94.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS
(Close)

Toronto, April 18 (CP)—Operating in low gear, the Industrial Section of the Toronto Stock Market added more losses than gains in the short trading session.

A majority of the interlisted leaders were off, including Nickel, Smelters, Steels, Paper, Base and some of the oils and liquors. British American Oil had a small net gain and Pantepec had a gain of 1-4. Imperial boasted a minor recession and International Petroleum showed a loss of a half point.

In the liquors only Distillers-Seagrams was on the down side at 23 ¼. Steel Canada had a set-back of 4 points. Steel of Canada became interlisted declines of 1-4 to 1-2 and Nickel, metals and Canadian Vickers displayed weakness.

Banks were dull and mainly unchanged, implement shares rather steady and oddities were irregular. Bell Telephone was unchanged to near up and Union Gas and Montreal Power closed on the side. The Provincial loses came out for Hollinger and Dench. Goodyear Pfd. and Canadian Canners B.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, April 18.—Price advances were resumed on the local Montreal Produce Exchange today, gains of five cents per bag being recorded, making the week's improvement 20 cents per bag. Light stocks, together with a good export movement to the United States, have caused the rise in prices. The better market was somewhat easy, with receipts of fresh butter showing increase, and with demand slightly. Cheese, eggs and poultry were unchanged. Receipts for the day were reported at the Board of Trade at 1,396 cases of eggs, 303 boxes of butter and no cheese.

The potato market was quoted as follows per bag: 1 grade, per 80-lb. Quebec No. 1, Provincials, $1.55 to $1.60; Ontario No. 1, per 75 lb. Mountains, $1.50 to $1.55; Quebec Shipping Points, $1.45 to $1.50. For 10-lb. sacks of 10 lb. at $1.10 per 80-lb. bag, prices were 31c-32c. Quebec white, No. 2, were $1.30 to $1.40 per 80-lb. bags. New potatoes were $2.30 per 50-lb. sacks for No. 1 Yellow Fleshed.

The butter market was generally quoted 23½c for No. 1 grass regrading, 23c for No. 2 grading, and 22½c ranged all the way from some low quality unpasteurized at 21¼c to No. 1 pasteurized at 22c.

On the egg market graded shipments in case lots were: No. 1, extra, 19½c to 20c for A-grades, 18c-19½c for A-medium or B, and 16c for A-pullets or C.

Weekly Livestock Review

Toronto April 17.—(CP)—A decent selling trade on heavy finished cattle and steers featured movement on the Toronto Livestock market this week, as cattle prices are back after a higher opening and hogs and 25 to 50 cents higher until Wednesday when activity and prices underwent a reversal and most grades of killers lost 15 to 25 cents. Exporters made the strength on the early markets, taking 600 head for Great Britain and 50 for the United States. The holdover totalled 300 at the close of Thursday's market.

A few choice heavy steers sold at $6.90 to $7.15, medium to good weighty steers at $6.50 to $6.90, Plain steers sold down to $4.50, while butcher steers and heifers moved mostly between $4.50 and $6.00 with tops for export at $5.35 to $6.50. Plain butchers sold as low as $3.75.

Good cows opened at $4.00 for tops but closed at $3.75 to $3.75 with plain at $2.00 to $2.75 and cutters and canners at $1.25 to $1.90. Bulls opened strong under export demand selling up to a high of $5.75, but the close was easier at $5.50 to $5.65 for best grades, bologna at $4.50 to $5.00.

Feal Calves Steady

Fed calves sold about steady for the week at $6.00 to $6.50 for choice with plain down to $4.75. A few lots of good stockers and feeders were taken at $4.00 to $4.40 over, with plain classes and common springers sold slowly at $30 to $45 each.

A heavy calf run met with good grade, due mostly to export demand, choice weights went at $6.00 to $6.50 with common to medium kinds down to $4.00 for the week over. Export shipments to the United States totalled 850 head.

The hog division dropped 20 to 25 cents on Monday and on Tuesday, $6.15 off truck and $6.75 off car. Some long-haul off trucks moved up to $6.25. Several loads of hogs were sold off the market on a full grade basis.

Sheep and lamb receipts were light with only one run of fresh arrivals included. Good lambs, western and some feeders from Ontario, sold 50 cents lower at $10.50 over and a few culls made from $7.00 to $9.00. Sheep were unchanged at $2.00 to $6.00 over, according to quality. Only a few light weight fat spring lambs sold at $8.00 to $9.50 each for good weights up to 70 pounds and down, to $6.50 each for lightweights.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied by Biggar and Crawford Financial Service.

The market, from time to time, offers chances in stocks which are known as "sleepers". They have "old dogs" as well as the "like it" whole, but in time are likely to make up for the "has been". Regard stocks are frequently in industries which are beset by difficulties of one kind or another.

The Financial World considers C. P. R. common in the above category and suggests that it is a good "specific, which is to Canadian railroading what A.T. and T. is to American telephones" but reached the point where greater traffic ought to benefit itself readily to mean net income. The stock has been slow to respond to improved operating conditions but in this instance its laggard spirit is a virtue For, if International Nickel as it continues to forge ahead, it ought to do likewise.

General Motors 1937 Chevrolet will probably not be an eight-cylinder as some rumors suggest—but an entirely new six-cylinder model which employs a novel modification of the Lo-Lead engine. Incidentally, whereas 1935 was a "Ford" year, 1936 has so far proved "Chevrolet" year. Motors is now usurping the leadership of the low-priced field.

Dr. Leonard F. Ayres, eminent American statistician, states that business has made a sufficiently good showing for the first quarter of this year to warrant the comment that "one must take a view of the adverse circumstances that have prevailed. The unfavorable conditions have been conducive to prevent more rapid improvement. They have included the exceptional severe winter weather, the destructive floods, and disquieting news from Europe. All are now out of the way of the legislating and investigating that have darkened the face of Congress. These may be summarized as the factors of weather, water, war and uncertainty."

The security markets continue to reflect prevailing confidence, and most of the current comment appearing in the business pages of our newspapers is optimistic in tone. Underlying the general forces of recovery are operating as vigorously as ever. Nothing could happen now to, but there are at least two factors in the general situation which are distinctly reassuring. One of them is, of course, the continuing flow of gold to our shores. Another is the steady liquidation of debt. Just how large it is we do not know, but all careful estimates agree that the volume of those out of work are distressingly large, and but slowly diminishing.

Steel of Canada 6 is in new high ground, state Garnaud and Gadsby in their Forecast of Trade and Finance. It is true that the stock is too high but it is still selling at only 30 times 1936 earnings whereas International Nickel, for example, is priced at 39 times 1935 results. The income return based on 1936 dividend payments totalling $3.17 1-2 a share is 4.8%. At least as high hopes are entertained for the 1936 year and until the remaining arrears of $12 a share have been paid off we would look for the stock to closely approximating per share value. Since the end of 1932 there were $3.31 a share on both the preferred and common stocks combined (or $4.30 a share on the common after $1.75 dividends on the preferred).

For the immediate future, the local industrial markets is expected to mark time, with little loss in anticipation of the forthcoming budget. While no advance information is available as to what the budget will contain, it is believed that tariff revision will be considered the Canadian manufacturing industry, particularly the "golds."

Sherritt Gordon Will Resume

Mill to Be Operated Sixty-Six Hours at 100 Per Cent.

In connection with the announcement made this week that Sherritt Gordon will sink the main shaft a further 300 feet to a depth of 1,100 feet and the mill resume operations, it is noted that "there is no intention of resuming metal production until the price of copper appears to be stabilized at a figure which will be satisfactory to recall the president's statement last year that "the management will not operate unless that if copper prices established at 10 cents a pound or better."

Copper is currently selling at 9.3 cents a pound, or $93.00 per metric ton. In the United States the price has been established at 9.5 cents. The statistical position is gradually improving and with a continuation of present industrial conditions in America and in Europe, it is probable that the price will be in a position to resume production.

Manitoba and Eastern Report

Mr. H. Hunt, president of Manitoba and Eastern Mines, in a statement to shareholders in the report for the year ended March 31, 1936, states that operations have been resumed at the property in the Tanco Township area. Program to be followed during the year is the sinking of a contract of establishing a station at the 100-foot, level and fully equipping the 100-foot, 200-foot and second levels. Diamond drilling at the 400-foot level has indicated an ore length of around 700 feet, and a width of 10 feet. Diamond drilling sections, 16 in number, was 811, 1 per ton across width of 40 feet. Ore reserves in this zone on the first three levels it is hoped that sufficient ore will be developed to justify consideration of mill installation.

J. M. Consolidated Property Exposed

Preparations for mill construction are being made on the property of the Consolidated Mines Ltd., at the company's property in the Wasa-Lake area, it is stated in the Financial Post. When the Northern Miner visited the property recently the foundations for the equipment for the new 100-ton mill had been laid, and the erection of the remainder was then on the way in.

In a lengthy report of the ore situation, The Northern Miner says that the main ore bodies now exist are lengths one of the most promising features of the new work was the disclosure or commercial values on the new deep levels. The report says that the company now goes into production with an ore estimated at 1,000,000 tons averaging $12, exclusive of the new ore revealed in the work on four levels.

The clash that threatened European power as the result of Hitler moving troops into the Rhineland has subsided for the time being due to the courageous stand of Britain and France against the power of negotiations before precipitating a European conflict is expected. It believes that if Hitler is a fox, then he has held a lion by the himself if it turns out that his proffer to enter into a twenty-five year agreement is nothing but a ruse.

Every chancellery in Europe must realize the chaos likely to emanate from such a conflagration. That reason it is likely that loop holes may be found in the way of improving relations between Germany and Britain and France. The bellicose talk that is heard, instead of watching what Adolf is likely to do in the immediate future, what will most concern the world in the next few months are the steps that Germany may take to prevent further inflation.

The local market is marking time for the present, with some gains for the week being of unimportant proportions. One heartening factor, although it is not reflected in any demand for the better grade issues is the steady improvement in conditions and the failure of brokers' loans to expand in spite of the fact that the market clearly indicates that accounts are in a healthy condition.

Shareholders of Building Products will be interested to learn that the local production of panel board, plain and fire board, roof boards, etc., in the first quarter of this year amounted to 4,211,000 square feet as compared with 3,431,000 surface feet in the first quarter of 1935, an increase of 780,000 square feet.

Donnacona and International Fibre-board are also reasonable producing the above products.

International Petroleum's production continues on the upgrade. The company in 1935 set a new high production record and in March of 1936 topped the list with 1,786,000 barrels was up 122,806 barrels over March last year. "Peru" produced 2,194,824 barrels of oil in the first quarter of this year, an increase of 361,826 barrels over the same period of 1935.

Mountain Lake Reserves

Several months ago Monarch Mines, Limited, made some exceptionally high-grade discoveries on their property in Desmeral Township, but finds were kept very quiet. Since that time no further information has been issued, but we now have been semi-officially informed that the Company has been adequately financed privately, and that interesting news is likely to come from this property in the next few months.

Pickle Crow Sold Recard.

Production at Pickle Crow Gold Mines for March amounted to mill $177,302, a new all-time high, and compares with $122,894 in February. A total of 5,053 tons were treated during the month, of which 3,185 tons came from drifting on the main vein at the three lower levels.

The high percentage of development milliseal permits some accumulation of broken ore on reserves on upper levels which stand at 14,615 tons at the end of March. The overall average for the three lower horizons from drifting along the main vein as at April 1 shows: 1,946 feet grading $11.76 across 36 inches on the 500-ft. level, 585 ft. of $26.30 grade over 41 inches on the 625 level and 46 ft. in the grade of $23.55 and width of 37 inches on the 750-ft. level, according to the latest character of 1936 installed $393,762 from 14,- 000 feet of drifting. Underground work continues high at 94.5 per cent.

Canada Rad Breweries Limited.

The recent activity and strength in the shares of Canada Breweries on the Toronto Stock Exchange not only reflects the reported improvement in sales during the first quarter of this year when compared with those of 1935, but it also brings to light the fact that such volume of business is the direct result that the control of this company is being exercised in the open market. In the connection it will be recalled that Brewing Corporation of Canada acquired a block in 1934 to exchange their common stock for that of Canada Rad on a share for share basis. Needless to say the deal did not go through but since that time a steady accumulation of "Rad" has been in progress. Such buying may make itself felt before long.

"GLITTERING GIRL"

By MAY CHRISTIE

Things went even better than Terry expected. For after persuading Vernon to the host and hostess in a passage where he claimed him himself. She looked yellow in her tomato-red gown—yellow and yearning.

"This is Miss Vernon Tyson—great pal of your pal, Terry Shannon. Where's Terry, by the way? Was gob him in tow?" inquired Peggy.

Anne did not even deign to reply. With a chilly movement of her head towards Vernon, she moved on.

"Lord, what it means to be a good looking chap in this town! Thank heaven, I wasn't so gifted!"—as he piloted Vernon into the library on their upper floor, where a long table set against the wall fairly groaned with good food.

Vernon's heart was thudding violently. Terry at this party? And with Hazel Starr! How dare she had she known that!

A bellboy offered her a glass of champagne. With shaking fingers she took it. She needed the stimulant.

"Atta girl, Vernon! I was afraid you were going to be a prude! Nothing like a little giggle-water to set you on the road you in your stride!" With that Peggy drank his at a gulp, and took a second glass.

"I'll have another too," Vernon said joyously. Beyond the library, on a glass-enclosed sun porch where the lights glowed dimly golden, and ferns and palms afforded a kind of spurious privacy, she had seen Max Rushington from the rear....and alongside Nan, and very close to her, the finely proportioned back and shiny head of Terry Shannon.

Peggy grinned at her, following that glance. "Pipe that! Terry early in...to...evening, star-gazing!"

x x x

The Van Tyles' party went with a swing. Backgammon. Bridge. Dancing. Flirting. Eating. Drinking.

In her white satin gown and Madonna coiffure, Vernon was receiving her full need of attention. But her heart was sore.

Because of all the men who hovered round her, and complimented her on her beauty, and laughed at her small sallies as though she had the wit of a Madame Recamier, Terry was among the absentees.... He had greeted her pleasantly, it true, but he had made no effort to join her.

Nan seemed to monopolize him. Tonight, with considerably less make-up on than usual (was this Terry's influence?) Nan looked her prettiest. She wore a jeune fille gown of forget-me-not blue that matched her large blue eyes. She was gaunt less aloof and talkative than was customary.

For Nan in her frivolous, shallow little life, she had exerted herself—and then no Bunny to "study her man." She wanted to appear to Terry Shannon as what he most admired in the opposite sex. She had flung herself into the part beautifully.

But even though he stayed by her, Terry remained distressingly platonic. There was no time to lose, because he had just sprung the bad news to her—quite casually—that at any moment now he might have to go to Ardmo.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

The clock on that the church on upper Park Avenue was striking midnight as Nan sat with Terry in a secluded corner of the conservatory.

"Good heavens! It's twelve o'clock! And you haven't even attempted to try on the glass slipper!

That would fetch him, she thought. It was a trend him to Prince Charming and Cinderella.

Terry leaned lazily back in his chair. Was it her fancy or did he almost yawn as he remarked lackadaisically, "It must have been a comfortable piece of footwear."

Nan snuggled against him, purring: "You're you're a regular Prince Anyhow, Terry!"

"Come now, Nan. Admit that heart of yours is a house of many mansions!"

"It's nothing of the sort. Not now —not when I know a real, live man like yourself! That be bold, like this. There was no time to lose. After all, in this day and age I wasn't it really up to the girl to do the proposing...?"

"Your fairy looking for you. Let's take pity on him. Let's get back to the dance floor, Nan."

"Foggy? Faugh! That shrimp? Say, don't be so blind, Terry. Did he tell! Can't you see it's you he's fond of?"

Before he could head her off, or rise to go, she caught his hand in both of her own. "Terry, I'm dancing—don't you think you and I would make a good team in life, Terry, Arlene? Take me with you, Terry. I'm sick of all the dancing and the raiseens, and the smirking and the rotters. Every morning when I wake up, I ask myself what the whole show's about, anyhow."

Now this last statement was perhaps the most sensible that Nan had ever given utterance to. Terry settled on it.

"Then cut out the rough stuff—the fervid revivalist stuff—and something worthwhile out of yourself, my dear girl. Take a course at Columbia—do some settlement work—go abroad and study for a year. You're very young. You're all your life in front of you. Develop your brains. Widen your interests."

Nan felt as though she had had a cold water had been flung into her face.

"Then you—you don't care for me at all? That isn't true, Terry! You're just bashful—and no inside yourself—afraid to how on me. We'd make a marvelous team. We'd do everything and get married, Terry! And Nan flung her arms about his neck and clung to him tightly.

"Let go! People are coming in! This is insanity!"

He rose, Nan still clutching him. She tried to disengage her fingers. "People! Who cares? I want you and I'm going to have you! Let 'em all come in! I'll tell 'em!"

Before he could get free of her, the son of the house was upon them with Vernon—pale and lovely—on his arm.

x x x

Fifteen minutes later on the dance floor at the Van Tyles' party Nan Rushington was dancing in an abandoned way with "Foggy" Hansen. Vernon was with young Van Tyle. Then Terry Shannon cutting in....

Her heart had had asked at the evening seemed to turn right over in her breast as he took her in his arms. But she wouldn't have suspected it as she remarked, coolly and critically: "Say, it's you, Tom Juan, is it?"

"That's an inappropriate title. I gave you credit for more gray matter, Miss Tyson."

"Oh! Your women must all be clever as well as 'wild, weak and willing' Kiss for kiss, isn't it?"

He flushed. That had gone home. But how to explain to her that he felt like girl that her madcap decision had literally flung herself into his arms and asked him to marry her...?

But what of herself and Prince Karimoff? She could be sarcastic at his expense—she herself having behaved so badly on the night of the Pageant—

It was unchivalrous of him, but as they swung across the dance-floor he couldn't help saying: "What about people who live in glass houses?"

She laughed. Her laugh had the tinkle of icicles in it. "Glass houses let in the sunshine, and they make one the victim of snoopers and busybodies."

"Third score for you. How quickly you've learned in this city!"

"To defend myself? Even if I do live in a glass house!"

His arm tightened involuntarily about her slim figure. "For a time —a very short time—I dwelled in a wonderful Castle in Spain."

"And women have shattered it. I suppose I'm the wicked fairy to be for this type of flirting."

"When men are in the wrong, they always do blame women for destroying the shrine that their romantic imagination of vanity had set up," Vernon said softly as they danced. "A saint can be the greatest charlo—but if he finds or thinks the woman he's set his careless fancy on has feet of clay—that's the right metaphor, isn't it?—then goodnight!"

"So I'm the object of your scorn? He held her so close now that he could feel her heart fluttering through her white dress. He couldn't be so indifferent as her voice sounded? Whatever had happened between herself and that bounder Karimoff, she must have some feeling left for him.

"Philanderers are amusing," said Vernon, "but I don't seem to have much respect for them."

"Do you say that because you happen to have seen me with Nan?"

"What you do is your own affair. Let's change the subject."

"I'm glad we understand at all. You maligned me."

"Nonsense. What does it matter what I think?"

She spoke without coquetry, as though she had lost interest.

"Let's get out of here," urged Terry. "There's a little room upstairs. We can talk there."

He paid no attention to her protests. He led her up the stairs, along a narrow passage and into a small sitting-room.

It was empty. He thrust her into a deep wicker chair and unceremoniously sat on the floor beside her.

"Now tell me all you've been doing. It's been ages since we had a real talk."

She regarded the ceiling abstractedly. "Whose fault is that?" she asked.

"There you go again, blaming the woman! My dear, indeed! Back to the bad old spirit of damsels talking!"

"I'm no spirit of damsels, as you call it. I liked one girl—awfully. But she preferred somebody else. That's the use of talking about it!"

"Them don't. Only you surmise wrong. Now, you dear, silly, old-fashioned fancy-free as the day I hit this city!"

"Were you entirely heart-whole then? Engaged to no wonderful person, who came on the train, in the observation car, when you landed at the end of your long and tedious journey, Vernon....?"

She gave a little hand tightened. "You don't hate me. That's just pretense. When I was dancing with you just now, I could feel your heart beating like a wild little bird afraid. Vernon, of captivity!"

Her breath caught. Pulses raced. This wonderful moment!

She stammered: "When you like anybody, you don't stay away. You don't deliberately take other people out—"

"Didn't I occurred to you that might be to cover up a disappointment?"

"In the goddess with the feet of clay! In the Castle in Spain that fell to earth? You maligned me basely, Terry!"

She withdrew her hand from his face as he spoke. "I'm not keen on accepting a diamond necklace from another man—and other things—that leave me out. Could anyone blame me?"

"I didn't accept it. I borrowed it for the Pageant only. He's got it back. Whatever you think, you're wrong!" She broke off as shrill voices were heard in the passage, and Nan Rushington, with one arm linked to Peggy Hansen and the other to Johnny Suydam, entered the little sanctum.

"I thought Vernon would be interested in the latest news!" Nan blurted. "I've been! The best! Tell it again, old boy! It's great stuff! Go to it, Jimmy!" It was indeed she had refreshed herself considerably since her unlucky passage with Terry Shannon an hour ago. There was malicious triumph in her eyes as she regarded the flushed and lovely vision that was Vernon.

"It isn't anything much," deprecated Jimmy. "I was down to the docks an hour ago for the sailing of the 'Gigantic' on her Mediterranean cruise—my mother's been sick—and was going on the boat with friends—and who should I see aboard among the passengers but that De Bray woman and Prince Karimoff—"

Nan shrilled: "But you're missing the best bit! They were sharing the same stateroom—travelling together!"

Under the name of Melchaeva—that was the quaint thing—I was in the curious enough to ask Dear steward, and he told me," volunteered Jimmy.

"Dear steward's humor, her love broke, and she burst into uncontrollable tears."

CHAPTER XXXIV.

"Hit my high-and-mighty cousin fairly in the eye, eh, what, old dear?" giggled Nan to Peggy as, supporting each other a little unsteadily, the pair found themselves before the light buffet table. "Terry started to pour out further liquid libations.

"Quite a hit in the solar plexus! But didn't look miffed! Shouldn't, Vernon opened her mouth, but no words came. She struggled to speak for she must let Terry know at once that there was a bad mistake—that something between herself and Karimoff—

"Terry, listen—" But to her own amazement—or horror, her words broke, and she burst into uncontrollable tears.

"But you don't care for her? You care for me!" Nan corrected him sharply, Ugly as Peggy was, and entirely devoid of that intriguing commodity, sex-appeal, his money TALKED!) A maiden scheme, born of her slay in the face since humiliatingly Terry, and of Peggy's and mixed potions she had consumed thereafter, spread to Nan's mind.

"Peggy, let's elope tonight! Let you and I spring a grand surprise on all the female cats and he-male dogs, and get married!"

BUT.... it's the LITTLE THINGS that count....

New drapes for the guest room, and Junior's first haircut. A new recipe for peach pie and new pans for baking it. A picnic at the beach, and a new hat for the weekly bridge. Every day events? Of course! But they're the things that make life livable! What's a war in Illyria and another Arctic expedition, compared to the thrill of the first glimpse of the family that's moving in next door, and the delivery of a shining new refrigerator? What's a royal wedding, and twelve rooms filled with gifts, when Anne has her fifth birthday tomorrow? They're interesting enough, something to talk about, to wonder at, perhaps, but pretty far away from that most important spot and the people who live there . . . your own home.

That's where your heart is, and that's where the real thrills lie, in the things that concern you and the people who live around you, next door, in the next block, anywhere in town. There's news about them in every issue of the daily Ontario Intelligencer in "inside page" stories—and in every ad too, for the ads in the Ontario Intelligencer are news! There's news about new clothes for the family, and new food for the table, and new furniture for the home. There's news about new entertainment, and new ways to get to it. There's news about something new on every page, from the latest dispatch on the front page to the new shoes for Anne on the last . . . all written to you and for you, put up in a neat package and delivered at your door-step every day.

THE WEATHER
Cloudy and somewhat colder tonight and Tuesday; probably some light showers or snowflurries; moderate to fresh southwest to northwest winds today, becoming fresh northerly on Tuesday.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, MONDAY, APRIL 20, 1936

EXPECT RESCUE TWO WITHIN HOUR; MAGILL DEAD

Rescuers Work in Place of Danger Constantly Listen for Sound of Shifting; Few Feet of Rock Still Imprisons Two

Fears of Miners They Had Drifted Past Level Unfounded

PROGRESS IS SLOW

No Food Reaches Men in Rocky Refuge Today

Moose River, N.S., April 20 (CP)—Conversation was established again this afternoon between rescue workers and two men entombed in the Moose River Gold Mine.

Moose River, N.S., April 20 (CP)—"I am very encouraged by reports from below," Provincial Mines Inspector J. P. Mooreroy said today at 10 a.m. (Atlantic standard time) through which darting miners hope to pierce a way to the underground cell of Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding of Toronto.

Tapping the walls at the danger-zone approach, the rescuers found they had not strayed from the shaft and hoped to reach the two survivors of the trio who were trapped nearly eight days ago. Fireman R. Magill died before daybreak today.

Working Shifts

The miners were not sure how much further they had to go before reaching the Meagher shaft because to the 141-foot level where the men have been since the night gas.

Man had been advised, to keep away from the Reynolds's shaft because it was thought it might crumble at any moment.

Reports from through a diamond drill hole that the mine was fumigated and that Magill had died from exposure in the pit around the men, however, and they feared the safety in the shaft before dawn.

Men Work Shifts

Twenty men are working now in the hope they may be relieved before the supervision difficulties. They are bruised and battered from their work for signs that might indicate the mine is caving in.

As four hour shifts they are scooping out the unmapped, unpropped shaft. Some insist on staying below all the time. They form a human chain to pass the rock and earth up by four trained leaders from hand to hand. They have to see supports as they advance.

No Food Early Today.

From the surface dozens are worried because the men have not been able to get food from the diamond drill hole. They have not eaten since last night and before yesterday they had only a cup of tea for two days.

Rushing water is believed to be preventing the couple from using the rubber hose through which liquids have been passed.

Food was sent down to them this morning but they were not reached.

Doctors Anxious

Dr. H. E. MacDermot said that if they were not rescued within an hour a whistle would be blown to signal down the hole to signal them to put mouth and he would insist they make positive efforts to get out or some food that would then be sent down.

A Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps ambulance hurried here this afternoon ready to take the men to hospital if they are rescued.

Other equipment is arriving steadily by road and airplane from Halifax.

Minister of Mines Michael Dwyer and Inspector J. P. Mooreroy, F. B. Davis were at the scene.

Minister Dwyer Said:

Minister of Mines Michael Dwyer donned miner's equipment today and lowered himself into the dangerous Reynolds's shaft through which rescuers are attempting to reach two men in the flooding 141-foot level of the Moose River Gold Mine.

He did not intend to join the rescuers in their work, but he wished to see conditions for himself so they were progressing.

A colleague, Inspector F. B. Davis, Minister of Health, was on the surface preparing to direct an emergency medical squad awaiting the come of the rescue.

By RAY S. MORTON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Moose River, N.S., April 20 (CP)—Rescue workers were given another half-day to-day, a.m. Atlantic, to complete a passage to the 141-foot level of the Moose River Gold Mine where two men are still alive after being buried there since Easter Sunday morning.

Dr. D. E. Robertson said he and Alfred Scadding, trapped nearly 8 days ago with Herman Magill, could "hold out."

But hunger and exposure in the dark depths of the mine had killed Magill, 42, father of 11 children.

Word of his death was relayed up a tube early this morning.

"Our men must struggle through to us for 10 or 12 hours or longer," Dr. Robertson told his wife through the tube. "We can hold out."

Digging like mad, a crew of rescuers expected to reach them in the early afternoon. But the task is dangerous and Reynold's shaft, where the men are trapped, is so unsteady pit propers were unable to go down the shaft.

Frantic cries "the mine is flooding" echoed from them early this morning but "not before" the men left Reynold's shaft. They have survived on chocolate and tea.

Evidently the water was advancing. Dr. Robertson had stood slowly on the Dr. Robertson and Alfred Scadding men. Some dug holes behind where they are waiting for the rescuers. (Conclusion on page two)

Further story of rescue efforts appears on Page 16.

PLANE STANDS BY FOR RESCUE WORK

Toronto, April 20 (CP)—Pilot Joseph Leavens headed for Montreal at 12:55 p.m. today in the Ontario provincial police plane. The machine will stand by at the Quebec metropolis until word is received from Moose River, N.S., to aid in rescue work of the entombed miners there.

The plane reached Toronto earlier from Rouyn, Que. Marie Premier Hepburn arrived by the plane to go on to Montreal pending further developments in the situation at the Moose River Mine. At Toronto the pilot refused to allow reporters to use scrouted microphone that can be lowered into the mine.

DRAMA FINALS WILL OPEN TONIGHT

Ottawa, April 20—(CP)—Dress rehearsals in the Dominion Drama Festival were held in Ottawa and Montreal this afternoon ready to take the men to hospital if they are rescued.

Other equipment is arriving steadily by road and airplane from Halifax.

Minister of Mines Michael Dwyer donned miner's equipment today and lowered himself into the dangerous Reynolds's shaft through which rescuers are attempting to reach two men in the flooding 141-foot level of the Moose River Gold Mine.

He did not intend to join the rescuers in their work, but he wished to see conditions for himself so they were progressing.

A colleague, Inspector F. B. Davis, Minister of Health, was on the surface preparing to direct an emergency medical squad awaiting the come of the rescue.

Moose River, N.S., April 20 (CP)—Rescue workers were given another half-day to-day, a.m. Atlantic, to complete a passage to the 141-foot level of the Moose River Gold Mine where two men are still alive after being buried there since Easter Sunday morning.

Dr. D. E. Robertson said he and Alfred Scadding, trapped nearly 8 days ago with Herman Magill, could "hold out."

But hunger and exposure in the dark depths of the mine had killed Magill, 42, father of 11 children.

Word of his death was relayed up a tube early this morning.

"Our men must struggle through to us for 10 or 12 hours or longer," Dr. Robertson told his wife through the tube.

"We can hold out."

Digging like mad, a crew of rescuers expected to reach them in the early afternoon. But the task is dangerous and Reynold's shaft, where the men are trapped, is so unsteady pit propers were unable to go down the shaft.

Frantic cries "the mine is flooding" echoed from them early this morning but "not before" the men left Reynold's shaft. They have survived on chocolate and tea.

Evidently the water was advancing. Dr. Robertson had stood slowly on the Dr. Robertson and Alfred Scadding men. Some dug holes behind where they are waiting for the rescuers. (Conclusion on page two)

Further story of rescue efforts appears on Page 16.

Moose River Mine Rock Shifty, Dangerous, Says Barton Reddick

"The biggest danger to miners working for the recovery of the trapped men in the Moose River Mine will be water and the shifting properties of the rock itself that is natural to that ground," stated Mr. Barton A. Reddick of this city, who held the position of manager of the Hamilton Gold Mines, which at one time recorded the richest ore bodies and location where the imprisoned men now lie.

Manager during the years 1931 to 1933, Mr. Reddick is thoroughly conversant with the shafts in one of which the trapped men are now held.

"The rock down there is of a peculiar character," he said. "It's a bit slaty and trap rock with the quartz veins running. The gold is scattered through the slate. That's the reason why the tunnels have been calculated as fast as they have been dug. One other danger is the presence of water in large portions of the mine. The Moose River runs through the property and there is a constant seepage. When I heard that the miners had broken down there I thought that drowning would be the chief worry.

"The history of that territory and dick.

those mines down there is very ancient. The property was first discovered and worked as "old Frenchman. Just now, John Reynolds, one of the best mining men in that section, knows more about the Moose River mine than anyone else, I guess. If he can't trace them and conduct rescue operations, no one can down there can.

The mine, according to Mr. Reddick has been particularly productive in the past. At one time one 400-ounce nugget was taken from the mine. Other heavy nuggets are found from time to time.

Rescuers at present working there are faced with peculiar problems not found in the general run of Ontario mines. The loose properties of the rock precludes the possibility of straight digging, while the various shafts that run in all directions also from the main shafts present other dangerous problems.

"I've been down in that mine a good many times and know it quite well. It's a good mine, but in my opinion the proper method there is one constant seepage. When I heard that the miners had broken down there I thought that drowning would be the chief worry.

"The history of that territory and dick.

TWO YEAR CHILD BADLY INJURED AT TILLSONBURG

STRUCK IN LANE

Baker's Truck Driver Does Not Know of Accident at Time

Tillsonburg, Ont., April 20 (CP)—Peter Vanderberg, 2, is in hospital here in critical condition as result of being struck by a baker's delivery truck. Lorne Wilson, driver of the truck, was unaware he had hit anybody until questioned about it by neighbors.

The child, son of P. Vanderberg, tobacco grower, four miles east of Strathroy, had been asking for cookies just bought from the driver.

Both Wilson and the mother thought he had run into the garage as the truck backed out of the farm lane it struck the child's head. It suffered severe concussion and possible other injuries.

ELLISON BROWN INDIAN RUNNER AHEAD OF FIELD

At 19 Mile Mark More Than Three Minutes Ahead of Record

1933 WINNER OUT

Many Leave Race Through Heat And Stomach Troubles

Boston, April 20 (AP) — Ellison (Tarzan) Brown, full-blooded Narragansett Indian, won the 40th annual Boston A. A. marathon today from Hopkinton to Boston.

Boston, April 20 (AP) — Ellison (Tarzan) Brown, Narragansett Indian, running under the colors of the Tercentenary A. C., Providence, R. I., crossed the finish line in the Boston A. A. marathon course record today, as he swung past the half-way mark and started over the last lap, defeating Newton Ellis on the B. A. A. Stophinton to Kenmore Square.

The swarthy Indian lad, who has been living in Providence, R. I., since near his home, seemed tireless. He ran easily with a natural gait, his arms moving in perfect well-like precision.

His time at Auburndale, 19.3 miles along the 26 miles, 385 yards route, was 1 hour, 31 minutes, 40 1-10 seconds, almost three minutes ahead of the record set in 1932.

Nearly half a mile behind, but coming along smoothly was Johnny Kelley, Arlington, Mass., runner who won the 1935 marathon and was a favorite in today's 40th running of the big event.

Paul Pavson of Portsmouth, N. H., 1933 winner of the B.A.A. marathon, dropped out outside of Wellesley and was brought his mate, Hagerstown, Md., "on top."

Albert R. "Whitey" Mobilson of the Millrose A. A. A. A. accompanied to stomach trouble in the early stages of the race.

Three hours after Johnny Kelley was William P. McMahon of the Worcester Boys' Club, Worcester, Mass., and several hundred yards farther back a group was unchanged together.

Both Brown and Kelley were clocked at the mark at Lake Cochituate, 43 seconds, almost four minutes better than the record, and Kelley was right on the Indian's heels about 20 seconds behind.

RECALL DISASTER AT FRANK, ALTA.

Turtle Mountain Collapse of 33 Years Ago Took Many Lives

Ottawa, April 20 (CP)—A mine entombment—where 17 men constituted the "rescue party"—and a mighty chunk of Turtle Mountain toppled on the town of Frank, Alta. 33 years ago, was recalled today as the nation watched intently the battle to rescue entombed men at Moose River, N.S.

Those men were entombed in a coal mine by the slide that killed 70 persons and left a huge gash near the mine entrance instantaneously April 29, 1903, wiped out part of the town of Frank, burying alive 14 miles east of the Continental Divide and creating an agricultural death toll of 70 residents.

A blast of air rushed into the tunnel, knocked the men from their feet and sealed the main entrance. They did not escape till 13 hours later.

The miners tried to leave the mine by a lower tunnel but it was blocked by water. They finally escaped by digging an upward passage.

A mighty rock formation estimated to weigh 90,000,000 tons spread over the valley and extended 150 feet up the mountain side. Covered were seven cottages, two ranches, one and one-half miles of railway track and mine property.

The Canadian Royal Commission investigation the town was moved up the valley and the mine's production was affected section was stopped in 1918 by government order.

National Mobilization Of Italian Fascists Seen

Geneva Edes Attacks Britain's Alleged Use of Poison Gas by Italians—Italian Diplomat Spiritedly Replies in Exoneration as Retaliation For Atrocities

Rome, April 20 (AP) — Orders went out today to all Fascists at home and abroad to hold themselves in readiness for what was believed to be a national mobilization.

The great general meeting would be the climax of that which marked the beginning of the Italo-Ethiopian war and an authoritative source indicated the new mobilization would mark the entrance of Italy into the war on Ethiopia.

Poison Gas Use Attached.

Geneva, April 20 (AP)—Anthony Eden, British Foreign Secretary, bluntly attacked Italy's alleged use of poison gas today after Premier Mussolini had informed the League of Nations Council that the Fascist nation demanded virtually all of Ethiopia as the price for peace.

Eden declared the question of the use of gas "cannot be passed over in silence."

He spoke in direct answer to Baron Pompeo Aloisi, Premier Mussolini's envoy, who declared the anti-gas treaty of 1925 "does not prohibit the right of reprisals against atrocities such as our troops have suffered."

Strong Statements Issued.

The speeches by the two diplomats both contained strong statements.

Aloisi attacked the Ethiopian delegation vehemently, accusing the members of having decided even before they reached Geneva to refuse to negotiate for peace.

"Under these circumstances," exclaimed Aloisi, "I wonder why I have been invited here?"

After the Italian diplomat had finished, Eden declared: "Not only the two belligerents, but nearly all the signatories of the world are parties to the anti-gas protocol of 1925.

"My views can carry no weight unless anywhere on the earth's surface which is not interested in its observance. This protocol concerns the inhabitants of every great city

Alfred Minaker Leads Wife and Aged Parents From Burning Building

Thousands of Dollars Loss as Landmark is Destroyed

POLICE DOG PERISHES

United Church Parsonage Roof Takes Fire From Sparks

Trenton, April 20 (Special)—When Alfred Minaker left his general store and residence at Smithfield were completely destroyed by fire which was discovered about four o'clock this morning, he and his son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Minaker had a narrow escape as they went out to safety from the burning home of the dwelling by Mr. Minaker. On the discovery of the blaze by the occupants the fire had gained great headway and no time was lost in getting Mr. Minaker and the rescue of his wife and parents. Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Minaker, Sr., who are aged 81 and 86 years and who recently celebrated their 60th anniversary of their wedding are suffering from shock and are staying at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Minaker of the same village.

When the large structure and the contents of the shop were destroyed, the old brick outside flue was about five o'clock.

Passage Made Above

Flames were carried by embers to the roof of the United Church parsonage which took fire and the three occupants, Rev. H. E. Spencer had to vacate with his family and remove furniture. The manse is situated on the place who formed a bucket brigade and succeeded in putting the fire in the roof. The damage was slight.

Mr. Minaker's thoroughbred police dog "King" perished in the flames. "He was a pet of him," Mr. Minaker told a reporter, "and I saw him crawling off into the coal oil department never to return."

The loss will approximate, it is estimated, ten thousand dollars.

Mr. Minaker had placed on Saturday night the business proceeds of the business of the last part of the week. The amount of this was not damaged is not known. He had a few days ago taken to the bank the proceeds of the sale which were all burned.

The well known landmark on the north side of the highway at the eastern entrance of Smithfield has long been in the possession of Mr. Minaker who has carried on business there for a good.

Sons Place Dead.

When the cry was awakened this morning by smoke or the sound of crackling he had just got to the door of the shop. As he saw the other portion of the building filled with flames and heard and realized the sound of fire crackling. Realizing that there was nothing to be done as the property was doomed he went to the bedrooms and led out through the smoke filled hall the members of the family. The paint and oil stored under the dwelling quarters near the rear of the store.

Blankets Dropped From Seaplane

Moose River, N.S., April 20 (CP)—A supply of blankets and hot water bottles was dropped by a Royal Canadian Air Force seaplane from Halifax here today.

The supply was taken to the Moose River Gold Mines office, where two men will be taken immediately rescuers reach them in their flooding underground prison.

The bullet entered the boy's left cheek and was removed by a physician at the hospital in the neck. It is expected the youth widely known as a boy soprano singer will recover.

CHILD KILLED BY COAL GAS

St. Catharines, Ont., April 20—Kathleen Ann Hamilton, aged 18, was killed and her mother and stepfather were rendered unconscious for 36 hours when their home was filled with coal gas Saturday night.

Mr. Daniel Hunton, the step-father, said today that the last thing he remembered was hearing the gas hissing. He regained consciousness Saturday night and gave the alarm. Mrs. Hunton regained consciousness as of reviving at midnight last night.

DR. ROBERTSON IS WONDERFUL SAYS GIRL HERE

Miss Marjorie McGuire Follows Rescue Story Intently

Following with particular interest the story of the rescue of the miners now entombed in the Moose River Gold Mine is Miss Marjorie McGuire, 28 Brock Street. Miss McGuire was treated by Dr. Dr. D. E. Robertson for a short time when undergoing treatment for infantile paralysis at the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto where she was sent by the Belleville Rotary Club.

After an operation and three months spent in a wheel chair at home, Miss McGuire returned to Toronto where the cast was removed by Dr. Robertson.

"He is a wonderful doctor" said Miss McGuire, commenting on his cheerful disposition and encouraging manner. "He was very jolly and joked with me about the good time I would have when I was better."

Dr. D. E. Robertson, Toronto physician who is one of the trapped trio in the Moose River mine, was highly commended for leading frantic efforts to save, is well known to several local reformed men's clubs and former members of the First Battalion.

During the war Dr. Robertson served as Medical Officer with this Battalion.

He is described by local ex-members who know him as "One of the brave, modest and most courageous soldiers in the Canadian Forces."

NEED MORE LAND FOR GARDEN PLOTS

With registration of names for the work now proceeding at the city hall, the need for more acreage of vacant land for the use of unemployed persons has been demonstrated by Mayor Harry Hill today.

"From all indications so far it looks as if we will have to depend largely upon city-owned land for this purpose. A lot of it isn't at all suitable for this work," either," added the Mayor.

Donations of land may be made at the office of the city engineer at any time that farmers are invited.

BAND CONCERT AT THEATRE ENJOYED

On a specially constructed stage erected by city workers during the afternoon, the Belleville and Trenville Municipal Band presented another of their successful civic enlightened concerts before a large crowd in the Belle Theatre on Tuesday evening. The lengthy and pleasing program of old fashioned and modern music was directed by Bandmaster Lieut. Fred Jennett, and was enjoyed by the capacity audience given by Mr. Clare Parkinson, assisted by Prof. Morgan on the piano.

During the evening silver cigarette lighters were taken by members of the city council, who also acted as ushers.

Today a note of appreciation was received by Manager Hill in the Belland, Mr. Edgar Rutherford for his donation as part of the stage as well as the Mosaics Company, the local Hydro office for the donation of special lighting effects and to Manager Geo. Forman and staff of the Belle Theatre.

LITTLE BOY WAILS 'HAD NO BREAKFAST'

"I didn't have any breakfast and I'm hungry," sobbed a 13-year-old boy, who carefully approached P. C. Evans on Front Street early today. "Where's your mother?" asked the kindly policeman. The little boy wiped the policeman.

"Why didn't you have any breakfast?" the officer asked.

"My mother went to church without anything to eat and I'm hungry," the boy replied. Then as he broke out crying again, P. C. Evans then escorted him to the police station.

The matter was reported to the Children's Aid Society and the little boy was sent home, after he had promised "to be good."

ONE FIRE ALARM OVER THE WEEKEND

Just one fire alarm was registered by the local department over the week end, when at 8.45 o'clock on the corner of Queen and Albert street shortly after six o'clock on Sunday evening, when a car was hoisted above pipes and chimney. No damage was reported.

LOSES PURSE RESTING IN WRONG CAR

After resting for a short period in what she believed to be a friend's automobile, Mrs. A. T. Fleming Trenton resumed her shopping tour in Belleville on Saturday afternoon, but soon discovered she had lost or misplaced her purse. Hurrying back to her friend's automobile, whom she had rested, Mrs. Fleming was faced with the problem of identifying her friend's automobile. Local police authorities were summoned and although all automobiles in the vicinity of Front and Bridge were checked, the lady could not be identified. The purse was finally found in the wrong car.

"Why didn't you have any breakfast?" the officer asked.

"My mother went to church without anything to eat and I'm hungry," the boy replied. Then as he broke out crying again, P. C. Evans then escorted him to the police station.

FATHER J.M. FOX VISITS PARISH

Comes to Belleville Owing to Illness of Father O'Brien

An interesting visitor in the city this week is Rev. J. M. Fox, S. J., of Montreal, Quebec, Connecticut, who is in Belleville, owing to the illness of Rev. Chas. O'Brien, S.J.

Father Fox is a native of Boston, Mass., and is the outstanding member of the Jesuit Order. He is well known especially in the New England States, where his work has chiefly lain. For some years he was rector at Holy Cross College, Worcester, later being transferred to St. Robert's Hall, Pontiac, Conn., and at present is superior of the Jesuit Novitiate there.

This is Father Fox's first visit to this part of the country and he was much impressed by the beauty of the City of Belleville. Today he visited St. Michael's Academy and was very pleased with the work being done in that institution. Father Fox addressed the pupils of the High School on the necessity of preserving well their Holy Patron Saint and gave a very informative discourse on the necessity of work as a preparation for life.

CHOIR MEMBERS CHURCH ROBBED

St. Andrews Church Entered And James Munroe Held For Offence

James Munroe, 35 South Front St., appeared in local police court here before Magistrate F. J. Butler, K.C., today, charged with breaking and entering St. Andrew's Church and stealing four purses, containing a total of $5, dollars during the progress of the service last night. Munroe was not asked to plead, his case being remanded for one week.

Munroe was taken into custody by Chief Kidd in the vicinity of St. Andrew's Church, when he was unable to give a good account of himself. police authorities stated today. His arrest came following the complaints from Elmyth Sexton, choir, who found a window broken, that smoke into the women's cloak room at the rear of the church. He was arrested Munroe denied knowledge of the robbery, adding that he had heard the breaking of glass as he was passing by and had stopped to investigate.

Munroe was gained by breaking a window leading into the cloak room, later the ladder was placed against the building and the robbers climbed through the window. Search took five women's purses, containing six dollars in all. The purses were found at the rear of the church, one being covered with ashes, which led the police to believe, that one of the purses had apparently cut himself on the glass in the window, as there was also found no cut nor blood on Munroe.

Munroe informed the police he had met Deputy Turnkey Archie Simpson in the Court House at approximately 7.30 p.m. last night. Winters later substantiated this with the statement that Munroe informed of the break-in he was about to leave the church, after attending service. It was while investigating the robbery, that Chief Kidd arrested Munroe at approximately ten minutes after eight, Winters stated in giving his evidence case. "I heard the breaking of glass as I was passing and stopped to ascertain, what had happened. I then informed the accused he was taken into custody," added Munroe told Chief Kidd. The accused man for questioning as to his alleged inability to explain his presence in the church after 7.30 Winters until after eight o'clock.

PILGRIMS OPENED REVIVAL SERVICE

O'Neill And Marshall to be Present in City For Two Weeks

Pilgrim's O'Neill and Marshall of the Faith Mission Pilgrims of Great Britain, Ireland and Canada have come to Belleville to conduct a series of Revival Meetings at the Alliance Gospel Tabernacle, lasting for a period of two weeks or more.

Already these fine young men have won a warm spot in the hearts of the Tabernacle friends, as evidenced by the fine spirit in and large attendance at all services yesterday.

The regular Sunday morning service of worship, conducted by the pastor, Rev. Guy A. Stoner, was of a most inspiring and challenging nature. Pilgrim J. O'Neill gave a very tender yet heart searching message on "Revival". The text of the message was 2 Chronicles 7.14, "If My people which are called by My name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek My face, and turn from their wicked ways, then will I hear from Heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land."

The afternoon service was conducted entirely by the Pilgrims, at which time Mr. Marshall, who has just recently returned from Scotland, where he has been in training, gave a touching message, using as his text, the words of Paul found in Galatians 2.20, "But Christ liveth in me." A number remained after the service to pray and fast through the supper hour until time for the evening service, which proved to be a time of real blessing. The Tabernacle filled almost to capacity, presented a most hopeful and happy Pilgrim Marshall in his own unique manner conducted a very uplifting song service. The message of the evening as given by Pilgrim O'Neill was devoted chiefly to the unsaved. the preacher choosing as his text, Romans 1116, "For I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto Salvation, to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek."

Couldn't Bear Pain of Headaches

Doctor advised Fruit-a-tives. Has never had a minute's trouble since.

"I was bothered with headaches so severe that at times the pain was more than I could bear. My doctor advised me to take Fruit-a-tives. Since I took them I have not had a minute's trouble with headaches."—Mr. Henry Dawson, Toronto.

Like Mr. Dawson, thousands have got relief from headaches, constipation, stomach troubles and similar ills. Fruit-a-tives are a famous doctor's discovery. They contain extracts of fruits and herbs. They tend to restore normal healthy action of all elimination organs. Their tonic effects help bring new energy and health.

POLICE BLOTTER

Mr. C. Cornell, 76 Front St. complained to the police of the theft of his little son's play wagon over the week end. The child's property was later found abandoned some distance from the Cornell home and returned to its owner.

A total of 16 transients were given lodging at the police station over the week end, seven on Saturday night and nine on Sunday during the register at the night sergeant's desk.

Local and Provincial Police today were searching the vicinity of the Canadian National Right-of-way in quest of two transients, who were alleged to have broken into a C.N.R. caboose in the local yards and attempted to steal a workman's lunch bucket. The pair were disturbed by workmen, but escaped. One was described as a tall man wearing a dark top coat while the other was much shorter and wore a dark colored top coat. The authorities searched the surrounding "jungles" for men answering these descriptions.

Two men giving their names as James Bulpit and Charles W. Oldham, both transients, were arrested on charges of vagrancy by Provincial Constable Wm. McIntyre last night. Both men fully answered the descriptions of the two men seen trying to break into the C.N.R. caboose, but did not tally with the description of the automobile thieves from Brockville. They denied knowledge of the stolen cars and also denied stealing the lunch box reported missing from the railway caboose. They are being held for vagrancy pending the results of investigations. Investigations are being followed.

STOLEN CAR FOUND AT SHANNONVILLE

Three Cars in All Allegedly Taken by Missing Youth

Following an all night search for two youthful automobile thieves at Shannonville, early last night was found abandoned in a field near Shannonville at 1.30 a.m. today by Traffic Officer Sam Irvine. The recovery of the vehicle climaxed an all-night search by Provincial Police following the stealing of three automobiles at Prescott and Brockville, all allegedly taken by the two men, described as wearing grey top coats and being about 21 years of age.

According to stories given out by Inspector Frank Gardner today, the pair first stole an automobile at Prescott, which they allegedly drove it four miles out of that town, when it stalled. Later they procured a lift from a passing motorist, Mr. William Beresford of Prescott, who drove them a little further on, not knowing they were car thieves. When last seen they parked his car near a Prescott restaurant the pair allegedly stole it and drove to Brockville, where they stole a Chevrolet coach bearing license plate No. 910, which being the car found abandoned west of Shannonville.

Although a police cordon had been thrown over Eastern Ontario and Western Quebec overnight, the pair successfully got past Shannonville with the stolen car, only to come a cropper while driving crashed over a deep ditch and through a wire fence into a nearby field, where they were found by abandoned it.

Shortly after noon today two men broke and entered a caboose in the east end yard of the Canadian National Railways at Belleville and succeeded to steal a workman's lunch pail, containing their dinner. The act by railway workmen, who gave chase. Later local and Provincial Police were notified to be on the look with the automobile thieves, but they had disappeared. Officials of the railway workmen as well as the police as an early hour this afternoon. Police from the Provincial Detectives were informed of the two incidents and a close check on all transients and suspicious persons has been ordered.

RESCUERS WORK IN WAY OF DANGER

cuers to reach them.

Phones Through Drill Hole

Mrs. Kelly was able to use telephones of the one-way telephone that was let down a diamond drill hole to help the prisoners converse their strength.

"Good," was shouted back down the hole. "We're coming. We'll be there."

"We are all right,' the doctor answered below.

The microphone was lowered carefully down the hole. Rescuers procured it and began talking to the surface.

"Do you hear us well?" he was asked.

"Yes," he said.

"How is Charlie?" Dr. Robertson asked, referring to the fifteen-year-old "Charlie" is C. H. Ivey of London, Ont., Dr. Robertson's brother-in-law.

Sound of Water

"It is difficult to hear you in this shaft because there is so much water running in the drill and it is very cold," they asked.

"We are having difficulty in keeping warm because our clothes are sore, tired and wet. If you want to help us please give us a shot down the tube."

Previously rescuers had warned rescuers against blasting because they could hear the sound.

"It will be difficult to blast now if you blow the steam whistle first."

Mrs. Robertson then asked the rescuers to blast with the greatest caution because she thought they were exhausted themselves from their work.

Moose River, N.S. April 30 (CP)—Mrs. Herman S. Magill began her sorrowful journey to her home Canada this afternoon, accompanied by a friend, Mrs. Mc. White.

Numbed by a week's anxiety while rescuers attempted to rescue Magill and two other men trapped in an old mine, she said goodbye to her friends here with tears in her eyes before being informed of her husband's death.

It was Mrs. D. E. Robertson, whose husband is still down with the flooding mine, who gently broke the sad news to her friend.

It was a stunning blow to the quiet, reserved woman, coming only a few hours after efforts were buoyed by speaking to "Herm" for the first time since the cave-in. Before that she had given up hope of ever seeing her husband alive.

Her two daughters, Patricia 9, and Vivienne Arlene, 3, are waiting for her return to Toronto, not knowing of the death of their father.

London, April 30 (CP)— Great Britain's people today followed the plight of the entombed men in a Nova Scotia mine, N.S., mine with intense and sympathetic interest.

London evening newspapers all devoted columns to the story and carried news dispatches running as long as a couple of columns. Some was laid upon the devoted and untiring efforts at rescue of the two surviving men and the body of their companion.

Feud for Workers

Toronto, April 30 (CP)— With an initial contribution of $1,000 by Rycroft New, promotion Toronto sportsman, a fund for the workers who risked their lives in efforts to free the three entombed Toronto men at Moose River, N.S., has been launched here.

The fund will assure these fine workers of some tangible recognition of their work.

HOLSTEIN BREED HAS GREAT FUTURE SAYS DR. BARTON

Dairying Most Important Phase of Agriculture Breeders Told

Picton, April 20 (Special)—... In addressing the Prince Edward County Holstein Breeders at their annual banquet on Thursday evening, April 16th, Dr. H. Barton, Deputy Minister, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, mentioned the important part played by Holstein Breeders of Prince Edward County in number of years ago. He stated, that in spite of the many difficult and trying times in which it had passed, the Holstein breed had made rapid advancement. He felt the future was hard to predict but felt sure, that the Holstein breed had a great future ahead in Canada, due to the fact that dairying is one of the most important phases of agriculture in this country. He did not feel that there was much opportunity of the business being overdone and stated the breeders present to remember that there is always room at the top.

Continuing he felt that there are three types of breeders. The first are those which might be termed paper breeders. These are those, who lay considerable value on their registration papers only because they are useful in having to sell their cattle particularly to American buyers as registered cattle over United States duty free, and also useful in collecting compensation in the case of re-actors. These breeders are of little value to the breed.

The second group, which is not nearly so prominent are the large breeders with a great deal of capital invested, who make a good business of breeding, exhibiting and selling. Due to the many large overhead and investment only a few are in this class.

The third and most important class are those which might be termed the backbone of the business. These are the small breeders who take first class care of their cattle, use intelligence in selecting and culling and improve their own herd in record of performance.

The speaker felt that there was more in this class today than ever before.

Services Outlined

Dr. Barton outlined the service of the Dominion Department of Agriculture briefly and more particularly to the work of the record of performance. He also told of the advancement made with the cheese industry since grading regulations had been adopted. He told of how T.B. test starting in Prince Edward as pioneers in this work. He told that if the county could clean up Bang's disease in the same manner, that it would be worth a great deal.

Another disease, which he felt would bear watching is mammitis or garget and told of the stringent regulations being used in some districts to clear it up.

In closing he paid tribute to the Holstein breeders in the advancement they had made from a very small beginning fifty years ago. He felt that the Holstein has a great future ahead.

Mr. George Clemons, Secretary of the Holstein-Friesian Association, Brantford, was unable to be present. Among those delivering addresses were R. M. Hobby of Brantford, Fieldman of the Association; S. P. Dodds, President of the local organization; F. J. Wheaver, Secretary and Thomas Bowerman M.P.P., for Prince Edward-Lennox. Musical numbers interspersed the programme. The banquet served by the Ladies' Guild of St. Mary Magdalene's Church was much enjoyed by the one hundred members of the association and their friends who were present.

COURT DECISION FAVORS KELLOGG'S

$25,000 Action Over "Shredded Wheat" Trade Words Dismissed

Toronto—Justice C. P. McTague dismissed an action at Osgoode Hall a few days ago, in which the Canadian Shredded Wheat Co., Ltd., Niagara Falls, claimed $25,000 from the Kellogg Company of Canada, Ltd., and Solomon Blasin, Toronto, merchant, for alleged infringement of its registered trade marks.

The Canadian Shredded Wheat Co., Ltd., alleged that the Kellogg Company of Canada, Ltd., used the words "shredded wheat" and "shredded whole wheat biscuits" in connection with the sale of biscuits when they had had the words registered. The judgment delivered by Justice McTague was that such words "are common words, merely descriptive and have not acquired a secondary meaning in such manner as to give the plaintiff the rights sought."

"To require the defendant to change the form of its biscuits and to adopt such individual biscuit," Justice McTague said, "would be to impose an obligation too doubtful as to cost and would go too great a distance in assuring the plaintiff of such continuance of the monopoly which it could further enjoy by patent or trade marks."

The Kellogg Company manufactures Kellogg's Corn Flakes, the original Corn Flakes, Kellogg's All-Bran, Kellogg's Pep Bran Flakes, Kellogg's Rice Krispies, Kellogg's Krumbled Krispies, Kellogg's Whole Wheat Flakes, Kellogg's Kaffee-Hag Coffee. Kellogg's products are sold by all grocers and general merchants in every city, town, village and hamlet in Canada.

MARTIAL LAW AGAINST ALIENS

Trinidad, Colo., April 20 (AP)— Armed with pistols and clubs, a detachment of Colorado National Guardsmen set out today to enforce Gov. W. C. Johnson's edict of martial law against indigent and alien laborers crossing the southern border of the state.

The Governor said he would order additional guardsmen stationed along the other borders if the undesirables still sought entrance to Colorado.

NEW DEFENCES TO RAISE TAXES

Chancellor Will Reveal Budget to Commons on Tuesday

By THOMAS T. CHAMPION
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, April 20.—(CP Cable)— At today's cabinet meeting Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, will reveal to Ministers the secrets of the budget to be presented in the House of Commons tomorrow.

The general anticipation is that the taxpayer will be lucky if he escapes an increase in the income tax on the existing standard rate of four shillings and sixpence in the pound.

Mr. Chamberlain has to find roughly £30,000,000 (about $150,000,000) of new money, mainly on account of the increased defence program, the exact figures being unavailable. All that is known yet is that the air force is to cost an extra £10,000,000. To this provision must be added substantial subsidies for farming, shipping and other industrial interests.

His expectations of the future yield of taxation may give Mr. Chamberlain grounds for confidence, for the rise in employment naturally suggests more spending power by the public on taxable articles, also an increase in income tax payments.

Montreal Youths Held For Bicycle Thefts

Two Montreal youths giving their names as Rimmud Saunders, 19, of 1553 St. Antoine St., and Roy Palmer, 20, of 6861 St. Dominique Ave., were held in Belleville on Saturday afternoon in possession of a stolen bicycle. The youths were taken to the police station and after questioning by Provincial Constable Fred Beard, who investigated, the youths were held in custody pending further investigations.

Police authorities today were in communication with Ottawa police, where it is believed, that Palmer and Saunders stole two bicycles some two weeks ago. When apprehended in Belleville the youths were in possession of a new C.C.M. bicycle. Their apprehension followed a report that the youths were endeavoring to sell a bicycle at a ridiculously low figure. The youths will be taken back to Ottawa.

MOOSE RIVER MINE EPIC OF HEROISM

Human interest dominated the news of the weekend as the remarkable story of the contest established with the three men entombed in the Moose River Gold Mines in Nova Scotia came to the attention of the millions who have watched for news for a week. The appeal was the heroism within the mine where Dr. Robertson was doubtless the guiding hand who kept the three men inside the mine alive for over a week, and without the mine where men endangered their limbs and lives in the rescue drives to reach them.

Such a story is only possible in a day with science playing the greatest part. Without science the story would not have become generally known for many hours, but with the telegraph and the radio the news of the rescue was spread broadcast. It was science which sent down the pipe line which brought the contact from the earth above down to the 141 foot level of the mine where the three men were living without food.

Such stories increase man's faith in mankind. Down there at the mine everywhere the thought of cost did not enter into relief effort. Aid has been given by individuals, by mining corporations such as the Molntyre Mine, the governments of Nova Scotia and Ontario and other provinces. There was one thought, the rescue of those men. Such a thought was expressed in the prayers in the churches Sunday for the ultimate recovery of the men from their cavern far beneath the earth.

There are some great theme stories of all the ages and one of the most enthralling of these is the recovery of lost ones. That universal theme which has written more folk songs, more dramas and more novels than any other theme, even the overexcelled sex theme, was the theme which has been appealing to the minds of men and women and children of the North American continent for more than a week. Man in his fight against the powers of nature and the restoration of lost ones to their families are some of the themes which strike universal comment, because after all humanity is all in all. There is such a bond of human sympathy for a brother human of whatever race and color. The safety of a man in distress is a heartfelt theme.

The news of the death of Magill, one of the trio who spanned the joy of the rescue and the continentwide interest in the event. The pathetic figure of the family of Magill with their hopes raised and later allowed to sink by the news of his death is one which distresses man and woman.

Now as the miners are driving down into the earth to remove the last barrier which is holding the survivors, there will be many a prayer offered that they be reached before it is too late. Out of the rocky gorge, however say Monday morning comes the heroic voice of Dr. Robertson, that there is no need to hurry as long as recovery were to come in ten or twelve hours from that time. In the meantime Calm and facing facts the cool-headed doctor is writing an epic of bravery and unselfishness which will live long in the history of mines.

SEEN IN RUSSIA

Edmund Wilson, a prominent member of the New Republic group of writers, spent six weeks with scarlet fever in an Odessa hospital last year. From this attack he seems to have happily recovered, if one may judge by the grace and vigor of his account in The New Yorker. The only exception would be a few blind spots in the reading faculty. And even here it is hard to say whether in Mr. Wilson's case it is the scarletina or a touch of that familiar logical debility which seizes on so many people in the presence of Soviet Russia.

In that Odessa hospital the sanitary conditions were dreadful. The bathrooms were garbage piles. The flies were terrible. The wash-basin with running water was used for face-washing, dish-washing, gargling and bedside purposes. On one occasion an American patient saw one of the older doctors spit into the basin without turning on the faucet.

Thereupon Mr. Wilson was irresistably driven to the conclusion that in this filthy Odessa hospital he was observing "a bit of the old Russia with very few of the cobwebs knocked off." And again, "I never realized how powerfully low the Russian standard of cleanliness which were tolerated in one of the places where sanitation was most necessary, but where the new broom had not swept clean."

But what made this observer so sure that he was looking at the old Russia with the cobwebs still clinging to it? Perhaps he was looking at a bit of the new Russia with a lot of new cobwebs enfolding it. Once upon a time there might have been functioning a broom of some sorts, even if an old broom. As a matter of fact Mr. Wilson virtually says so right at the beginning. Odessa, he says, was once a great port and industrial center, but has little value now in either respect. It "has been neglected in the Soviet programs."

When a city or a hospital or a house has been neglected for eighteen years, the natural fabulation would be that once upon a time the cobwebs must have been less oppressive than today, instead of more. When no broom has been at work for eighteen years, it is reasonable to infer that once upon a time the dirt must have been less horrifying instead of more. New York Times.

AN OLD MAN PONDERS

I wonder will I ever see again
That yellow spray,
Or hear the patter on the window glass
Of April's rain.
That yellow, now—
I wonder is there anything as gay
In heaven as forsythia,
Or as sweet
As apple blossoms in the warmth of May.
I wonder will I ever smell again
The lilac, or the early Summer rose,
Or wake to see the flaming maple trees
When Summer goes.
Will angel voices sing as cheerily
As does that little bird
With ruddy throat
There on that tree?

Or will there be,
When I have found release,
Nothing but peace?

IRVIN COBB, THAT HANDSOME SON OF THE SOUTH, from Paducah, somewhere in old Kaintuck, has been distinguishing himself in moving pictures, starring in "Everybody's Old Man" in which he does a very creditable job. Whether that means that Irv has a career ahead of him or behind him in pictures does not develop immediately from his first starring effort. Cobb appeared with his friend Will Rogers in a film or two and supplied local color very successfully. As long as Irv Cobb has a big cigar to focus attention from the scenic splendors of his face he is happy and not so hard to gase upon. Irv Cobb was a good reporter, one of the best of the old Park Row days when big men were in the making on the New York Sun, Herald, Tribune, et al. Irv threw up a mighty good job in Paducah at $35 a week to go to New York to make his everlasting fortune. New York would have, none of him until in desperation he sat down and wrote a letter to every daily paper managing editor in the city pointing out to them the awful calamity hanging over their heads in that the best dang reporter that ever hit New York was about to shake the dust of the moribund city from his brogans and favor some other city with his charm and talents. The letter voiced an ultimatum that the writer would remain in Manhattan just one more week to receive offers from newspaper editors and if they did not take advantage of the opportunity they would just naturally be sorry for the remainder of their miserable lives. It sure was a corker of a letter, a Cobb masterpiece, and the lad from the South with the big ideas dropped the envelopes into the mail box, and went back to his furnished room to await developments. He struck oil all right, for half a dozen replies rewarded his effort, and a job resulted. Incidentally he never had to hunt for a job again, the jobs hunted him.

VETERANS OF FUTURE WARS IN THE UNITED STATES are demanding a bonus of one thousand dollars to be paid pronto, which means immediately, for the sorrows, suffering and sacrifice they may have to endure in the next war. Started as a sort of burlesque on the Bonus attack on the White House the movement has spread in the colleges, starting in Princeton, spreading to Yale and western Universities, until it has passed the comic stage and now threatens to become serious. The Yankee sense of humor is so over-developed that he often starts something in fun, only to find a serious situation developing later on when the fun froth has evaporated. Johnny Yank loves a parade and when the band begins to play either the Star Spangled Banner, or Follow the Fleet, or Over There he gets all het up and liable to go off at half cock, or what have you, hence the humorous movement for another bonus pie to be cut by Congress is fast reaching the vexatious stage of a passing fancy which refuses to pass out of the picture.

Program of Health and Good Taste

With the passing of winter and the coming of spring, daily diets undergo a radical change. Heavy winter-resisting meals are replaced by lighter, appetizing menus. But there is one article of daily diet that remains constantly the same, winter or summer, spring or fall, and that is bread, and as the production of wheat in Western Canada is the supporting staff of this country, so bread is the universal accompaniment to every meal eaten individually by our people.

So accustomed have we become to the eating of bread that we are apt not to fully realize the important part it plays in our daily disposition and health. Actually, the purchase of bread should be given careful consideration by the housewife. Bread, the source of which, or the standards under which it is prepared, or baked, are not definitely known, should not be accorded a place on the tables of the homes of this city. For certain standards exist in the baking industry, standards that have to do with the buying of flour and the baking of bread, the promotion and the protection of health of the city of Canada's great wheat growing industry.

An indication of the fact that many do rightly adhere to this consideration in the bread they buy, is to be found in the constant, steady growth of The Purity Bakery here in Belleville. Behind every loaf or piece of Purity Bread stands an organization of master bakers, lovers of quality, testers of hygienic handling, testers of taste, and buyers who encourage the production in the best of wheat because of their needs. The housewife who considers the bread she buys protects her family's health and helps to uphold a desired standard. We include the telephone number of Belleville Bakery for those who may act on our suggestion, it is 1978.

LOOKING BACKWARD

CLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

April 30th, 1914.

Mr. W. J. Embury of the School of Mining, Kingston, is home on a visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Embury, Cedar Street.

The city cutters are to return to the Water Foundry stand. The city has arranged to pay for a larger space. The car giving the carters the privilege to use various places along the streets as stands has been rescinded, and the carters are glad to return to their former stand.

Mr. F. Falconer of Sault Ste. Marie was here to attend the funeral of the late James Falconer.

Mr. Charles Rollins of Coe Hill was a visitor in the city today.

Mr. Harry C. Mackay will spend Easter with friends in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Finn of Toronto are here to spend Easter with relatives and friends in the city and vicinity.

April 30th, 1904.

Mr. J. Bruce Gordon of Toronto is visiting friends here.

Messrs. R. Bell and R. Bolsum went to Bobcaygeon today to take part in a concert.

Mr. J. Earl Halliwell, barrister, of Stirling was in the city today.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brigden moved recently from the country to reside in this city on Yeomans Street. Last evening their home was invaded by a large number of friends who took the newcomers completely by surprise. The evening was spent very pleasantly.

It is gratifying to note the many signs of building operations which are going on in many parts of the city at the present time. This will be a fine season for bricklayers and masons.

40 YEARS AGO

April 30th, 1894.

Wild geese are numerous, two flocks passed over the city today.

The city sweeper was operated this morning on East and West Bridge Street.

The roads in the city are very rough, with but few exceptions, and wheelmen are complaining bitterly of their condition. Bridge Street and Moira Street are particularly bad.

Messrs. H. Rollin and Jack Wright of Picton were in the city today.

Mrs. W. Ransom of Richmond, Quebec, is the guest of Mrs. Lane.

Mr. W. Johnson of Hamilton spent Sunday here with his parents.

Mr. Mi. Howard and family left this morning for Atlanta, Ga., where they will reside.

Navigation on the bay was opened yesterday when the steam barge Wm. Allen from Picton passed up light to Trenton to load lumber for Cowan.

A base ball club will be organized here this evening.

The steamer Varuna was launched at Ferry Point yesterday.

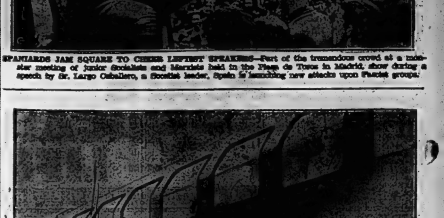
The steam barge Stella Wilson passed up the bay yesterday.

Mr. Adi. G. S. Tebbitt's workmen have upholstered the steamers Gipsy and Armenia and this week the latter has everything in the steamer Quinte. The last named steamer has been rebuilt from the water's edge and is completely refitted.

May flowers are now in bloom and many persons are visiting the woods in search of them.

The Flint and Holton lumber mill commenced operations today.

The street surveyor should have the protruding nails in the sidewalks driven in.



Time Brings Todays Dairy

The improvement in methods of milk preparation and distribution which have brought us our present day modern dairy are interesting, and deserve the consideration of our readers. It is not so many years ago when milk was delivered from door to door in can and each purchaser was poured from a measuring cup. The quality of the milk was a thing of question, as was the percentage of butter fat, the health of the cows and the cleanliness of the dealer.

The discovery of a purity protection process by Dr. Pasteur, the adoption of rigid standards of sanitation by the municipal authorities and the co-operation of individual dairy owners brought about the dairy as we know it today upon which we can depend without hesitation. Because milk—fresh pure milk—is so vitally important to the health and well-being of every individual person we urge that our readers make sure that they are receiving the best possible service.

Here in our City, the Citizens Dairy Limited, at 57 Coleman, is worthy of mention in this regard. The milk they serve is perfectly pasteurized and pure. Bottled in sanitary surroundings and delivered to your door by careful conscientious drivers. For every man from the expert who operates the pasteurization vats to the man who brings you your milk, must play his part in the new and up-to-the-minute organization. 208 is the telephone number for daily delivery of healthful, healthy building, properly pasteurized, fresh milk. SCRAMBLED EGGS HAVE NOTHING on EUROPEAN DIPLOMACY just now, Mussolini made his Ethiopian move just in time to divert attention from Hitler's march on the Rhineland. Now France is so afraid of Germany that she wants to keep friendly with Italy lest an enemy at the back door make it difficult to keep the Werewolf from the front door—and while Germany and Italy have seemingly got the League of Nations on the Spot Turkey's Dictator calmly sends troops into the Dardanelles demilitarized zone. Looks like Anthony Eden's Big Policeman job was getting a bit too big for one international cop to handle without a flock of night sticks.

Machine Extracts Power Out of Air, Says Builder

Belleville Inventor Shows Reporter His Strange Mechanism

Power, from the air. Power collected from the atom-like currents of static electricity ever present in the atmosphere. Stored, and so perpetually built up and applied that its force is great enough to turn heavy machinery in a continuous cycle of what closely approximates perpetual motion—needing only the initial add varying impetus from time to time of a tiny electric motor smaller than existing machine size to keep it running consistently at useful load. A machine whose potential possibilities in home and store and factory are as yet scarcely realized.

That is the dream of a local inventor who at last hopes for success and fortune after twenty-five years' unceasing work with hand and brain and tools on the single project.

Hopes have dimmed and faded from time to time. Experimentation has only seemed to show the futility of further work in the applied direction. Then after less has met with only hopeless results. But always, undiscouraged, even in the face of what seemed certain defeat the work has gone on.

A tiny barn with sturdy walls at the rear of a residence on one of the city's most populated streets has been the workshop. Unprecedented the barn may be, but within its walls and behind the carefully locked heavy doors, gleam the shining rows of tools, and the mechanical equipment that would bring a gleam to a master mechanic's eye. Gloomy within, but over the orderly work benches hang shaded lights whose soft beams bring into perspective a maze of strange coils, gears and parts that have for the most part been hand made and by the shaper, tested and tossed aside for other parts that appear better, with more certainty and success. And in a tiny alcove, shielded with partitions, that forms a part of the workshop, the laboratory into which, after the mechanical parts are laid aside the wearying hours of formulas, after formulas, of physics and sciences and physic—the evening hours are spent.

There in little talk from this strange inventor who dreams that his machine will be the means of some day existing forms of applied power. Secrecy and more secrecy, as is proverbial with the fraternity is the rule. But there are hints dropped. Hints of ionization, of vacuum tubes, of condensers and coils, and rheostats and potentiometers which increase and decrease "field flows" and generation. To the layman, the reporter, the talk is bewildering, confusing.

Only part of that machine is visible. Massive beds holding heavy, black wheels balanced to the weight of a pin. Stranger arms which appear as pistons moving with the slow irresistible purposed signature power. A slow, rhythmic motion moving with the uncanny absence of lags, only an eighth part discernible to the spectator but a foot or two away, but geared so low that only one eighth of the power is used. Cleverly concealed is the motive force of the invention. Remote control is managed by a series of switches operated by the operator-inventor watches as the balance wheels revolve.

"It's nearly finished. Just a little more work to do. A little polishing up", he breathes in an awed voice, eyes shining at the thought of success, or what may be success after the long, tiresome years of patient work.

"But she works—it works. You can see it" he almost whispers again as a hand is placed toward the switch. And with the same unearthly silence the balance wheels revolve swifter, still increasing with that strange abundance of power that lies behind the driving mechanism.

Glad? Yes, certainly. Who wouldn't be after these years? Two weeks ago I couldn't get half this power—a quarter of it, although it would have run, its power would have been there. Now I've solved it. Maybe it was a dream, I don't know. Sometimes I feat that I have dreamed the solution to the whole thing. One thing I do know is that I want to work it straight line from then on. It was simple," he has signed.

Larger than the size of a small office desk, the internal part of the machine shows virtually all of each a few poles that a match could fairly be balanced on its end, is covered with a black casing. What lies beyond that cover is left only to the speculation of the master builder, the scientist-inventor who may happen to see it.

But stranger still, it was hinted is the motive force which drives it with power collected from what is cheapness of all—air.

For many weeks yet in which uncasing experimentation and testing is carried out no other visitor will be admitted to that little building. Only through a co-incidence added by the temporary high election of discovery of its inventor was the reporter of the Daily Ontario Intelligencer admitted to the closely guarded workshop. Only through the more impressing promises of secrecy regarding its operation was a chance given to view and partly describe the moving part that was witnessed in action.

"We're not quite ready yet for the experts. Maybe a month or more yet before they are invited in. Perhaps.....well, who knows. This is just the model. After perfected smaller ones may be built, machines of any size, almost from the size of an electric clock to locomotive, almost perpetual in its operation. Independent of commercial current.....it should make millions."

Upon such dreams have inventors prospered before.

ONLY PEACE WAY POWER TO FIGHT

'Collective Security' Says Baldwin 'Will Not Work'

Worcester, Eng., April 20 (AP)—Prime Minister Baldwin said the only way to secure European peace was to be ready to fight for it if necessary.

"Collective security will never never work, unless all nations which take part in it are prepared simultaneously to threaten with military sanctions and to fight anaggressor if necessary," he declared at a politica rally.

The Prime Minister, who said he had no intention of "going on" after of office, told his audience that Chancellor Hitler "more than any man living in Europe could make or break peace on the continent.

FLYING TOWARD THE MARITIMES

Errand of Mercy May Not Be Needed Says Report

Montreal, April 20—(CP)—Flying towards the Maritimes on an errand of mercy the pilot-hoped might no longer be necessary, the Ontario Government seaplane piloted by George Phillips took off from Riviere Des Prairies here shortly after dawn.

The plane was laden with 300 pounds of wool "flops" intended to be lowered to Dr. D. B. Robertson and Alfred Spalding in their prison in the Moose River Gold Mine. The wool was cut into strips suitable for lowering through the narrow communication shaft reaching their dungeon at the 141-foot level, on the mine. Its purpose was to reinforce the men's clothing against dampness and cold underground.

As the plane took off around 4.30 a.m. Eastern Standard Time indications were the rescuers would reach the marooned men before the plane arrived at the scene of the tragedy, that claimed the life of H. R. Magill, co-owner with Dr. Robertson of the mining property.

Pilot Phillips, a winner of the McKee aviation trophy, dropped his plane on the river here early last night, and with his passengers, spent the night in a Montreal hotel, arising early to get a good start in a sunny, clear spring morning.

ITALIANS CLOSE IN ON CITY OF HARAR

by GEORGE C. JORDAN
Associated Press Foreign Staff

Rome, April 20—(AP)—Italy's southern army moved on the powerful forces of Ras Hasibu, defending Harar, second city of Ethiopia, Fascist forces said today, after a left-wing victory over 10,000 natives on the Somaliland front.

A march of more than 400 miles by Gen. Rodolfo Graziani's troops, forces from Italian Italian Somaliland, reported culminated in a four-day battle last week near Dagnuc in which the natives abandoned about 1,000 dead.

The left wing of Graziani's army drove on from Birsal, an important caravan center, the Mussolini dispatches said, a step nearer control of the Ethiopian "Rase Nasibu's troops.

The new triumph was hailed in Rome as a symbol of the end of League of Nations hopes for effecting Italo-Ethiopian conciliation, if not actually an indication of an approaching end to the League itself.

The authoritative editor, Virginio Gayda, declared significantly in the Giornale D'Italia, that signs of discontent with the League were increasing in South America and that the entire world might withdraw from Geneva.

Simultaneously, the press announced the launching of two new 8,000-ton cruisers under the head-

"Italy is strong upon the sea."

134 TRESPASSERS KILLED IN 1935

Startling Figures Reveal Seriousness of Stealing Rides

Some startling figures, covering canada, while riding illegally on Canadian National trains in 1935, have just been issued by the National Railways.

The Canadian Pacific Railway Company reported that during 1935 a total of 55 trespassers were killed and 19 injured. In 1934 134 were seriously injured. The Canadian National Railways report 79 killed and 115 injured for the same period. Making a total of 339 killed and injured. The publication of these figures will act as a warning to those who seek the significance of the danger.

The above statistics were furnished through the co-operation of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, who make it their duty to assist the Canadian Railways in preventing trespassers and keeping it at the minimum on their trains.

'IT' MACHINE BURNS SCHOOL GOES DARK

Cambridge, Mass., April 20 (CP)—Ingenuity, which has catapulted the Massachusetts Institute of Technology had on early hour today badly burned out "It" machine today.

Overstrained by the electric personality of the girls whose "It" was tested at a 5.15 Club dance, the machine lit up like the Aurora Borealis and blew every fuse in its system.

The gadget was supposed to rate the charm of members of the Club's fair guests and so determine the admission fees their escorts had to pay.

BLENDING—
The process that determines flavour

ALL cigarettes are a blend of tobaccos. There is no such thing to-day as a cigarette containing only one type or kind of tobacco. If there were, you wouldn't like it.

Individual smoking tastes differ. Just as some people like certain foods, while others dislike them, so some cigarette smokers display a marked preference for a certain brand of cigarettes, while their friends think otherwise. That is why the Imperial Tobacco Company manufactures many different brands. We strive always to satisfy every cigarette preference.

For some Imperial cigarette brands, as many as forty different types, classifications and crops of tobacco are required in varying proportions, in order to create a cigarette with a distinctive flavour. This tobacco comes from Virginia, from Carolina, from Kentucky and from Norfolk, Oxford and Elgin counties in Ontario, and other world-famous tobacco growing countries.

The essential requirement is that every cigarette sold under a familiar trade name, must, at all times, be exactly the same as every other cigarette bearing the same name.

To achieve this scrupulous accuracy, the Imperial Tobacco Company, through many years of scientific experimentation, has developed a formula for each brand so exact that experts' tests can discover no difference between two cigarettes in ten million of the same brand, whether purchased in Halifax or in Vancouver.

But, although the flavour is different, the same fine quality is maintained in all cigarettes produced by Imperial Tobacco Company. We manufacture different types to suit different tastes and the quality never varies.

Thriving Settlements in 1857, Story Told of Towns, Villages

Those Who Made Trenton, Picton and Other Places Prosperous Named

Reference to Lovell's Canada Directory, of the year 1857 shows that the present Town of Trenton eighty years ago was then a "thriving and incorporated little Village, prettily situated on both sides of the mouth of the River Trent at the head of the Bay of Quinte, in the Townships of Murray and Sidney, and Counties of Northumberland and Hastings. It is a port of entry, where two steamers start twice a week from Montreal, fares $6 and $4.50; and is near a station of the Grand Trunk Railway, Distant from Belleville 12 miles and from Toronto 101 miles. There is a small island two miles east of the village, called Mill Island, belonging to Messrs Morton and Baker of Kingston, who have established on it two steam mills for lumbering purposes. These gentlemen, with Messrs Gilbert and Company, annually export a large quantity of lumber from this neighborhood. The Village is served with daily mails. Population is about 1800.

Among the still well remembered old names of residents who comprised the Village of Trenton eighty years ago, the Directory lists: William H. Austin, dealer in fancy and staple dry goods and crockery and hardware; James Bell, station master; Rev. Wm. Beasell, Church of England; William A. Beaty, mason and plasterer; Rev. Henry Brettargh, R. C. Church; Toussaint Chouinard, saddler; Augustus Clide, lumber merchant; Bernard Connolly, saloon keeper; John Corby, constable; Michael Dean, boot keeper; Joseph Dolin, saloon keeper; Fergus and Smith, saloon keeper; Phillip Empey, wagon maker; Rev. Michael Fawcett, Wesleyan Church; Patrick Fergus, J.P., M.D., Coroner; John P. Flindall, distiller; Gilmour and Company, dealers in lumber and general merchandise; George Gordon, dealer in fancy and staple dry goods, hardware and councillor; Charles Goslee, shoemaker; Albert Hawley, dealer in chemicals, drugs, paints and oils; John S. Hawley, iron foundry; Sheldon Hawley, J.P., land owner; James Johnson, blacksmith; Asa Hill, tanner and harness maker; Miss Lyons, milliner and dress maker; Patrick Lyons, butcher; Alexander Macdonell, J.P., collector of customs; Francis J. McGuire, grocer and superintendent of schools; James Marsh, High Constable; Hugh McColl, toll keeper; Rev. Neil McNeil, priest; Francis McGowan, shoemaker and wharfinger; Robert McQuillan, M.D.; Lawrence Mestis, watchmaker; Adam Meyer, barrister at law; Elijah Meyers, J.P., mill owner; Daniel R. Murphy, barrister and Commissioner in Queen's Bench; Timothy O'Brien, dealer in dry goods, provisions, etc.; Olivier ollas, Samuel Merrill, barrister at-law; Registrar of Surrogate Court; Thos. Moore, physician and surgeon; J. Mortashed, prop. of North American Hotel; John Mullen, saddler and morocco dresser; Mrs. Nettleton, milliner; D. O'Shea, dealer in hoots and shoes; John Parker, contractor and builder; Samuel Peterson, J.P., Deputy Sheriff; Pickering, brewer; William Pope, carriage maker; Mrs. Post, hotel keeper; Robert Powell, Mayor and general storekeeper; F. E. Rankin, M.D.; John Reynold, grocery and the Bay of Quinte and Weller's Bay with a population of about 300. Included among the residents were: Edward Barrie, blacksmith; James Biggar, post master and general storekeeper; Chas. Davis, carriage and sleigh maker; Rev. H. E. Fiest, Church of England; Murray and Conacon; John Rowe, carpenter and joiner; Geo. Shears; inn keeper; Hon. Robert O. Wilkins, commissioner in the Queen's Bench and Reuben Young, coroner and lumber

Patterson, shoe maker; Mrs. E. Pulver, tin keeper; H. P. Reiner, dry goods groceries, flour, etc.; Philip Roblin, J.P., town councillor and tanner of marriage licenses; William Ross, blacksmith; John Snider, shoe maker; William Wesson, general store.

Carrying Place in 1857 was known as "Murray" a village situated on the isthmus between the head of the Bay of Quinte and Weller's Bay with a population of about 300. Included among the residents were: Edward Barrie, blacksmith; James Biggar, post master and general storekeeper; Chas. Davis, carriage and sleigh maker; Rev. H. E. Fiest, Church of England; Murray and Conacon; John Rowe, carpenter and joiner; Geo. Shears; inn keeper; Hon. Robert O. Wilkins, commissioner in the Queen's Bench and Reuben Young, coroner and lumber

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

(Beatrice Fairfax)

Marrying For Love or Money?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

It's the old, old question—which to marry? One is young, attractive and ardent, except for occasional unemployment. The other is a widower, no longer young but "well fixed." He is always a perfect gentleman and has always been very kind to me. He has told me he will make every allowance for my youth, and that my young friends will be welcome in our home.

But I am devotedly in love with the younger man, who has never been able to do much for himself. My parents spoiled him in childhood and while he is gifted, he is too fond of pleasure and "killing" the way a young man must be. If he is going to climb the ladder of success—

When I am with my older friend I have a sense of security, but he doesn't make my heart leap wildly the way the younger one does.

Prayerfully Considering.

While the young man may have a power to make your heart leap wildly, still I doubt if you're as happy in his company as you imagine. Love is blind, but you say this boy's failings quite clearly. You admit that he is stubborn and too much of an egoist to accept good advice. Under such circumstances, the affair is more of a temporary thrill than the love which lasts for a lifetime.

But I could never have it on my conscience to advise you to marry healthy and intelligent girl to marry a middle-aged man merely give her a feeling of security. The best advice I can give you is to wait till you are more certain of your feelings.

Mothers Says It's Up to Her

Dear Miss Fairfax:

He drives a delivery truck, and often, when he sees me, he invites me to go riding. I've asked my mother to let me go, and she says it's up to me, and yet I can never make up my mind to go because there are certain people in this town who will talk. If they see a boy and girl go out together.

You know this boy for a long time, and he is well behaved, so I don't consider it wrong at all right for me to ask him to come to the house.

If you follow my column, you know that I always suggest that girls invite their boy friends to their homes, so that their parents may become acquainted with the young men. And if your mother approves of this young man, after you have met him, I can see no objection to your going out with him.

"They Never Speak as They Pass By"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We're known each other by sight for four years. We go to the same church. I see him and color every Sunday. He always looks at me as if he wants to say or speak to him, but I'm a shy girl and don't like to lay myself open to the charge of forcing my acquaintance. Yet, why call a man an acquaintance when I'm madly in love with him. And I'm sure he feels the same toward me.

He is a professional man and is considered a catch. His cousin tells me he does not waste his time on girls. Once we met, stopped, and looked each other's eyes for a long moment, but neither of us had the courage to speak, and we passed on. This situation is getting to be unbearable.

Edith.

If your young man must be lacking in resourcefulness, I should say, as you pastor to introduce you. Then he will have a logical thing for him to do, since you both go to the same church. And how about this girl cousin, who tells you the young man isn't interested in girls? Why don't you ask her to pronounce the magic formula of an introduction, since neither of you seem to know how to break the ice? Too many lad to let this affair go on any longer, without becoming acquainted.

Weddings

GOODFELLOW—HOUSTON

Shannonville.—A very pretty wedding event was solemnized in Trinity Church Rectory, Shannonville, on Wednesday morning, April 15th, at 11 o'clock when Clara Marion, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Houston was united in marriage to Floyd Grant Goodfellow, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Goodfellow, 2nd line of Tyendinaga, Rev. A. E. Pepper officiating.

The bride looked charming in turquoise blue crepe gown with navy hat and matching accessories, carried a sheaf of carnations and roses. Miss Catherine Dean of Belleville, wearing a royal blue crepe gown and carrying pink and white carnations was bridesmaid, while Mr. William Houston, brother of the bride, supported the groom.

Following the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents to members of the immediate families, Mr. and Mrs. Goodfellow left for a short honeymoon trip to Toronto and Niagara, travelling in a grey check suit, after which they make their home on the 2nd line. The bride received many lovely gifts that expressed the esteem in which they are held.

BAY OF QUINTE W.I.

The Bay of Quinte Women's Institute held their regular monthly meeting on Wednesday last at the home of Mrs. Wesley Trumpour, Consecon, Ont. The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. R. Sinnifield, by singing the Opening Ode. The minutes of last meeting were read and approved. Business was then taken up. Mrs. Holmes gave us a very interesting demonstration on "Placing Quilts and Quilting" which very much enjoyed. Mrs. Trumpour then gave two guitar solos and meeting closed with God Save the King. Lunch and a social half hour was then enjoyed by all.

Treat Tot as Individual Person

Miss Grenelle Asserts Every Child Should Stand on Own Feet

(By Ilma Grenelle)

Five little girls, all dressed alike in pretty pink frocks, are living in a glass house, their every little movement followed by strange, staring eyes, like so many penguins. Separately they are nothing, together they comprise a miracle that has attracted the attention of the world, drawing upon them riches and applause, never through an individual show of superiority, but simply because there are five of them alike.

The world will grant them a living, and ask nothing of them except that they remain together, always remembering and asserting that they are quintuplets, never more than one sixpote to be interested in them as individuals, but only as five sister of the same age.

Will they ever be able to live other because of their dependence? Will they deeply and bitterly resent their loss of individuality, sometime? Or, never having been treated separately, as children, but only as a part of a group, perhaps they won't develop individual likes and personalities. Perhaps they will accept the fate of being just a famous quintuplet, and live up the grevy that it brings like contented little parasites. Undoubtedly they will react differently. For even quintuplets are not exactly peas in a pod alike. Nature never repeats, mentally or physically.

Separate Them!

Dr. Alfred Adler, the famous psychologist, has said that the only hope for the babies is to separate them, and soon. Each should be brought up in a different environment, in the hope that they may forget they are quintuplets and develop as normal human beings.

Of course, I agree with Dr. Adler. I don't think it is possible for any child to develop normally when he is handicapped by being recognized as one of a group of children, one of a twin, or even as just a sister, brother, son or daughter.

Every child has a right to be considered an individual; every child needs to develop his own mind, to do or fail on his own merit, by his own efforts, guided by his own initiative.

From the beginning, all children should be considered individually and not always thought of and referred to as "the quintuplets" or "the children", but as Mary or John or David.

These sisters, or brothers, who look so much alike—that is if one is doing to them as individuals? Or, of course, if it isn't done too long, too consistently, it doesn't mean that the parents are forming a habit of dressing their children alike, together, planning for them together, and doing everything upon a uniform, identical, it will do no harm. But it almost always does mean just that.

Consider your children separately. Even if they are twins they need it and deserve it.

FAMOUS DIETITIAN WILL DEMONSTRATE AT CAPITOL

On Friday, April 24th, Mrs. H. M. Aitken, Dietitian for the Canada Starch Company, Limited, will hold a Cooking School at the Capitol Theatre for the women of Belleville.

Every woman in Belleville is invited to attend this interesting event and the small admittance charge will be used entirely by the Women's Association of the Bridge Street Church. Mrs. Aitken is probably the most experienced of cooking experts. Her work has been for many years all over the globe and the relating of her experiences has been very enjoyable and thrilling to audiences throughout Canada.

This event will be worth-while attending and it is a privilege to the citizens of Belleville to have such a celebrated lecturer in their midst. Tickets are on sale at the Capitol Theatre. They can also be obtained from your local grocer.

POINT ANNE C. W. L.

The annual meeting of the Point Anne subdivision of the Catholic Women's League was held at the home of Mrs. Frank Simmons on April 16th, with an attendance of fifteen members. After business for the year was concluded reports were read. Annual reports were read by Mrs. Walter McDonald, secretary. The election of officers which was in charge of Mrs. McKay and Mrs. O. Caulin was as follows:

Past President—Mrs. J. Bennett.
President—Mrs. Gilhooley.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mrs. T. Whalen.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. P. Shaughnessy.
3rd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Genereaux
Secretary—Mrs. Walter McDonald.
Treasurer—Mrs. P. Simmons.
1st Councillor—Mrs. McCaughlin.
2nd Councillor—Mrs. H. Bennett.
3rd Councillor—Mrs. T. Gilmour.
4th Councillor— Miss A. Bennett.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

"Modern Times" is Charlie Chaplin's Best—Reception Accorded "Modern Times" Proves Comedian Still the Top.

After an absence of almost five years, the one and only Charlie Chaplin returned to the screen of the Belle Theatre on Saturday in his long-awaited comedy, "Modern Times". The occasion proved well worth waiting for. Time has not altered his genius. Charlie Chaplin is still the world's funniest comedian.

Far more pretentious than any of his previous pictures, "Modern Times" is also definitely Chaplin's funniest and Saturday's three large audiences laughed as we have not heard an audience laugh since "City Lights", Charlie's previous film, was released almost five years ago.

Continuing the role in the "tramp" and relying upon novel synchronized sound effects, Charlie once again proves that he does not require dialogue.

Tramp in New World

Written, directed and produced by the star, "Modern Times" introduces a pathetic-comic little figure of the tramp in the baggy trousers, derby and huge shoes into a new world. He is first seen as a tramp in a Big Lunch factory, fighting holes on moving tracks. The factory with its fantastically huge and complicated machinery, is also an evilly enchanted forest to Charlie, and he gets into all sorts of hilarious difficulties here before the monotony of his work "kicks" him and he goes temporarily insane.

Thereafter, his life is a series of adventures and misadventures, in the course of which he wanders into and out of jail (ranging from night watchman to singing waiter) and jail with an admirable impartiality and manages always his way to play knight errant to a lovely little gamine of the waterfront. This role introduces Charlie's beautiful and gifted new leading lady, Paulette Goddard, who brings a fresh, radiant young personality to the screen and looks like real star material to this reviewer.

Chaplin's pantomime is comparable to Shakespeare's sonnets. Charlie does an unusual routine in pantomime a big steel factory fight-ballet in a department café to the tune of "Titina." In this scene, which is the only one in the film which was shot directly in sound, Chaplin achieves his own "mundane language" to films in a highly original way and he result is one of the most hilarious ever looked on screen. In addition to writing, directing and producing and acting in "Modern Times", Chaplin also wrote the music and composed the theme song, in which such old familiar faces as Chester Conklin, Henry Bergman and Hank Mann play important roles.

"Hearts Day at Lido", a gorgeous star-studded musical revue with a cast of famed stars, and Fox Movietone Latest World News completes a splendid program of entertainment that every member of the family will enjoy. The entire program will be repeated again tonight, Tuesday and Wednesday, matinee and evening.

AT THE CAPITOL

Hilarious Comedy "Sweet Under Standing" Is Coated

"Snowed Under," a rollicking mixture of mystery, romance with a New England setting, and bring together a leading man and three leading women, all of whom are top notch Hollywood stars in their own right, George Brent has the lead while the feminine trio is composed of Genevieve Tobin, Glenda Farrell and Patricia Ellis.

The hilarious comedy situations about a handsome young playwright snowbound in a Connecticut farmhouse and two ex-wives and a new sweetheart, a lovelorn lawyer and a romantic sheriff.

Brent has the role of the playwright who has promised a drama to a New York producer, but is unable to get an idea for his final act. Genevieve Tobin is cast as his first wife, now divorced but still in love with her ex-husband, goes to Brent's rescue by bringing him the suggestion of the producer, Miss Farrell, still having some talent in the literary field herself.

Then comes Glenda Farrell, the second wife, who had stolen Brent's affections from Miss Tobin, but is now planning for divorce, which the luckless young playwright is glad to get. She brings with her, her lawyer, a part played by John Eldredge, and the sheriff, Frank McHugh, bending to see that his ex-mail-ticket is lodged behind the bars of the local jail.

And lastly, just before the bliss-ful ends, comes Patricia Ellis, the third ex-wife, in the role of a pretty young co-ed, who is madly infatuated with Brent.

Miss Tobin decides to try to win Brent back, and in her efforts to keep away from both his second wife and the new sweetheart, while the Farrell casts amorous eyes at the sheriff and Miss Ellis is torn between her infatuation for the playwright and a new emotion stirred up by the young lawyer, who openly makes love to her.

A beautiful piece of gauntly Hudson Overture opens the bill, attending either matinee or evening show.

PRESENTATION

On Tuesday evening, April 14, a large number of friends and relatives of the community and other points, including Belleville, Stirling and Trenton, gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. Donaldson, 2nd line of Sidney, when Annie which was recently married to Mr. Clayton Parks, was presented them with silver-rose bowl with posse and reflector, casserole, pickle dish and pepper shakers.

The gathering was called to order by the following address was read by Miss Mary Donaldson.

R.R. No. 6, Belleville, Ont. April 14, 1936

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Paul,

Dear Annie and Clayton:

We, as friends and neighbors of the 2nd of Thurlow have gathered here this evening to extend to you our very heartiest congratulations and to spend a social evening in your honor of the new step you have taken in life.

You, Annie, came as a stranger to us, three years ago and we have always found you to be a real friend. We are sure that your neighbors in your new home will find you one ever ready to help in church or social work.

Clayton, we have not known you, Clayton, very long, but we have heard very good words of you, and we welcome you as a friend. May you prove worthy of the trust that is put in you by us. We congratulate you on your choice of a partner for life.

As this is an occasion when nearly everyone has some advice to offer, good or otherwise, we would add our bit to which you doubtless have already received.

When everything goes crooked
And seems inclined to rile
Don't kick, nor fuss, nor fidget
Just you smile.

It's hard to learn the lesson
But learn it if you will;
When people tease and pester
Just you, grin.

When some one tries to do you
By taking more than half
Be patient firm and pleasant,
Just you laugh.

But if you find you're stuffy
(Sometimes of course you will)
And cannot smile nor grin nor laugh
Just keep still.

You will meet new opportunities
That will demand of you your best.
You are now responsibilities
That will put you to the test.
Never doubt, or fear, or falter
If you find the way grows hard.

God has promised He will strengthen
If His way you will regard.

We are glad to know that your new home will not be far from us We now ask you to accept these gifts, as a token of our love toward you both and we hope that you will use them in your everyday life. May they ever remind you of pleasant fellowship and old friends of the 2nd of Thurlow.

May God help you to realize the importance of the life you have begun. We earnestly pray that your lives together may be long and happy, spent in preparation for that "Better Home" above, which is prepared for all those who live worthily to the end.

Signed on behalf of your 2nd line neighbors and friends—Laura Gilbert, Mary Donaldson, Chaperon Bunnett, Lulu Mitchell.

The parcels were opened by the bride and groom after which they both suitably replied thanking their friends for the lovely gifts and inviting one and all to visit them at their home on the 3rd line of Thurlow.

"For They Are Jolly Good Fellows" was then sung, and the remainder of the evening was spent in social way.

TABERNACLE MISSION CIRCLE

Mrs. Frosis was hostess to the girls of the Mission Circle at a delightfully arranged birthday party on Wednesday evening. Supper was served at 7.00 p.m. after which the regular meeting was held.

An Easter Worship Service was given by Mrs. Leona Bailey. The minutes of the last meeting were read, followed by the roll call and treasurer's report.

Devotional was given by Louise Newson followed by a piano duet by Dorothy Mitchell and Dorothy Morgan.

Ray Edmondson gave a report of the Convention, and Shirley Book was taken by Rachel Fox. Wee Tower was given by Myra Irving.

A presentation was made to Mrs. Frosis who is leaving shortly for her new home in Stratford. Gloria Newson read an address and presented her with a linen tablecloth and serviette.

Hymn 416 was sung followed by the benediction. The remainder of the evening was spent in musical entertainment and contests.

Body Poisons Cause of Trouble

HOW often we see naturally good-tempered people making miserables out of molehills—jumpy—irritable—fagged out. Often constipation causes this condition. Body poisons are set up. Health goes. Vigour is sapped away. Post's Bran Flakes with Other Parts of Wheat is a bulk food made to prevent constipation caused by insufficient roughage in your daily food. Eat it regularly. Always consult a physician for stubborn cases.

Paymaster in Rich Ore on 1450-ft. Level

According to a statement from Toronto source, the 1450-foot level is opening up rich ore. Drifting east from the winze has opened 300 ft. of ore with the last 25 feet grading over an ounce of gold per ton across four feet. The company is still drifting on this level and is about 400 feet to the east to go before reaching the boundary.

The stock market in recent sessions appears to have been a purely "business" affair, with trade and industrial trends constituting the largest factors of influence. Politics have been ignored, inflationary considerations forgotten and European developments accorded little or no attention. The determinant has been the business, and reports thereof have been especially encouraging. Even the speculation tax proposals in the United States seem to be having little effect upon the course of the Wall Street market, doubtless the result of the belief that they will not pass and that the numerous changes which have been made in them finally enacted will be mostly relaxations of the stringent provisions of the original idea.

Although the stock market has been getting along without the support of an inflation psychology, the reality of budgetary inflation in the United States has been by no means removed. Federal receipts are rising, it is true, but expenditures are increasing at a faster pace. Relief alone is not adding to the burden—virtually all ordinary functions of government are being financed increased. The result is that the American Government—for several years at least—must continue to borrow large amounts of funds; the rise in its will not be checked by any rise in interest rates at extremely low levels. And large supplies of cheap money have always led to extensive speculation, sooner or later.

On the other hand there was the same discrimination in the purchase of mining securities of the best type here as was shown by growing faith placed behind their investments. Mines, like Noranda and Hudson Bay, which continue to pile up reserves which assure a long life ahead certainly offer greater attractions than obligations of pitiful promise. Every mining broker has a burden of debt which must inevitably be adjusted sooner or later.

Some Dividend on Oil Recap Are Expected

Early in May, the directors of Imperial Oil, Canadian Industrial Petroleum and Royalite Oil are scheduled to meet to discuss the question of dividend for the first six months of the year. People who speak with considerable amount of authority on such matters predict that the dividend declarations will be similar to the payments made a year ago. In other words, the shareholders can look for at least a share on the period—$1.35 a share on Imperial Petroleum and 75 cents a share on Royalite.

Earnings of Noranda at Record Rate

The early indications are that the earnings of Noranda Mines Limited for the first quarter of 1936 were the best in the company's history. Profits amounted to nearly a share in the closing period of last year. Some shrewd people are predicting that $3 a share will be earned in the first quarter.

Copper will go up soon the first of April and as a result some people think that the second period will reach an all time peak.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, April 20—(AP)—The stock market pursued diverse roads today, with some of the steels, motors and Hughes gainers shake finding willing buyers, while numerous rails and specialties were offered at concessions.

Some of the conspicuously soft spots were off as much as 4 points in Chrysler, Curtis Wright, Case, Johns Manville, Pond, Deere, Union Pacific, Radio, Du Pont, Coca Cola, Douglas, Chrysler, Corn Products, Bethlehem, Consolidated Oil and Texas Corp.

The bond market tended downward. Transfers approximated 1,600,000 shares.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS

Toronto, April 20 (CP)—Recovering from a mild display of weakness, the Toronto industrial share section of Toronto Exchange was much improved in heavy to-day's morning trading. Gains of small fractions were boarded for International Nickel, Aluminium, Canadian Canners, B. Walkers Common, Consolidated Smelters, Canadian Breweries and some of the heavy industrials.

Canadian Dredge & Dock and Dominion Bridge advanced 1 each and Canada Common registered fractional gains.

The display of increasing firmness was also evident in the moderate sizes of volume and the aggregate turnover at early afternoon was small.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, April 20—(CP)—Mining shares dropped in prices in the morning session to-day but were bolstered to some back this afternoon on the Toronto exchange with action extremely active in the gold group. Prices advanced to 67 1-3 and was holding a fraction above that figure at noon and in the cheaper gold group prices were up for the day for Falconbridge, Sherritt Gordon, Bidgood, Kirkland, Sisco and Red Lake.

Base Metal section market turned quiet with prices steady on the whole. Noranda, Mclntyre Mclroad sold off to 1.06 and rebounded to 1.13 to show a small net gain. Feverish trading was the order of the day in issue, trading in heavy volume at a gain of about 8 cents.

Livestock

Toronto, April 20—(CP)—There was little movement in the cattle trade at the Toronto Union Stockyards Market opened its week's session today. The calf section was steady with veal and vealers sold and settled. No sheep had been sold early when the market opening. There was no cattle holdover.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: calfs, 2100; calves, 180; hogs, 480; sheep and lambs 90.

There were not enough early sales in the cattle section to establish prices. The calf price showed steady at $8 to $9.50 for choice with common downwards to $6.50. Heavy mary ruled unsettled.

Hog trade was included 600 weaners which salesmen said at $11.25, only slightly lower than last week's highest price.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, April 20—Receipts of eggs, butter and cheese at Montreal wholesale produce markets, compiled as the Board of Trade on Saturday as follows:

	Eggs	Butter Cheese
	Dozen	Boxes Boxes
Last week	19,417	5,038 195
Week ago	13,026	3,855 84
Year ago	13,253	1,589 Nil

Prices on Saturday generally steady at Friday's levels, except on potatoes which advanced sixpence to five cents per bag, making the week's gain ten cents per bag. A strong tone developing following official Ottawa announcement of light stocks on farms, with a heavy export movement to the United States and the seasonal improvement. Demand for and choice marketable easy, while eggs were also steady. Poultry was easier on chickens and ducks, and unchanged on other lines.

The potato market ended the week as follows on No. 1 grade, per 80 lb. bag: Ontario Green Mts. $1.60; $1.65; P.E.I. Cobblers or N.B. Montreals, $1.55 to $1.60; Quebec Gatineaus, $1.60 to $1.65; white 10-lb. sacks of No.1s or Fancies, Ontarios were 23-25c; and Quebec Whites, No. 1 were $1.40 to $1.45 per 90-lb. bag. Ontario Cookers were $1.30 to $1.35 for 90-lb. sacks of Turns stock.

The wholesale prices paid generally quoted 22 1-2c for No. 1 grass-produced, selected or fresh receipts prices ranged all the way from the same low quality upgraded bottom at 20 1-2c to No. 2 pasteurized at 22c.

The cheese market was 10 1-4 to 10 1-2 for No. 1 Ontarios, current arrivals.

On the egg market graded shipments in cartons or 1-2 lots were mainly 25c for A-large, 23 1-2c A-medium or B, and 19c for A-pullets or C.

Indians and Red Sox Show Disregard for Predictions that Detroit Will Win the Pennant

Both Teams Show Surprising Power And Real Hurling

CARDINALS WIN

Chuck Klein Pounds Out Two Homers at Chicago

By ANDY CLARKE

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, April 20 (CP.) — The Cleveland Indians and the Boston Red Sox are showing a total disregard for the prediction of experts that Detroit is destined to repeat its triumphant march of last year.

Six days along the way, each with four games won and one lost, these teams are providing definite grounds for contention that a rocky road beckons the mighty men of Cochrane. The Red Sox haven't had to see a relief hurler yet and Bob Feller, who won 24 games between them last year, have started off in a manner to make rival managers wrinkle their brows. The Indians haven't needed good clouting thus far, for the batsmen have taken matters into their own hands and settled issues on pure offensive power.

The speedy progress of these two teams in the American League and the Giants in the National circuit, yesterday awoke the respective champions to their responsibilities. Detroit barged into the win column with Schoolboy Rowe pitching a 1-0 shutout over the Chicago White Sox, while the Giants and Chuck Klein bolting out a brace of homers collected 16 hits and as many runs for a 16-4 victory over the Philadelphia Reds.

Rowe allowed the White Sox but five hits as he scored his second shutout of the season. Orsatti Gehringer parked the ball in the upper deck of the right field stands in the former while Al Simmons made a bid toward justifying his purchase by collecting a pair of hits, along with Marvin Owen.

Ills Sixth Double

Billy Herman, who led the league in two-baggers last season, hit his sixth double in as many games this year as the Cubs came to life after taking two lickings from the Reds. Billy got his double in the seventh to precipitate the rookie-and-all-star singling twice earlier in the game.

Three of the nine hits the Reds got off Bill Lee, who went the distance for the Cubs, were homers by Ernie Lombardi, Lew Riggs and Eval Goodman.

The Athletics made a surprising stand against the Red Sox even though they did go down 11 to four in their fifth straight defeat. It was a pitching duel in which Ferrell, backed by errorless ball, emerged victory over Dusty Rhodes, a former Red Sox twirler, whose mates made two errors behind him. Each pitcher allowed but five bingles.

The Indians constructed their slaughter of pitchers by sending the St. Louis Browns to their fifth straight defeat, 7 to 2. In three games against the Hornsbymen, the Indians have collected a total of 46 gate blows off nine Brownie hurlers. The Browns used 13 hits off Mel Harder who went the route for Cleveland but they couldn't match the stream of runs the Indians were sending across the plate. Odell (Mad Mona) Hale hit a homer in the ninth with Joe Vosmik on base to climax the Indian drive.

Cards Defeat Pirates

Bal dschmacher, who was yanked in the opening game against the Dodgers, found the victory meal against the Boston Bees as the Giants notched their fifth straight win by a score of 4-1. The right hander held the Bees to four hits, two of which came in the last frame.

The St. Louis Cards defeated the Pirates 7-3 as a pair of favorites made dismal showings. Jacky Vaughan, last year's league batting champion, failed to get a hit in four trips to the plate, letting the crowd down when he rolled out a weak grounder with two men on base and two out. Red Hafey whose hitting has brought shades of his famous Uncle Chick, allowed three cardinal runs when he dropped one fly and misjudged another in the second inning.

Lloyd Dickey paced the Yanks to a 9-1 victory over the Washington Senators, getting a homer, a double and two walks. Roy Johnson repaid a homer in the second.

The Brooklyn Dodgers, with rangy Van Mungo pitching six hit ball, chalked up their second win of the season over the Phillies by a score of 3-1. It was a pitching duel in which misplays figured in the winning run being scored on Curt Davis, who allowed but seven bingles.

Chuck Klein is HomeRun Leader In the National

(By Earl Hilligan)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Chicago, April 20. —(AP)—The Chicago chapter of baseball's "I told you so" Club gave three rousing cheers today for Charles H. (Chuck) Klein, about whom the game's trade winds whistled all last winter yet failed to blow out of the Chicago Cubs' outfield.

The cheers were for Klein's performance Sunday against the Cincinnati Reds, when he belted two home runs. The circuit smashes gave Chuck a total of three for the season, and the leadership in this department of both leagues.

The result was that the "I told you so-ers" contended today:

1—That Klein is far from being past his prime as National League fence buster; 2—That he will make a brilliant comeback after falling below the .300 mark last year, and

3—That he will prove to all and sundry, that he still can be considered well worth the $65,000 and three players Chicago gave the Phillies, for him three years ago.

"I decided the thing to do was quit reading the stories about my trade," laughed Klein last night before he departed on the cub train for Pittsburgh. "Every time I picked up a paper, I saw I was going to be traded. So I quit worrying about it and concentrated on making good this season."

ERROR FOR JIMMY FOXX AND A "LIFT" FOR WALLIE MOSES—Wallie Moses, clouting Philadelphia Athletic outfielder, is the runner in this picture and the man covering the sack is Jimmy Foxx, former Athletic first baseman and now an employee of the Boston Red Sox. Foxx errors on the play and Moody gets a "lift" with the first ball mark of the season darkening Jimmy's record. Red Sox won the game

UNKNOWN ADEPT ON MANY HOLDS

Corcoran Has Assembled Outstanding Card For Opening Show

While most of the wrestlers have their favorite holds, The Unknown doesn't specialize in any particular one, but seems to be an adept at them all.—Time Hit Monks, former Ohio State University football star, won't know exactly what to guard against, when he meets The Mysterious One in the Queensbury Club's main bout at the Arena tomorrow evening.

Monks, also, is a clever all-round wrestler but he does make particular use of the spectacular flying head scissors and of the flying tackle, first introduced into wrestling by Jim McMillen and Gus Sonnenberg.

Speaking of specialty holds, Irish Jack Donovan, who will oppose Al Dunlop in the semi-final has one which never fails to provide thrills for the crowds. It is the somersault head scissors and is just about as damaging as Jim Browning's famous aeroplane body scissors. Dunlop has been going great guns since last here and will make matters more than interesting for the fast-moving Boston red-head.

Andy Moon

Andy Moon, Minneapolis Norwegian, is only in the preliminary here but he has been in the semi-finals of the last two shows held in Belleville Lear Gardens, which is a pretty fair indication of the type of card promoter Jack Corcoran has assembled to open with Belleville. Antoine Partin, Monk's opponent, is a comparatively young and very effective wrestler for whom a brilliant future is predicted.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

"Mac" McCarthy, former publicity manager of the O.B.A.A. who is at present conducting a publicity campaign in Trenton, sat in at the local senior baseball meeting on Friday night. "Mac" was also at the helm and the guiding light of the old Western Ont. League in the T. A. B. A., which has apparently fallen from its owner forty behind since his resignation of office last year ago. After listening to the local baseball situation for a spell you and con on Friday night, Mac button-holed me for the gallery to get the low down and also to offer some splendid suggestions for the solution of the summer problem.

X—X—X

"About four years ago in the city of Niagara Falls, Ont., they were faced with the same problem in their baseball set-up as there are in Belleville today," commenced Mac.

"The city council, back a general interest in the matter and re-introduced baseball into the public schools with the result that last year some 700 boys playing school baseball in Niagara Falls, all of them under 16 or under 18 years of age. Then smaller boys are next in need of financing and they can always be depended upon to get an old glove and some bats. What they need and must have, however, is supervision and organization. In Niagara Falls the city council and the general interest in the rejuvenation of the game is glad city with the result, that today Niagara Falls is producing the finest calibre of amateur baseball players in the Province of Ontario" concluded Mr. McCarthy.

X—X—X

We are indebted to "Mac" for his information, as it bears out our suggestion of a few days ago, relative to the same situation, which, at that time was scoffed at by local baseball veterans. We said at that time, "why not introduce the game ball and hockey in Belleville has been the primary education of those activities which have made the public schools of our city."

X—X—X

The city council and the board of education take precautions to provide the very best and safest methods of teaching pupils their three R's and their physical education at the same time. If the team ago school boy is physically fit or lacking of physical development, he is not expected to have him be mentally alert and in a position to grasp readily his special education. If the boy is physically alert and developed, it naturally follows that he should be alert and he will be more fitted to receive and absorb the mental education provided, which we grant is the object in the school, but the physical development of the mind and body should be more elaborate in the public schools. More attention should be spent on the development of the pupils' physical health at no great financial expenditure.

X—X—X

If those at the head of our city should take a personal interest in the physical development of our pupils, they would see for themselves what fun and satisfaction can be procured out of seeing a group of young boys enjoy themselves at good clean, healthy and wholesome sport. All over the province today the elders are beginning to realize the necessity of physical education and the playing of team games in our public schools. At least it's worth a thought.

X—X—X

Tonight the local softballers will hold an impromptu meeting with the idea in mind of something but their present difficulties. Without a city or district league will be organized are the principal items on the agenda.

X—X—X

There is little left to my regarding Tuesday night's gala wrestling show. Promoter Jack Corcoran has kept good his promise and is bringing to Belleville some of the best talent in the business. Such wrestlers as Ed Monks, "Irish" Jack Donovan, Andy Moon and Antoine Partin have appeared in the larger cities as headliners and are up with the very best of today's crop of wrestlers. This new acquisition, The Unknown was secured after being recommended to us by Mr. Corcoran as a splendid type of a wrestler and a contestant who asks nor gives no quarter. His size and only objection it is to be the heavyweight wrestling champion of the world. Any present day grappler, who can wrestle and draw with Joe Savoldi or Ernie Dusek is no mean opponent for the ring, and that's what "the Unknown" has accomplished. Just take a gander over the list of contestants on the card and you'll agree they are the best group of big time wrestlers ever to appear in a local ring.

X—X—X

The New York Giants remained the only undefeated club in either major league today. The Red Sox fell before the Yanks, over the week end, but retained the lead in the American League. Cold weather still handicaps the playing of good baseball, however.

ODDS SHORTER ON BREVITY IN DERBY

Widener's Star Did Not Appear in Derby Preview

(By Orlo Robertson)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, April 20.—(AP)—The Kentucky Derby today had taken on a different hue as far as the wagering is concerned, as the result of tests, that brought out a score of eligibles Saturday.

J. E. Widener's brevity did not appear in the derby previews at Arlington Downs, Harve de Grace and Jamaica, but failure of several of his highly regarded colts left the Florida Derby sensation more firmly entrenched as the favorite in the future books. Tom Shaw, Eastern Commissioner, lost no time in reducing the odds on the Widener Flash from 3 to 1 to 8-5.

In the general revision of the figures, Hal Price Headley's Hollyrood was replaced by Samuel Bonnar stable's Grand Slam as the second choice, while Mrs. Ethel D. Mars' The Fighter moved up among the leaders as the result of his brilliant victory in the Flash Stakes at Arlington Downs.

Bold Venture and Grand Slam failed to win in their three-year old debuts. The Bonnar colt, however, was a fast closing third in the 1 1-16th miles of the Chesapeake's stake at Havre de Grace, while Hollyrood appeared a tired horse back of Marshal Mike Tarsapel and the Wheatley stable's son bloodline sleighs for the derby, in a six-furlong race at Jamaica.

As a result, Shaw shortened the odd on Grand Slam to 8-1 and lengthened the figures of Hollyrood to 10-1. Also at 10-1 is Robert S. Kilmer's Red Knight at 10 to 1. The Widener entry of William Dupon Jr.'s gold sorker, which came through with unexpected victory in the Chesapeake, the fighter made the largest gain. Previously at 15 to 1, since he showed he was considered only a sprinter, the Widener entry was quoted at 12 to 1 together with Morton L. Schwartz' bold venture.

TONY CANZONERI JIMMY McLARNIN

McLARNIN VS. CANZONERI NEXT BATTLE TID-BIT—Jimmy McLarnin, former welter-weight champion of the world and the terror of the lightweights in his earlier ring days, takes on the current 135-pound king, Tony Canzoneri, in a Madison Square Garden bout, May 8. If Jimmy wins, he expects another shot at Barney Ross who holds a 2-1 margin on him to date. The aggressive and popular Tony should give Vancouver's Jimmy plenty of opposition though. Here are the two principals.

R.M.C. Cadets Will Meet Sarnia Imperials

LONDON, Ont., April 20.—(CP)—Senator Millday College cadets of Kingston will replace Sarnia Imperials as runners-up opponents for University of Western Ontario Mustangs Tuesday night in an exhibition game, it was announced by J. H. Crocker, Western U. Director of Athletics. Ginger of the Mustang players, coaches and officials Saturday night Head Coach Bill Storen and Assistant Coach Johnny Metras of Detroit were present. The game with R.M.C. will probably be on Sept. 30, two weeks ahead of the opening of the Intercollegiate schedule between Western U. Mustangs and Toronto and Western. In recent years, Storen has had a pre-season exhibition game with Sarnia Imperials but by the Saturday night meeting schedule gets under way, but since the O.R.F.U. is likely to start by Sept. 30 there is little chance of this possibility of a game with Sarnia this year.

Lloyd Stirling Sent By Leafs to Winnipeg

Baltimore, April 20.—(CP)—Manager Art Ross of the Montreal Leafs today announced the release of Lloyd Stirling to Winnipeg headquarters of the Northern Baseball League, where the big right-hander played last season.

The Toronto manager was convinced Stirling would make Leafs after some more seasoning.

Stirling pitched part of one inning when the Leafs lost to Baltimore yesterday and was touched for a home run that sent in three runs.

TIGER HUBLER DEMONSTRATES HOW HE TORPEDOES THE OPPOSITION—Elden Auker, most effective hurler of the champion Detroit Tigers during the 1935 baseball season, goes through the motions of his famous underhand delivery for the benefit of the magic eye camera and for baseball fans. As can be seen in this series of pictures, Auker shoots the ball sidewheel from near the ground in his submarine delivery, giving it more speed and deception as it near the batter. Note the ball appearing from Auker's hand,

A large number of Stirling citizens interested in flower gardens, lawns, shrubs and landscape gardening gathered in the Stirling Theatre on Wednesday evening April 15th. For a special illustrated lecture on the subject given by Mr. Paul Lardner of the Ontario Horticultural Society. Mr. J. H. Wilmot, President of the local branch of the organization acted as chairman during the evening and after a brief address of welcome, Mrs. McLean, Mrs. Foley, Secretary, who gave a summary of the past activities of the Stirling Horticultural Society and outlined its purpose for the future stressing the option fall offered for the choice of flowers this year. In response to a cordial invitation to join with the Society several new members were enrolled.

At the end of the instructive address Mr. Clark conducted a question period for the purpose of assisting those faced with difficulties in the care of their gardens, and some having such difficulties in the future are invited to submit their question to the local president, Mr. J. B. Belshay who will forward them to the Department to be dealt with by those who specialize in the work.

During the program a vocal duet by Mrs. W. Warren and Miss Mildred Hillick was greatly appreciated. Mrs. H. H. Alger presided at the piano for the musical numbers. The work of the Stirling branch of this Society is greatly appreciated by all those who admire the beauty of the public gardens under their care, along with the trees and shrubs set out by them at both schools.

St. Paul's W.M.S.

The regular meeting of St. Paul's Women's Missionary Society was held in the church parlours on Tuesday afternoon April 14th. The theme, "Christ and Christian Stewardship" period were conducted under the supervision of the President Mrs. R. Munro. Mrs. G. W. Thompson led in prayer and the reports of the various department secretaries were read. A letter was read from Mrs. R. Hayward of China to the Society. The remaining portion of the program was directed by Miss Mae Currie assisted by Mrs. G. Wright, Mrs. Tremblecon and Mrs. W. L. For Koch dealing with some phase of Christian life. Miss Mae Currie gave a graphic description of a Mission Hospital in Africa which was doing a splendid work among the natives but were hampered in their work because of the lack of funds. Midway through this word picture Mrs. C. Macklin sang softly "Home Thou" and this impressive meeting was brought to a close with prayer by Miss Currie.

Stirling Young Men provide Program

On Friday evening a group of talented Stirling musicians shared the Pancake tea given by the ladies of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church West Huntingdon and provided the entire program. Little Benny's Note Book

Today in school Miss Kitty said, how before we start the arithmetic period I want to say a few friendly words to the class about Be Kind to Animals Week, which starts today.

Miss Kitty said this doesn't mean we shouldn't always be kind to animals, many of which are man's best friends and faithful servants, such as the dog and the horse and the barnyard animals. Be Kind to Animals Week is simply to remind us that all living creatures have certain human qualities, in other words, they suffer if they are abused and mistreated just the same as we would suffer ourselves. So I want you all to make a special effort to be kind to animals this week so you will get into the habit of being kind to them every single day of the year. Now if there are any questions we will proceed to arithmetic, she said.

Up fellows quick making sines to each other to hurry up and ask questions, Puds Simkins starting by waving his hand and saying, If the animals expect us to be kind to them why ain't they kind to each other instead of eating each other with claws and paws and chasing each other up trees like dogs and cats?

Because they don't know any better but we do, any other questions? Miss Kitty said.

Wich Raymin Levy waved his hand, saying, How about if a lion attacked you in the jungles, should you resist time being kind to him before you shot him in self defence?

That would be a very exceptional case I am sure, Miss Kitty said, Shooting is posberly wouldn't happen, and I waved my hand again. How about insects? If you got too kind to insects such as ants and flies and mosquitoes they mite take advantage of your kindness and make your life miserble, I said.

Insects are not animals and we'll have to go to arithmetic, Miss Kitty said.

Wich we did feeling against it.

ONTARIO INCOME TAX RETURNS are DUE APRIL 30th

If you are subject to the Dominion Income Tax, you are also subject to the Ontario Income Tax.

You are required to fill out ONE FORM ONLY—T1-1935. This form combines both your Ontario and Dominion Income Tax Returns.

USE THIS FORM:

You should obtain three copies of this form from one of the following sources:

1. Any office of "The Inspector of Dominion Income Tax". These offices are located at Ottawa, Belleville, Kingston, Toronto, Hamilton, London and Fort William.
2. Any Post Office.
3. Any Province of Ontario Savings Office.

On or before April 30th, you must file two copies of this form T1-1935, (or form T1A-1935, if you are a farmer or rancher) at the nearest office of "The Inspector of Dominion Income Tax". The third copy should be retained for your own reference.

In making this combined return of Ontario and Dominion Income Taxes, attach a certified cheque or money order, payable to the Receiver General of Canada, for at least one quarter of the total tax payable.

IMPORTANT.

Because the Ontario and Dominion Income Taxes are combined, there is only one form—only one cheque or money order required. This arrangement greatly simplifies your returns and your payments.

EXEMPTIONS AND DEDUCTIONS

Form T1-1935 is self-explanatory. The exemptions and deductions are the same for the Ontario Income Tax as for the Dominion Income Tax.

Your taxable Income is also the same, with two exceptions: (1) you deduct the amount of your Dominion Income Tax. (2) You add all income received from Dominion of Canada Bonds.

PURPOSE OF ONTARIO INCOME TAX

The main purpose of the Ontario Income Tax is to enable your Government to adopt a "Pay-as-you-go" policy. By helping the Province, you help yourself.

HEAVY AGENDA IS WAITING MEMBERS

Likely Relief Legislation Will be Dealt With at Once

Ottawa, April 28 (CP)—A heavy agenda awaits the attention of members of the House of Commons

when the session begins following their Easter holiday, which started April 2. No indication was given at adjournment of what would be dealt with when the House met again. Prime Minister Mackenzie King said the government would take up business on the order paper suited, the convenience of the members.

There are many to choose from and the likelihood is that for a time, at least, Labor Minister Hegen' relief legislation will be up again for second reading.

No bills appear on the order paper for introducing and the next routine order is the answering of questions of which there are 36, including the record-breaking query of G. G. McGeer (Lib. Vancouver-Burrard) on gold, silver and monetary matters generally. This question has 23 sections and more than 40 subsections.

Water Threatens Lives of 2 in Mine; 'Will be Drowned Within Ten Hours,' Says Scadding in Message Thru Tube

First News Men Not Dead Received After Midnight Saturday

SOUP POURED DOWN

Race Against Time And Water Staged by Rescuers

Moose River, N.S., April 30 (CP)—Shouting down a 150-foot hole to the pit, where two Toronto men are still alive after being entombed for more than a week, Mine Manager F. B. Anderson shortly before dawn today asked A. S. T. this morning had these rescuers' workers would have them out within an hour.

The third man trapped by a cave-in April 12, Maurice Bell, 30-year-old Toronto barrister, died during the night.

Rising water in the old gold mine was threatening Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding, but Neil Smith, and Ontario miners immediately able by side through a drainage slope were getting nearer to them every minute.

No More Food

It was impossible to pour any more food to the men through the tube through which communication was first established with them early Sunday morning.

Manager Henderson said the water was so high around the bottom of the tube the men were unable to reach it.

The Magill shaft house, standing grotesquely with one corner over the caved-in area, was torn down by two hours of axe-work, timber for the dangerous Reynolds shaft through which it is hoped to rescue the men.

Daredevil draughtsmen from Stellarton and Springhill, from Forcupine, Ontario, were clawing and picking through the unpropped shaft, risking their lives to their own safety. They were advancing inch by inch, pit-propped behind them were unable to keep up.

All available timber cut as a new mill nearby, has already been used.

Hospital Set Up

Complete emergency hospital equipment is waiting at the pit mouth ready to treat the exhausted men, when they are brought to the surface. Dr. H. K. MacDonald and a physician and other supplies could be used, also a nurse, Henderson.

Dr. Donald Rankin, his assistant, had taken a position in the cage with the Reynolds shaft to look after the dehydration and Porcupine men coming to the surface for rest.

All miners had been warned repeatedly away from the dead Reynolds shaft entering the earth at the edge of the cave-in area, but men forgot fear when the heartbreaking danger of rising flood waters beckoning knowing.

Scadding had shouted up the diamond drill hole early this morning he and Robertson would be drowned in 10 hours unless they could be taken from the mine.

Shaft Through Solid Rock

A new shaft being sunk through solid rock was only 15 feet from the 165 foot level where they are trapped but could not be completed for another 36 hours.

The Reynolds shaft was the only quick approach left to the rescuers.

All yesterday the trapped men found it difficult to reach the drill hole through the water and still harder to pick food and supplies from it with sausage meat being forced out of great pressure.

Finally a rubber hose was forced down and reached the men in the cave, where they had lived a week. Soup and other liquid nourishment was sent down through the hose from the surface.

Communicated With Surface

By tapping at the pipeline and shouting, however, they were able ways able to communicate with the surface, where Mr. Magill and Mrs. Robertson waited for word of the rescue to be effected.

"They are the most wonderful women I have ever seen," several people have said. A dozen miners shoved themselves on cots and those that had been fixed by the two in the underground here.

Mrs. Magill was not informed of her husband's death last night.

All other rescue work in the area has been stopped, while the daredevils below try to reach through the Reynolds shaft to the imprisoned men. Blasting might jar the treacherous roof and crush the rescuers.

Buried Easter Sunday

The three were buried Easter Monday night, when the area of land 600 feet long, 75 feet wide collapsed and sank 15 feet. Since then rescuers have met repeated disappointments in efforts to reach the 141-foot level off the Magill shaft where the men are trapped.

Attempts were made through the old Archibald and Meagher shafts but had to be abandoned because the cave-in had blocked them far below the surface.

A new shaft, blasted through solid rock to meet the Meagher slope below the affected area, missed its mark and was abandoned.

While those approaches were being tried endless crew had opened the "death chaft" to within 15 feet of the men but it was not expected to be completed for 24 hours.

Magill Had Been Ill

Surface workers had known Magill was ill before his death was reported. He had been heard coughing soon after communications were established through the diamond drill hole early Sunday morning.

Before his cough was heard, however, he had sent words of cheer to his wife at the drill hole.

Magill, a war veteran, was the leader of the three. He had not been in good health.

Dr. Robertson had been treating him for several days.

R. J. Ivey of London, Ont., brother-in-law of Dr. Robertson, was the first to learn of the death of Magill.

He was asked if Mrs. Magill was at the mine head or somewhere nearby. I replied she was at the mine office. She does not know of the death," he said. Mine Manager F. B. Henderson was also told that he reported Magill's death to men around him with tears in his eyes.

Hitler's Birthday Honored by Army

(By John A. Bouman Associated Press Foreign Staff)

Berlin, April 20 (CP)—Germany's revived army paraded proudly before Adolf Hitler today in a military demonstration and renewal of faith in Der Fuehrer on his 49th birthday anniversary.

The Wilhelmstrasse was thronged with crowds, cheering Hitler enthusiastically as he appeared on a balcony to review the troops which massed before the Chancellery, while similar parades were held in army centres throughout the Third Reich.

Official figures were that 440 officers, 13,825 men, 977 horses and 1,872 motorized vehicles participated in the Berlin parade of the army which Der Fuhrer reorganized a year ago, in violation of the treaty of Versailles.

The weather was cold, but a bright sun shone on a formidable array of armored cars, roaring through the central thoroughfares of the city.

Hundreds of "Hitler girls" brought a small of flowers, and a strong force of police had its work cut out in repulsing the crowds.

The Fruhih Embassy hoisted its tricolor in Hitler's honor.

Engineer's Act on Averts Train Wreck

Cobourg, April 20 (CP)—Quick action on the part of Engineer John G. Thatcher of Cobourg, with the first Canadian National Railways train from the destruction Sunday night when he saw the tire fly from the pieces on the right driving wheel. The train was travelling 50 miles an hour at the time and the mishap occurred just west of the station platform.

The train quickly drew to a stop and only the baggage car left the rails. No one was injured and those in the back part of the train did not know what caused the delay.

Another engine was obtained and 40 minutes later the train proceeded on its way. About 200 were on the train.

M. Percy of Belleville, waiting at the cross-over switch, missed death by inches when a piece of the flying tire whizzed by him. The part of the tire was carried under the train, derailing the baggage car.

Weekend Events At Gold Mine

Moose River, N.S., April 20—(CP)—Weekend events at Moose River Gold Mine. (Times Atlantic Standard).

4 p.m.—Weather forecast issued Dwyer said he feared snow. From reports of drawings 10 holes caused mine filling with water; Bill Reid of New Glasgow, diamond drill operator, believed it caused there was a clear opening to the level.

Sunday, 12.15 a.m.— Contact with the three men was established by the diamond drill hole, word being received at the surface, that all still lived. Food and other supplies were sent down immediately.

7.30 a.m.—Complete hospital unit arrived from Halifax.

Monday, 1.01 a.m.—Word came up the pipe the three men were faced with drawings in 10 hours unless rescued.

2.15 a.m.—Scadding called up and telephone communication line, that Mr. still was dead.

2.20 a.m.—Stellarton and Forcupine rescue miners entered the dangerous Reynolds shaft and worked frantically against a 10-hour time limit to rescue the two men still living.

Needn't Get Through For 10 or 12 Hours' Says Dr. D.E. Robertson

Moose River, N.S., April 20 (CP) —"You needn't get through to us for 10 or 12 hours yet, engage," Dr. D. E. Robertson told his wife today through a tiny microphone transmitter from his underground prison.

"We can hold out."

Mrs. Robertson shouted back through the diamond drill hole: "Good, We're coming. We'll be there."

Mrs. Robertson said Dr. Robertson and Alfred Scadding, the two men still alive in the gold mine where they have been entrapped since last Sunday, were exhausting themselves with talking and asked them to sign off as soon as possible.

We are all right," the doctor reassured her.

Previously the men below had warned workers against blasting lest the cave-in.

"It will be all right now if you hear the steam whistle first," Dr. Robertson said into the pen-built steel phone.

Meanwhile a daredevil crew of rescuers from Stellarton, N.S. and Porcupine, Ont., were nearing the prison through the treacherous, unpropped Reynold's shaft.

Provincial Mines Inspector J. F. Messervey estimated they had about 15 feet more to go at nine o'clock E.S.T. this morning. He thought the men might be rescued in another hour, although he could not be sure. If passage was not obstructed it might not take so long.

ARABS AND JEWS KILLED IN RIOTS

Emergency Defence Regulations Ordered by Palestine Council-in-Council

Jaffa, Palestine, April 20 (CP)—Sir Arthur Wauchope, High Commissioner of Palestine, proclaimed an Order-in-Council empowering emergency defence regulations today after clashes in which nine Jews and two Arabs were reported killed.

Clashes between Arabs and Jews, and encounters with police broke out in the Arab town of Jaffa yesterday, after demonstrations near the neighboring all-Jewish city of Tel Aviv.

A curfew was imposed upon the populace of both communities, compelling them to remain within doors between the hours of 7.00 p.m. and 5.00 a.m.

The Jewish telegraphic agency said the Arab demonstrations were an outgrowth of resentment over the slaying of two Arab laborers in a raid, near the Jewish colony of Yetach Tikvah, after a holiday by Arab brigands in which a Jew was killed and two wounded.

Arab crowds were stirred the Palestine agency said, by rumors that many Arabs had been killed by Jews.

Jewish passersby were attacked yesterday the agency said and police, unable to control the surging demonstrators, fired into their ranks, killed two Arabs.

SCADDING USING TINY MICROPHONE

Fails to Tell Rescuers How Deep Water is in Shaft

Moose River, N.S., April 20.—(CP)—A microphone transmitter the size of a pencil was lowered today from the diamond drill shaft by Alfred Scadding.

With it in the tube sent down were instructions for Scadding and Dr. D. E. Robertson, to use it.

The microphone, a one-way instrument, simplified communication with the surface.

Scadding was apparently having difficulty hearing the words sent down the diamond drill but his voice came clearly through the microphone.

The extra of water was heard distinctly through the tiny voice machine.

Scadding was asked about the height of the water, but he did not answer.

PRIME MINISTER SENDS MESSAGE

Government of Canada Grateful For Work of Rescuers

Ottawa, April 20.—(CP)— Prime Minister Mackenzie King yesterday telegraphed to Premier McDonald of Nova Scotia a message expressing pleasure that contact had been established between the rescue party and three Toronionians entombed in a Moose River, N.S., gold mine.

The Prime Minister's message read:

"Have just heard of success which has attended efforts to save men entombed in Nova Scotia Mine. Hope word will bring heartfelt relief and rejoicing to all throughout the Dominion. Would be grateful if you convey from the Government of Canada a word of thankfulness to all concerned".

Pond Dries, Fish Die As Terrain Sinks

Moose River, N.S. April 20—(CP) —Hundreds of fish died on dry land today after a pond disappeared from the middle of the Moose River mine area.

The water gradually sank through crevices torn in the land surface by a general sinking of the honeycombed area that was heralded last Sunday night by a huge cave-in, trapping three men below.

The area appeared today to be still settling, 26 days after the disturbance began, it has already blocked a half dozen possible entrances to the mine through which the men might have been rescued.

AS KING EDWARD DISTRIBUTED MAUNDY MONEY TO AGED POOR—King Edward of the British Empire carries a bunch of spring flowers as he walking between the Dean of Westminster, Rev. Foxley Norris (LEFT) and the Archbishop of Canterbury (RIGHT) he attends the Maundy Thursday services at Westminster Abbey. This is the second time in 200 years that a reigning king has attended the services. King George, the present King's late father, having attended in 1932. The feature of the ceremony is the distribution of money from the King to the poor. Two of the 43 recipients are shown RIGHT. They are Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Porter, 82 and 78 years old. Each of the recipients of the Maundy benefaction received about $20, which the King presented in red and white purses.

CANOE CARRIED OVER RAPIDS

Another Canoe Gives Chase For 600 Yards And Effects Rescue

Billings Bridge, Ont., April 20—(CP)— Bruce Stewart will be mighty careful hereafter how he messes around rapids in birchbark canoes. He is alive and well today but his friends can't figure out why.

Stewart, 32, last night paddled too close to a 500-foot rapid in the Rideau River near this Ottawa suburb and was carried over. The stern broke off his light craft and he became jammed by his left, encased in rubber boots, with his head and shoulders under water.

The canoeist's young wife, standing on the river bank, yelled for help. Earl Slack, a friend, jumped into another canoe and paddled furiously to mid-river, too late to help. He paddled back to shore and yelled to Allan Moses, lockmaster on the nearby Rideau canal.

They portaged the canoe 100 yards and put it in the water. Palmer Slack, Earl's brother, leapt into the canoe, rag, the rest of the rapids, about, 300 feet, and chased Stewart for about 600 more before he overtook him.

Stewart got his head above water after struggling for about half a minute and kicked off his rubber boots jammed under a thwart. He crabbed his overturned canoe and hung on while it rushed through the rapids, made extra turbulent by high spring water. Twice the craft struck rocks and he let go, only to regain his grip. When Palmer Slack brought him ashore he was tired but unhurt.

His wife was happy, but tear-stained and breathless. She had run almost half a mile along the bank.

ETHIOPS TO MAKE DESPERATE STAND

Engagement to Take Place Between Addis Ababa and Ankober

Addis Ababa, April 20.—(CP) — One of the sharpest engagements of the war appeared imminent today somewhere between Addis Ababa and Ankober as the government marshalled every available fighting man in a desperate attempt to repel Marshal Pietro Badoglio's advancing troops.

The stand will be made at an unchecked point north of here, qualified sources said, that if this was broken by the Italians no further attempt would be made to save the capital, and the Haileselaire would withdraw into the mountain fastnesses to wage a guerrilla war under cover of the heavy rains.

Rumors, that Italian troops were nearing Addis Ababa precipitated a rush of natives from Ethiopia's capital but most of the foreigners encamped in the big yards of the legations.

The city was virtually deserted, with only the government offices, the post office, the customs house and the bank among the few establishments carrying on activities. The British Legation was best-equipped for defence, and was besieged by hundreds of persons of many races, calling for protection.

Hundreds of Armenians, legally under French protection, were among the many foreigners showing preference for the British Legation, with its well-fortified compound and bomb-proof cellars, on the outskirts of the city.

"ZYZZLE"

Just suppose you wanted to find the word ZYZZLE in the dictionary. Would you start at the first page, leaf through the entire book and come finally to the last word, on the last page? That, you say, would be an insane waste of time.

Now, suppose you need accessories for housecleaning. Suppose you need soap, or floor-wax, or a pail and mop. Many stores are featuring real bargains in household needs for spring. Yet you waste time and effort, if you walk from store to store . . . . wander from counter to counter looking for what you want at the price you want to pay.

Instead, you may sit comfortably at home and learn where and when to make the best buys. That's all printed for you in the advertisements of this paper. You have only to read them and heed them to save time, save tiresome shopping, and save money.

"GLITTERING GIRL"

By MAY CHRISTIE

"Whaat thank you ahsy?" He swung round on her, his drink pushed to side-air, his back teeth protruding comically.

"Tonny, you've got your car below. Let's pull it and ride on to—and be off to Greenwich or Richmond or wherever a judge'll splice us!"

He gaped at her. Even at that exciting moment Nan thought with a pang how unsatisfactory he was!

"You'd marry me, Nan? To-night-ish?"

"Uh-ha. Speak lower. Don't let 'em guess. Tomorrow the papers'll gloat with it!"

This would be it for Ist with Terry Shannon. A quick salve to her outraged pride. Already she saw the big headline. . . "BEAUTIFUL AND POPULAR DAUGHTER OF OLD KNICKERBOCKER FAMILY ELOPES WITH BLUE-BLOODED MILLIONAIRE"

Before the triple mirror of her dressing-table in the luxurious bedroom of their apartment sat Vernon Tryon. Her face gleamed and was after last night's party with its glittering incidents.

It was five o'clock in the afternoon. Mary she had been able to settle to nothing. Her ears were keyed to the ring of the telephone, to the whirr of the door-bell, to the hope that Terry might in some way communicate with her. . . .

As the hours went by her depression increased.

Now Mrs. Van Tyle was coming to call on her mother, and Sadie Tryon—in another moment would be on edge—had commanded her daughter to freshen up, to beautify herself.

"Aren't you tickled to death that she's anxious to call?" Vernon had cooed. "Don't you realize what a feather in our cap to be able to say we've us calling terms with such an important person in Society? And her son himself bringing you home last night, and wanting to see you with him to-night, and all! Why, it's just grand! . . All the money you've got, and me as something is coming right back to us in social position, Sadie—I mean Vernon. It's big! Can't you realize?"

"I don't want to go out tonight with Toddy Van Tyle, Mother. I'm tired."

Mrs. Tryon drew in her lips. "I declare I could spank you, you ungrateful girl! But as soon as mad I'm not going to have you home on my hands this evening mooping over one of the best names in the land is after you. What are all these expensive clothes for, I'd like to know, unless you go out and are seen in them?"

"Mr. Van Tyle's all right, Mother, but he simply doesn't interest me. So why should I bore myself?"

"Don't come the grand lady over me until you ARE one, Maggie Tyson! Remember this family's full of women a whole heap better-looking than you, and the men can pick and choose, meaning there's a real fish in the sea as ever came out of it, and like enough it's many Van Tyle and me can't have you forever on our hands—its no good you pretending you're only eighteen when right now, with this sulky face and you refusing to put on a bit of paint, you look all of twenty-five! For the land's sake, smarten up and act like a dee-lo-lastic lady's got money and good clothes and kind parents and one of the best names in town interested in her!"

Vernon smiled wanly.

"They'll be saying you're grieving for the bride of a Prince Karnsoff if you don't shirk up and show yourself in public," proceeded her mother. "But don't you think I'm going to let you throw away an old Ross through not being properly chaper-oh-ned! I go right along with you to-night, Maggie. Young Van Tyle'll think all the more of you, knowing he can't put anything over on me! Is that your sweet mother right at your side?"

"Sure it your own way, mamma," nodded Vernon mechanically. "I would certainly be a quaint evening with her reading us the latest scandals of the triangle. She couldn't visualize Toddy! Van Tyle's face when he learned that Sadie was coming with Dean . . .

The telephone rang. Would it be Terry . . . ? Terry whom she had left last night without an explanation of her sudden fit of tears over the announcement of what seemed to be the Karnoff—de Bray elopement! She had brushed from Terry's side in tearful confusion, and locked herself in a bathroom of the Van Tyle's house until she had regained composure.

"What on earth could he have thought of me?" had been turning in her mind all day long.

The obvious answer to that, of course, was that he had erroneously but naturally surmised she was in love with "Prince Karnsoff," and heart-broken that he had taken off with another woman.

If Terry only knew that the unexpected rush of tears had been "Prince" worries, plus relief in the Prince's departure! Nan somehow afterwards, she held, had no opportunity of explaining things to him. Toddy Van Tyle had deliberately detained her for the rest of the evening. Then, in lieu of defaulting "Foggy" Hamlet, he had brought her home.

Before her mother could reach the telephone—for Sadie was tremendously inquisitive — Vernon had picked up the receiver.

The call, alas, was not from Terry, but from Mr. Dreost the broker. He had had an expert attorney-friend of his examining the Customs Declaration of the bracelet, and it was accepted as Venetian antique. The papers were forged.

"Mr. Dreost has been down to the Customs House with the fake papers, and examiner Fitzsimon Karnsoff—or rather, Serge Meschersnoff—has been here, he says, arrested for forgery at once." Vernon told her mother.

And that, too, But they'll get after him yet, for all that he's sneaked off to Europe with that serpent, Martha."

"I hope they don't arrest him. I don't want to be dragged into a big scandal, Mother."

"Well, you'd best get married, quiet, and the whole thing'll blow over!" grudgingly.

Having said her say, Sadie waddled out to the drawing room to see that everything was in readiness to receive the aristocratic Mrs. Van Tyle. Short of being a real Tyndess . . . (as she had hoped for her daughter) the good old Dutch name wasn't to be sneezed at. She was "pasting" to get Vernon married "into the best circles."

A few minutes . . . later, Vernon heard a loud scream from the drawing room. She rushed in to find her mother waving the afternoon paper, and opening and shutting her mouth soundlessly for all the world like a fish out of water.

"Mother, you're ill! Oh, what's the matter?" Was it an apoplectic stroke? Gasping the that, and her face all crimson!

"The paper! Look! The headlines! Nan Shannon!"

"What is it? Give it me!" With startled eyes, Vernon scanned the front page and saw the announcement of Nan's marriage to "Foggy" Hamlet.

"She's grabbed your beau! Nan's beat you to it. Crabbed off a real Society fellow for herself, and a millionaire into the bargain! And he dared to come after you last night—him and his old cronies!" wailed Mrs. Tryon.

"Why, Mother, he's nothing in the world to me. But Nan—why, she was really drunk last night — could he was, too—they couldn't have known what they were doing!"

"Drunk or sober, that girl's sharp. She knows on which side her bread is buttered on! I never did take a shine to Nan for all her 'Aunt Sadie this' and 'Aunt Sadie that' and the other thing! Give me that paper, Maggie Tyson, and take this as a hint. That cheeky little Nan with not a penny to her name grabbing off such a fine catch! It's time we had done the sky-on' of a blue-blooded Knickerbocker family—and a millionaire, too."

"Oh, poor Nan! 'Foggy's' so ugly! I hope they'll be happy!" Vernon generously exclaimed.

Nan had been horribly rude to her yesterday, but in her kind heart she only remembered Nan's good points now.

"Ugly nothing! Even if he were Old Nick himself, with his money and his blue blood he could get any woman in this town!"

"He couldn't get me, so don't be upset, darling."

Vernon was mentally comparing poor "Foggy's" homely countenance and ill-made figure with the Adonis-like proportions and handsome face of Terry Shannon.

Her mother was off on another train of thought, however. "Your dee-loo-lastic party! Its—and Nan've got to come to it! Not that I like either of them, but they'll give it 'catchy.' "

"Cachet, you mean, darling. Oh, I wish I wasn't having any coming out party!" She knew, with a terrible ache at the heart, and sense of loss, that Terry would probably be in Arizona on the night of the ball which was set for one week from to-day . . . .

"Well, of all things! And me spending hours and days on the list! Don't you know girl, that a thousand of the best names in New York city are coming?"

"It seems such a stupid waste of time and money," Vernon sighed. She didn't know those people. But not in the sense that poor Sadie Tyson had expected.

"Why, my dear, dear Mrs. Tryon, you're invited the oddest, strangest people! Granted the aristocratic Katrina Van Tyle as she surveyed the long list of names through her gold lorgnette shortly after her arrival at the tea hour. "Purely as for speaking plainly and of course I might these have changed, and we ought all to adapt ourselves to them, and be broad-minded. But they're no absolutely a few ever known—or my son either, and he's liberal enough—even to ask people at her coming-out! Why, some of them are perfectly dreadful people, dear Mrs. Tryson!"

Sadie Tryson's plump face had turned scarlet with chagrin, then pearly.

"But—but—we were advised . . . "

"You've been shockingly advised, if you'll forgive my bluntness, dear Mrs. Tryson! It looks to me—and I know my New York like a book—as though you'd obeyed the Biblical injunction, and gone right out to the highways and hedges! I never even heard of half these people! I am almost at the remaining ones are quite socially impossible—" — outside the pale—declasse—" . . .

"No class to them, you mean?" fairly panted poor Sadie. "And Mertina de Bray making me think I'd the classiest names on my list! Oh, the wicked deceiver!"

Mrs. Van Tyle's lips twitched for a second. Her eyes held an assumed, contemptuous glance. It faded immediately as she said pityingly and very gently, that such a woman was a bare-faced adventuress from the moment you met her, my dear Mrs. Tryson!"

"I didn't. We're now in Paris Paris. When we found her out, it was too late! Oh, Mrs. Van Tyle, what'll I do? Can I cancel the invitations and send out new ones to YOUR friends? Oh, won't you help us!"

TORONTO LEAFS LOSE TWIN BILL TO THE ORIOLES

Hurlers Feature Early Games With Fine Performances

STILL QUITE COLD

Al Pinelute, Rookie For Newark Wins Second Start

(By The Associated Press)

If the first few games are any sign of what is going to take place all season, the International League's pitchers must be in for a large season. In refutation of the idea that cold weather causes poor mound performances, several games of five or less hits have been recorded in the chilly days of the campaign.

Five such feats were turned in yesterday—the first afternoon when all the teams managed to play—after Bill Harris of Buffalo had opened the string with a three-hit shutout of Baltimore Friday and Whitey Wietelmann of Toronto allowed Newark only five blows in eleven innings Saturday.

Outstanding among the flinging feats on yesterday's five-game program, which included the season's first doubleheader was recorded by Leon Chagnon, who is expected to be the mainstay of the Montreal staff this season. Holding the curtain at Syracuse after three postponements, Chagnon limited the Chiefs to four hits and won 2-0. Ky Vandenburg did well for the home club, giving only six blows in eight innings but a homer by Gus Dugas with one aboard in the second did irreparable damage. Only 3,000 fans shivered through the delayed opening.

The Rochester Red Wings, whose opening series at Syracuse had been rained out, finally got away with an amazing performance and whipped Albany 8-1. Wilb Rob Weiland and Leon Pettit pitching almost air-tight ball, they were tied at 1-1 with two out in the Rochester half of the ninth. Then the Wings suddenly came to life, drove Pettit to cover and scored seven runs. Weiland finished off with a five-hit game.

Leads Loss Twin Bill.

The Baltimore Orioles, who usually rely strictly upon power, got the benefit two of the day's best mound performances to take a twin bill from Toronto 2-1 and 11-7. The 10-innings opener saw Jim Bivin of the Birds and Frank Mahoda of the Leafs give only four hits apiece. One Baltimore blow was a homer by Al Wright and another was Keith Molesworth's scratch single, which sent in the winning tally. Cliff Melton and Phil Lohrman combined to fling a three-hit second game but nearly saw their efforts ruined by poor support which left the Leafs' score seven runs in the fifth. The Orioles burned on the stakes, however, and wound up with 16 hits, including homers by Chapman, Florence and Swetlow, off six rival shovers.

Newark's brilliant freshman, Al Pinelute, outhurled the Veterans and Bob Kline and Hod Lisenbee to beat the Buffalo Bisons 5-3. He gave only six blows while his mates, led by Ernie Koy, produced 13. Koy accounted for three runs with a double and two singles.

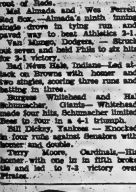
Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Schoolboy Rowe, Tigers—Blanked White Sox with five hits and fanned six for second straight shutout.

Chuck Klein, Cubs, walloped second and third homers of season in rout of Reds.

Mel Harder and Wes Ferrell, Red Sox.—Alsada's ninth inning single drove in tying run and paved way to beat Athletics 4-3.



Van Mungo, Dodgers. — Struck out seven and held Phils to six hits for 3-1 victory.

Bad News Hale, Indians—Led attack on Browns with homer and two singles, scoring three runs and batting in three.

Burgess Whitehead and Hal Schumacher, Giants—Whitehead made four hits, Schumacher limited Reds in four in a 4-1 triumph.

Bill Dickey, Yankees — Knocked in four runs against Senators with homer and double.

Terry Moore, Cardinals—His homer with one in ninth broke the tie and led to 7-3 victory over Pirates.

STILL GUARDED—Although he parted from active politics several years ago, Lord Greenwood, who was chief secretary for Ireland during the stormy years of 1920-22, is still being guarded by Scotland Yard men in London. Lord Greenwood is a native of Whitby, Ont.

VICEROY AND LADY LEAVE FOR INDIA—Lord Linlithgow, viceroy and governor-general-designate of India and Lady Linlithgow are shown here as they left their home in Chester House, London, on their way to Delhi, India, where Lord Linlithgow will take up his appointment. He succeeds Lord Willingdon as viceroy of India. Lord Linlithgow, who was born in 1887, served in the great war, being mentioned in despatches in 1917-18 he was civil lord of the admiralty. He has had considerable experience in Indian affairs, acting as chairman of the royal commission on Indian agriculture (1926-28), and chairman of the joint select council on Indian constitutional reform (1933)..

Charlie Chaplin, the only man on earth who can make the whole world laugh, partakes on the fun in "Modern Times," now on the Belle screen.

FOLKS HITS HOMER

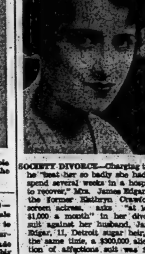
Boston, April 20 (AP)—The Red Sox defeated the Washington Senators in a Patriot's Day morning game today 6 to 5, by pulling on a three-run ninth inning rally.

Jimmy Foxx hit his second home run of the year in the eighth inning.

Boston	010	100	012	6 10 0
Washington	000	001	120	4 9 2

Batteries—Russell and Hoffies, Bolton; Walberg, Oslacavella, Catermanber and R. Ferrell.

Mr. Jack London, appointed General Manager of W. R. Johnston & Co. Ltd.



Mr. London has for late years been widely known as assistant to the President of Samuel Hart Company of Montreal. He brings to his new post a wide experience and knowledge in the men's clothing field.

HIS IDEA SPREAD—Odin Pryor, above, now a newspaper man in Ft. Wayne, Ind., is said to have made the original suggestion for the formation of the Association of Veterans of Future Wars last year while he was editor of the Daily Iowan, student publication at the University of Iowa. National headquarters of this anti-war organization is at Princeton University. It is composed of students. The idea has spread to Canadian universities.

TO ADDRESS CONVENTION—J. E. Vernor, of Peterborough, first vice-president of the Industrial Accident Prevention Association, who will occupy the chair at the annual luncheon of the industrial safeguarding convention being held in the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, on April 22 and 23. He will address more than 1,500 plant executives and safety experts from every part of Ontario.

SOCIETY DIVORCE—Charging that he "beat her so badly she had to spend several weeks in a hospital to recover," Mrs. James Edger II, the former Kathryn Crawford, screen actress, asks a "at least $1,000 a month" in her divorce suit against her husband, James Edger, 11, Detroit sugar heir. At the same time, a $500,000 action of alienations suit was filed by Edger in Florida against Lewis E. Mallory, III, Pennsylvania oil heir. Mallory has countered with a $600,000 suit against Edger for slander, libel and malicious prosecution.

DISMISS APPEAL OF H. O'DONNELL

Judges Do Not Give Reasons Immediately For Dismissal

Toronto, April 20 (CP) — Harry O'Donnell's chances of escaping the gallows were narrowed today to the single thread of executive clemency as the Ontario Court of Appeals unanimously upheld his conviction for the "ravine murder," of Ruth Taylor here last Nov. 4.

The court's unanimity barred a further appeal and left the 25-year-old filling station employee with only the hope of a commutation of sentence from the Minister of Justice. Defence Counsel Frank Regan, K.C., announced immediately after court he would seek this clemency before May 8, the date set for O'Donnell's hanging.

Sir William Mulock, 93-year-old white-haired Chief Justice, announced the court's decision. "Rex versus O'Donnell," he intoned before a crowded courtroom. "This is an appeal from a conviction for murder, and it is dismissed." The brief announcement made, the Justices scooted.

Besides Sir William, Justices W. R. Riddell, W. R. Middleton, and C. A. Masten wrote opinions. Mr. Justice F. B. Latchford, Chief Justice Appeal, concurred with that of Mr. Justice Masten.

No Substantial Grounds Found.

All were in agreement there were no substantial grounds for appeal from O'Donnell's conviction before Mr. Justice Nicol Jeffery in Pergrary for the murder of the pretty 16-year-old stenographer whose body was found in a wooded ravine in Toronto's East End by schoolboys.

"It is not arguable," the Chief Justice wrote, "that the evidence does not establish a primary case and excludes the inference that anyone but O'Donnell is guilty." Then down through the list of appeal grounds he went, dismissing one after another as not having enough weight to call for a new trial.

He made brief reference to the fact O'Donnell did not take the stand in his own behalf but he did not comment upon this aspect of the case.

Sir William "dismissed" Mr. Regan's contention the police had not checked carefully on O'Donnell's alibi he saw a man and woman near the murder spot when he passed it in the police Ruth was ravished and slain; and he likewise disposed of the police lapse in exhibiting photographs of the dead girl should not have been shown the jurors and did not have adequately instructed on points of law.

MINE MINISTER HOPEFUL OF RELEASE OF 2 MEN

We are Fine Down Here, Says Doctor As Slow Progress Rouses Anxiety Among Rescuers for Ultimate Safety

RESCUERS' HEROIC TOIL

Material in Way of Release Taken Out by Handsaw

Moose River, N.S., April 21 (CP)—As hours of their ninth day of dark imprisonment dragged by, Dr. A. L. Robertson and Alfred Scadding were reported by doctors today to be suffering from extreme weakness in their mine day tomb 141 feet below the surface.

The condition was described by Dr. H. E. MacDonald and Dr. Dave Hall Rankin who brought an hospital emergency unit here from Halifax and who talked with the entombed men, trapped in a crumbling level with the corpse of their companion, Herman Magill who died early yesterday.

Men Are Weak

Charles Frey, brother-in-law of Dr. Robertson, said he agreed the men were in a weakened condition, suffering from cold and some fever. But from his conversation over the telephone last night with Dr. Hall, he believed Robertson was "very cheerful."

While officials indicated it would be several more hours before the men could be brought through the entombed mass, Dr. Robertson had assured his wife over the telephone that "we are fine down here."

Moose River, N.S., April 21 (CP)—Frequent communication leads miners and men attempting to rescue Dr. A. R. Robertson and Alfred Scadding from the tomb in Moose River, to believe that the two are "hearing up so well as we could expect," Mine Manager Lloyd Dwyer told The Canadian Press today.

The entombed men, Dr. Robertson himself a practical miner, said:

"We hope that within the next few days Everyone is unduly delayed they will be taken from the shaft alive."

Many Difficulties Met

Mr. Dwyer remarked that "two days ago it was confidently felt the worst was over and that a few hours at the outside would suffice to release the men." But other falls had been encountered "and we have learned to some an extent that some 50 feet of fallen material still lies between the imprisoned men."

From 141 feet below the mouth of the Moose River, trapped by fallen walls and roof, Dr. Robertson, Scadding and the corpse of their companion, Herman Magill, who died yesterday, sent word that "all assurance we are fine down here".

But rescuers knew better. The Toronto surgeon had appealed earlier for night record instructions although he and his fellow workers suffer only the faintest of wild reveries from hunger, cold and exposure.

Fear of Digging Away

There had been fears expressed the rescuing miners might be digging slightly away from the shaft where the men were trapped while making an inspection trip a week ago last Sunday night, and that there was "only a few feet" left to penetrate to the place to reach the men. But other fails had been encountered "and we have learned to some an extent that some 50 feet of fallen material still lies between the prisoners and the imprisoned men."

BRIDGE TO BE OPEN ABOUT MAY 24TH

"The contractor expects to have the bridge open for traffic by about May 24th," declared Coun. Thomas Chas. Moss in reference to the construction of the new steel footbridge upon which work had already been started by Mr. Walter Paterson, contractor.

Work of dismantling the remains of the flood-wrecked bridge was started by workers yesterday. Today, after being sawed in convenient sized pieces, the steel members were trucked from the location for disposal.

The new bridge will be of light steel design, slightly higher above the water than the previous one.

CHILD STRUCK ON HEAD BY LARGE LOG

Struck on the head by a log as she stood near where a group of men were working, Helen Dermody, eight-year-old daughter of Frank Dermody of Shoco, was the victim of a fractured skull. The little girl was rushed from her home to the Notre Dame de Lourdes Hospital, where she is at present under the care of Dr. S. Boucher.

815 VISITS BY V.O.N. IN MARCH

During the month of March total number of visits made to house in this city by nurses of the local Victorian Order reached the high figure of 815, of this number 381 visits were free ones, it was revealed by the report of Nurse Miss Stoutar at the regular meeting of the Order held last evening. Two well baby clinics were also conducted during the month owing to the flood, it was stated in the report.

At the conclusion of the regular business, Miss Soden and Mrs. Thomas Holden, president of the Belleville Order, were named official delegates to attend the annual meeting of the National Convention of the Board of Governors of the Victorian Order in Canada to be held in Ottawa of the 28th and 29th inst. this month.

34TH BATTERY TO START TRAINING

A full turn out of members of the local 34th Battery is expected this evening at the armouries for the first parade of the Battery, opening the training season. This will be a preliminary to the annual summer trip to Petawawa. Two parades will be under the command of Major T. V. Wills, O.C., and Captain W. T. Cockburn-Kennedy.

THREE LEGGED DEER SAVED FROM DROWNING

Believed to be the same crippled animal that has been sighted in various parts of Hastings County during the past year or so, a three legged deer, with the right front foot missing below the knee joint was rescued from death by drowning through the ice on the Bay of Quinte at Peterborough by Percy Ireland, a trapper residing near Peterboro.

Noticing the odd tracks through the snow, Ireland followed the trail, later came upon the animal on the drifting ice, unable to extricate itself. Wading out to the deer Ireland managed to pull it to shore, where it bounded to its feet and looped away.

MOOSE OFFICERS ARE INSTALLED

Installation of officers of the Royal Canadian Legion for the coming year took place in the Moose Auditorium on Monday evening, attended by a large number of the members and visitors from outside lodges. The ceremony was carried out by Past Dictator Albert Brett assisted by J. E. Lasenby as sergeant-at-arms. F. C. Kelleher was chosen as delegate to the Supreme Convention to be held in Chicago this year. It was announced that the Supreme Dictator, Walter S. Ruff, will visit Eastern and Central Ontario next month and Belleville has been selected as one meeting place in the tour. Lodges in this district will be invited to attend and a large initiation class will be held, the officers' installed were:

MISSIONARY SERVICE HELD

Mrs. R. E. Newman Gives Message on Opportunity at Holloway Street

The annual Thankoffering service of Holloway Street United Church W.M.S. was held by the members on Sunday morning at eleven o'clock. Mrs. Jos. Corden, president, presided.

The order of the service was the singing of "Holy, Holy, Holy," a short prayer, hymn 240; responsive reading by Mrs. C. Holmes, prayer by Mrs. Hubbs, Scripture reading by Mrs. Newman, announcements.

The offering was taken by Mrs. L. Ketlch, Mrs. F. McMasters, Mrs. S. P. Hayward, Mrs. Ethel Beal, who also acted as ushers. The choir sang "God So Loved the World"; Hymn 349 was sung and Mrs. R. E. Newman delivered the address.

A duet, "Behold He Standeth at the Door" by Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Moynes the singing of Hymn 253 and Benediction by Mr. Newman concluded the helpful service.

Mrs. Newman gave a missionary message of opportunity, speaking from the text, "Behold I stand at the door and knock"; Rev. 3:20. "The privilege of taking a service like ourselves the work involved. The teacher gets more out of preparing a lesson than those to whom it is to be taught. When asked to do some specific piece of church work do we stop to think of the privileges that is ours of being coworkers with Christ in His plan of bringing in the Kingdom of God. Seven and more, the speaker said she wanted to accept every opportunity that offers as a privilege God gives of co-operating with Him in bringing back to His ideal, a world that is in turmoil. As each thought the church, as members of our Women's Missionary Society let us take on these tasks as great privileges, for they are great privileges. We are joyful in accept them instead of doing these things reluctantly, we will have much more energy to invest in the projects undertaken. Did you ever stop to think of it. God and you and me working together?

Rev. Dr. E. Armstrong, secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions says "Christianity is the only religion that bids people look forward. Every other faith looks to the past. Christ said "Lift up your eyes and look." Follow me" said Paul said, "Forgetting the things which are behind and stretching forward to the things which are before", so Christianity is the religion of the forward look, the faith for today and tomorrow. That is because Christ is Risen. He is not dead, but alive for evermore and has promised to be with those who go forth in witness for Him. Hence the missionary is always looking forward and his motto is that of the first British foreign missionary, William Carey, "Expect great things from God, attempt great things for God". That is the missionary lives and works in the confident expectation of the coming of the Kingdom.

Behold I stand at the door and knock", brings to one's mind the famous picture of Holman Hunt's, "The Light of the World". There we see Christ waiting for an entrance into the heart, that has never been acquainted with Him, or if so, had forgotten Him, and had allowed other things to crowd Him out of the life. Among the weeds and ivy Christ still sought an entrance, and though yearning to bring new joy into the life, the conquest must turn the knob from within. Christ never forces Himself into any life.

Consider the great affirmations of Jesus about Himself;

1. I am the Light of the World.
2. I am the Bread of Life.
3. I am the Way, the Truth, the Life.
4. I am the Vine.
5. I am the Resurrection and the Life.
6. I am the Good Shepherd."

Jesus was always talking about Life, something we all know about, vital, many sided, ever changing. Life is measured by the number of things to which we are alive and only offers us life of the highest worth. The achievement of the impossible is what gives meaning to living.

In a world where many are still needy, where causes are tired of more hope and have lost the zest of life, Christ offers us abundant life. There never was a race of human beings so in need of personal allegiance as these now living. Does the Christ of God possess your heart and mine that He can use us to bring the Christ of the cross to the individual and to the world?

Men have tried money and the economic situation has grown worse. Men have tried science and it has not answered the soul hunger. Men have tried force and it has solved nothing, but left us more confused. In the midst of all this Christ stands at the door of our hearts, at the door of our world, offering us Life, Direction, Strength, Everlasting Peace, abundant life—the solution of the world's problems.

Mrs. Newman referred to the missionary work of Dr. Homer Brown in China, Rev. Mr. Collins of Africa, Rev. Mr. Scott of India and Dr. McLeod of Formosa. These missionaries have all recently heard in Belleville, while home on furlough.

The question presents itself, "Why should we make Christians of Hindus, Moslems, or Buddhists? Why should a Hindu not remain a Hindu with a reverence for Jesus added to his inherited beliefs? St. Paul supplies the answer, when he said "God forbid that I should glory save in the Cross of our Lord Jesus Christ. He saw condemned humanity unified in Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, neither slave nor free man, for ye are all one in Jesus Christ.

Problems facing the missionaries in other lands, were no like our problems in the homeland, that we seemed as one large family dedicated by a common task with but one solution for the human ills and sins of the world "The Christ of Calvary", "The Christ of Easter". "I am He that liveth and was dead, behold I am alive for ever-more".

Whether you listen to the witness of Christians in China, Africa, India, Formosa or Canada it is a witness of the power of Jesus to transform the life. A common language which centres in Christ Christ of the Cross and reaches out through to the Risen triumphant Lord.

We must not lose sight of the fact that we belong to a church that girdles the globe. Our church is an Empire, like the British Commonwealth upon which the sun never sets. Think of it; as a United Church, we are entrusted with bringing this message of a risen, living Christ from Canada to Trinidad, across the sea and on to India, China, Korea, Formosa, Japan, and back across the Pacific to Canada. He who called men to follow Him, He who made them go forth into all the world, still bids us go. It is now our turn to answer.

"Behold I stand at the door and knock". Do we believe it? Is Jesus knocking at the door of individual heart, at the door of the world? Has he a message for the individual who is confused, for a world in chaos? Are God who can give peace to an individual heart can give peace to a world. He is suffering that peace, the peace the world giveth, give I unto you". There will be no real peace until he has done what can be done. He has loved us, died for us. The next move is from us. We have no excuse such as the dwellers in Africa or the millions of China or India. This is the day of our opportunity. God is knocking at your heart and my heart, at the heart of the church, at the heart of the world.

Our gifts are meagre, whether it is service, money or in giving ourselves. We have just passed Good Friday and Easter. We have travelled with the Holy Ground of the Supreme Sacrifice. "My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death" were the words of Christ during those last days on earth. As He views the world today, as He looks over our church with the knocking at the door of individual heart, at the door of the world? Has he a message for the individual who is confused, for a world in chaos? Are God who can give peace to an individual heart can give peace to a world. He is suffering that peace, the peace the world giveth, give I unto you". There will be no real peace until he has done what can be done. He has

MALCOLM-GODDEN PIANO DUO CLOSE MUSIC SEASON

Brilliant Performance by Artists Heard by Large Gathering

The program of the two-piano ensemble, Scott Malcolm and Reginald Godden in the Canadian Concert Association series at the Collegiate Auditorium climaxed a season of excellent musical entertainment. These brilliant young artists who have achieved fame on this continent and abroad received an ovation from last night's audience, whose enthusiasm at the close of the program almost took the form of cheering.

Mr. P. C. MacLaurin, president of the Belleville Association, who introduced the pianists, also took the opportunity of saying a few words on the Association's plan of operation and in thanking all members for their co-operation of the past season, asked them to respond as quickly as possible to the membership campaign for next season.

Presenting a thoughtfully arranged program, Scott Malcolm and Reginald Godden, captured the admiration of the audience from their opening number, by the sheer artistry and flawless technique of their work. The perfect blending of tone at all times gave the effect of one instrument. These young artists have transcribed for two pianos countless compositions and last evening's audience heard a number of these clever transcriptions.

The first part of the program was devoted to Bach and Liszt with a composition by each of the artists. Prelude in E Major from the 6th Sonata for Unaccompanied Violin and Toccata in D Minor for Organ (Dorian) were the Bach numbers transcribed by the artists and their rendition showed the breath and power of their work, their perfect performance of Liszt's Concerto Pathetique in E Minor, however, revealed their complete mastery of their art with the clearness of accent, rich harmony of tones and flowing beauty of the many difficult passages.

For the second half of their concert the versatile musicians chose modern composers and a number of familiar and favorite compositions. Never had three numbers been more brilliantly rendered as they create a complete cycle of musical moods from the amusing Danse Macabre to the sweeping rhythm of the Blue Danube Waltz. Particularly outstanding in these compositions and the transcription of Brahms' Cradle Song, beautifully done, and Rachmaninoff's Caprice Viennois.

The artists were very generous with encores at the close of the program. Announcing their "Chorus Girl Number" they played from paper a "transcription" which proved to be a very shortened version of the "Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf" to the delight of the surprised audience. "Rhinal Fire Dance" and "Country Gardens" were also included.

At the close of the program Miss Waterman of the Canadian Concert Association addressed the members and complimented them on the very successful season just completed, Belleville had one of the largest memberships of the Canadian Concert groups in the organization.

The program was as follows—

God Save The King.

I

(a) xBach—Prelude in E Major from the 6th Sonata for Unaccompanied Violin.

(b) xReisler—Sicilienne and Rigaudon in style of Francoeur.

(c) xBach—Toccata in D Minor for Organ (Dorian).

II

Liszt—Concerto Pathetique in E Minor.

Intermission

III

BUSTED THUMBS "FREEZE" $325,000 WORTH OF BASEBALL TALENT—There's $325,000 worth of major baseball talent shown here and every red cent of it has been turned into frozen assets by busted thumbs. Joe Cronin, LEFT, gold-plated shortstop-manager of Boston Red Sox, gazes ruefully at the digit, fractured in two places when he fell Red Sox, gazes ruefully at the digit, fractured in two places when he fell on a baseball, completed a double play, then keeps his $250,000 person on the bench for at least three weeks. And on the RIGHT is Mickey Cochrane, catcher-manager of Detroit Tigers, submitting to the tender ministrations of Trainer Danny Carrol after he injured his thumb playing against Cleveland. Mickey, too, must ride the bench for a time—and Mickey cost Detroit just $75,000. Both Mickey and Joe, however, will fill in the time by master-minding for their clubs, so it isn't all loss.

POLICE BLOTTER

The largest fine ever meted out in the local police court for driving a motor car with defective brakes was assessed a Kingston car driver by Magistrate R. J. Butler K.C., yesterday. The fine was set at $25 and costs, while the motorist was instructed to immediately repair the defective brakes or be arrested. "Motorists driving motor cars with defective brakes are becoming a menace on our highways and this practice is going to be stamped out if we have to impose the maximum sentences", warned His Worship after the fine had been paid.

Activities in and around local police circles were rather quiet during the past 24 hours, while no major motor accidents were reported on adjacent highways.

The largest number of transients of the year were given a night's lodging at the police station last night, when 36 signed the register. Last night's sudden downpour of rain was attributed the cause of the increased numbers of transients being forced indoors.

Rocky Mountain House, Alta., April 21 (CP)—Coal weather today brought a welcome relief to people of this area from scene of summer's advance signals of approaching winter. A mild Chinook, forecast, the breeze put in an early appearance.

PARTY IS HELD AT CARRYING PLACE

The party at Carrying Place on Friday night was voted a fine success and was a gala affair. The hall was nicely decorated. During lunch, each guest was presented with a fancy cap to wear. Misses Eleanor Gilmour and Isabel Peck and their efficient staff were pretty white aprons decorated with red hearts and valleraas' hats. Ladies of the Guild prepared the lunch, with the Junior members serving as their assistants. The Trenton Orchestra furnished splendid numbers and were much enjoyed. The ballroom dance was a pretty feature of color and noise. Mrs. Rowe was the winner of the ladies' door prize, and Reg. Leseparance captured the man's prize. Jack Elliott was the possessor of the lucky ticket for the pretty "tomato juice set", container and six glasses. The programme was closed with "God Save the King."

UPHOLDS THE LEAGUE

Britain still stands for the League of Nations as the most potent agency for world peace, Captain Anthony Eden stated on Monday at Geneva.

Great Britain undoubtedly feels that as the task becomes greater and greater and more and more ominous somber signs appear on the world horizon more than ever are the power and efficacy of the League needed. If the pacification of the nations were an easy matter there would be no need of a Nations League. It is because almost insurmountable tasks are to be imposed on the League that to many it seems almost to fail. No one surely expected the League to have "smooth sailing".

If the League did not exist, what will take its place in preserving peace and creating a peace spirit? There is no higher court than the League, composed of representatives of most of the nations.

This chief trouble is some member nations have not so high an opinion of their own duties to the League as they are bound to as members of the League.

CANADA'S MINING ACTIVITIES

Mining development in Canada has been most active in the last few years and is to be prosecuted even more intensively in the near future. Hon. Mr. Crerar, Minister of Mines, announces the completion of fifteen preliminary reports based on last year's million-dollar geological survey, and at the same time states that the various mining, prospecting and exploration companies will this year be able to send men into the field equipped with a greater wealth of information than ever before.

The chief metals, precious and base, have figured largely in Canada's wealth in recent years. Gold, silver, nickel, copper, lead and zinc, all have yielded good returns. There are also the non-metals, such as asbestos, gypsum and salt, besides coal, natural gas and petroleum. Then there are the clay products, which go into brick, tile, sewer pipe and pottery; also cement, lime and stone. It is a remarkable list of mining objects. All of these products have been covered long since, so there is every reason for the Government to send out surveying parties on an unprecedented scale to uncover still more fields. Gold mining goes back to 1864, when the precious metal was discovered on Cape Breton Island. In 1823 gold was discovered on the Chaudiere River in Quebec, but the first real gold rush was to the Cariboo in British Columbia in 1853. In 1896 came the great Klondike discovery and the rush to the Yukon, which brought adventurers in the thousands into almost inaccessible territory. It was a new and far-off region but the adventurers overcame all difficulties and Canada became one of the greatest gold countries in the world. There is still gold in the hills of the Yukon and the reports just issued at Ottawa indicate that attention will presently be paid to the sections hitherto neglected by the prospector.

In 1934 Canada's gold production was valued at $102,000,000 and there were 78 producing mines, compared with 25 in 1911. The estimated value of the gold produced last year was $122,000,000. Nickel exports for 1933134, showed a marked advance, $30,000,000, and there is continued expansion. Copper production in 1933 was valued at $21,634,853. In the following year new records were made in gold, nickel, copper and lead, the total mineral output then valued at $278,000,000. As regards silver, Canada ranks third among the countries producing that metal. Then there is the world's most expensive metal, radium, which is worth something like $70,000 a gram, and a gram is the size of a pinhead. The source of this most costly article is in the Great Bear Lake region, where deposits of pitchblende were discovered by Gilbert Labine in 1930. There is a radium refinery at Port Hope, Ont. These mining facts are of a nature to hearten even the pessimist, for they are an assurance that the Dominion possesses unlimited natural resources, some of which are only in the early stages of development. The country, indeed, holds more promise for its citizens today than seemed possible in the enthusiastic pioneer times. These citizens, furthermore, should be better fitted for the task of development, for the increased knowledge concerning the wealth that lies in the ground is readily available, and there is transportation of every description for all. The preliminary reports of last year's surveys are most encouraging.—Montreal Gazette.

Every one may see daily instances of people who complain from the mere habit of complaining.—Graves.

Just as you are pleased at finding faults, you are displeased at finding perfections.—Lavater.

LOVE'S OLD SWEET SONG

Once in the dear dead days beyond recall
When on the earth the Mists began to fall,
Out of the dreams that rose in happy throng,
Low to our hearts love sang an old sweet song;
And in the dusk, where fell the fire-light gleam,
Softly it wove itself into our dream.

Just a song at twilight, when the lights are low,
And the flickering shadows softly come and go,
Tho' the heart be weary, sad the day and long,
Still to us at twilight comes love's old song,
Comes love's old sweet song.

Even today we hear love's song of yore,
Deep in our hearts it dwells forever more,
Footsteps may falter, weary grow the way,
Still we can hear it at the close of day;
So till the end, when life's dim shadows fall,
Love will be found the sweetest song of all.

AFTER LISTENING TO MODERN SONGS OF LOVE broadcast over the other one's thoughts revert with thankfulness to such love songs as the above, full of feeling and the finest of emotion.

Of course we can hear the younger generation exclaiming "How old fashioned!" Sure, old fashioned, but modern love songs can not compare with "Annie Laurie", or even "Annie Rooney" of later date. Once in a while a real love song appears, but its popularity soon fades, apparently, backed off the stage by the latest jazz absurdity.

TORONTO TELEGRAM IS SIXTY YEARS OLD. Gosh what a youngster! When the Telly gets as old as the Ontario Intelligencer it can talk about a senior the Brockville Recorder Times which is older still—old in years, wisdom, and good fellowship, but young in ideas and energy. That goes for all three of us.

THE EYES OF THE WORLD HAVE BEEN ON MOOSE RIVER, Nova Scotia, where three men imprisoned in a mine for over a week were the central points of tragedy which has aroused the sympathy and interest of the world. Wives of two of the men anxiously waiting on the surface for the glad news that contact had been made with the imprisoned men and rescue was near. Miners and others worked feverishly night and day to defeat death which threatened in one of its most hideous forms. A group of reporters telling the world every incident and every important word uttered by those immediately concerned. Telegraph and telephone lines carrying the engrossing story, as well as the radio. Moose River has had its day in the sun.

ANOTHER DICTATOR IS SPILLING THE SOUP. Turkey is sending troops into the demilitarized zone along the Dardanelles. Not that that matters much in itself, for Turkey's Dictator was polite enough to ask the powers for permission to do this thing some time ago and would probably have received the consent of the League of Nations in the fulness of time. It is just the fact that another Dictator shows contempt for the League of Nations and can assume an attitude of "do as I do" and what are you going to do about it? With three European dictators strutting around with chips on their shoulders the dove of peace is certainly made very uncomfortable, to say the least.

A GLOWING TRIBUTE TO THE WORTH OF DR. ROBERTSON, of Toronto, who has become known to millions through his imprisonment in the mine at Moose River, Nova Scotia was paid at the Monday meeting of Belleville Rotary Club by Charles J. Symons, Chairman of the club's crippled children committee, and director of the Ontario Crippled Children's Association, who told of the great help Dr. Robertson had rendered the association in the care and cure of crippled children. He responded quickly and enthusiastically to every call of the children for medical help and many are living, cured and happy, who thank Dr. Robertson from the bottom of their hearts for bringing happiness back into otherwise drab and dreary lives. Dr. Robertson is a citizen Canada can be well proud of.

CIVILIZATION HAS COME TO ETHIOPIA WITH A BANG—with many bangs, and as the bombs drop on the capital, Addis Ababa, the simple folk of that land of The Lion of Judah, The King of Kings, Haille Selassie, otherwise known as John Hoy must wonder why their initiation into the higher civilization should be accompanied by such a hideous bath of blood, suffering and sacrifice.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

April 21, 1916.

The Rev. Canon Beamish, rector of St. Thomas' Church, will take the Three Hours Service at the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, Napanee, and the Rev. J. H. H. Coleman, Vicar of the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, will conduct a similar service in St. Thomas' Church here on Good Friday.

A very large number of residents of the city and surrounding country witnessed the presentation of the colors to the 80th Battalion which will leave shortly for overseas. The colors were the gift of the members of the Ketcheson family of Hastings County, in recognition of the fact that Lt. Col. W. G. Ketcheson, who for years was the commanding officer of the 49th Hastings Rifles, is the popular commanding officer of the 80th Battalion. The ceremony took place upon the parade ground in front of the armouries. After the royal salute had been given and the battalion of 1100 men inspected by Col. "F. D. R. Hemming, the colors were consecrated by the Rev. Canon Beamish, Rector of St. Thomas' Church. At the close of the consecration the presentation was made in a beautifully worded address by Miss Jessie Ketcheson, daughter of Mayor H. W. Ketcheson. Among those on the platform were Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Col. Hemming, Col. Ponton, Mayor H. W. Ketcheson, Lt. Col. Ketcheson, Reeve of Sidney Township, Mr. Thomas Ketcheson, Mr. Albert Ketcheson of Sidney Township, Mr. R. H. Ketcheson, Belleville, Mr. M. M. Chapman, County Clerk, Judge Deroche, Dr. Faulkner, Forfarer, Mr. John Elliott, Mrs. G. E. Deroche, Mrs. William Johnson and Miss Benjamin.

Mr. Harry Coon of this city has won the gold medal in navigation exams and has obtained also his M.A. degree at Queen's University. We extend our congratulations.

There is considerable activity about the docks at present, despite the fact that the prospects are not bright for a good season for a certain type of vessels owing to the coal strikes.

The steamer Aletha was the first vessel to arrive here this season.

The schooner Plunkett Miden with ice left yesterday for Charlotte.

The steamer Annie Lake has been repainted and is now ready for the season's work.

The schooner Two Brothers left today with a cargo of ice for Fair Haven.

The work of fitting out the government dredge, Sir Richard, and the scows is still in progress. Considerable repairs have been made.

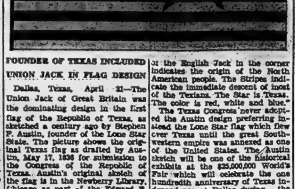
The sum of $7,013.20 tax money remains to be collected.

The Lake Shore Rooms at the Sand Bank will be opened for the season on Good Friday.



What kind of a celebration will Belleville have on May 24? It is time to get busy and do something regarding this matter.

The steamer Nellie Cuthbert took a load of freight to Deseronto and Napanee, and another to Picton today for Walmsley and Stafford's branch store there.

A meeting of the Board of Trade has been called to discuss the bridging of the bay.

The Dafoe House office has been kalsomined and re-papered. The room is much improved.

Mr. W. R. Smith, assistant to the county treasurer, and Mrs. Smith have returned to the city after being absent in the Old Country for six months. Their many friends welcome their return.

FOUNDER OF TEXAS INCLUDED UNION JACK IN FLAG DESIGN

Dallas, Texas, April 21—The Union Jack of Great Britain was the dominating design in the first flag of the Republic of Texas, as sketched a century ago by Stephen F. Austin, founder of the Lone Star State. The picture shows the original Texas flag as drafted by Austin, May 17, 1836 for submission to the Congress of the Republic of Texas. Austin's original sketch of the flag is in the Newberry Library, Chicago as part of the Edward E. Ayer collection of historical data.

In the sketch, handwriting he describes his Texas flag: "The shape is the English Jack in the corner indicates the origin of the North American people. The Stripes indicate the immediate descent of most of the Texians. The Star is Texas. The color is red, white and blue."

The Texas design never adopted and Austin design preferring instead the Lone Star flag which flew over Texas until the great South-western empire was annexed as one of the United States. The Austin sketch will be one of the historical exhibits at the $25,000,000 World's Fair which will celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of Texas Independence at Dallas during the coming summer. The Texas Centennial Exposition will open June 6.

TURKISH TROOPS ON MARCH AS ANOTHER TREATY BROKEN—This picture of modern Turkish soldiers on the march was taken several years ago, when Mustapha Kemal Ataturk's fighters were moving along the Greek border, while Greece was in the throes of serious internal contention. Late dispatches from Constantinople announced that Turkish troops were on both sides of the famous Dardanelles Straits. This region was demilitarized by the treaty of Lausanne.

PARIS CARDINALS PERFORM CEREMONY DATING TO LAST SUPPER.—A solemn ceremony took place in Notre Dame cathedral in Paris on Holy Thursday, when Cardinal Verdier washed the feet of eleven poor boys. This ceremony dates back to the Last Supper, when Jesus washed the feet of eleven Apostles, the twelfth, Judas, having left on his mission of betrayal. The washing-the-feet ceremony is performed every Holy Thursday by high Catholic cardinals in Europe and by the Pope himself in Rome.

BABY SHOWERS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My friends and neighbors are planning a baby shower for me. I would like to know in print a word of thanks and appreciation. Should I send each person a word of thanks, or just one note of thanks to the lady who is to have the party?

Reader.

You should write an especially appreciative note of thanks to the friend who plans this party for you. And then you should write a little note of thanks to each kind friend who brought you a shower present.

Your note to the hostess might be worded similar to this:

Dear Mary,

Thank you, thank you, for your wonderfully kind plan for giving the shower for me yesterday, and for the thoroughly charming party that you gave. You were a perfect hostess, and it was a memory-making party. I wish I could tell you how happy you made me! You're a grand friend, Mary.

Let's have a date soon, to talk over all the delightful details of the party. Do say when.

Dearest love to you, and deepest thanks to you.

Affectionately.

The other notes of thanks might read:

Dear Betty,

Such a friend you are, such a thoughtful friend. . . And such a perfect gift you gave me for the baby-to-come!

I'm thrilled with the thought of how sweet my baby is going to look in the adorable little dress that you gave him-or-her. It's so sheer, so delicate, so exquisite — just the thing for a new baby. Bless you for your goodness and thought for both my baby and me.

Dozens love to you, and a heart full of thanks.

Affectionately.

WEDDING ANNOUNCEMENTS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I would like to know the correct wording for wedding announcements. I am divorced and I have made my home with my mother for two years. Should Mrs. precede the bride's name? Is that optional?

Which is better — Mrs. Helen Brown Smith or Mrs. Albert Charles Smith announces the marriage of her sister or Kathrine Brown Jones or Kathrine Mary Jones to Mr. Paul Holmes Murray — on and so forth.

T.

If you are making your home with your sister and her husband, the announcement should be worded in both their names:

Mr. and Mrs. John Thomas Smith have the honour of announcing the marriage of their sister Katherine Brown Johnson to

Mr. Peter Hirdon Mitchell on Tuesday, the first of May Nineteen hundred and thirty-six Brooklyn, New York.

If you wish, the second and third lines may be condensed to read:

announce the marriage of their sister,

It is not necessary to use the Mrs. before the name of the bride, when announcing her second marriage.

In the case of the divorcee is usually the combination of the first and last name of her maiden name and the last name of her husband name.

If your sister's husband is not living, her name reads: Mrs. John Charles Smith.

Advice to the Lovelorn
By Beatrice Fairfax

She's What You Call a "Slow Freight" Lover

Dear Miss Fairfax:

This is the sixth year I've gone with this one girl, but for the past six months things have not been going satisfactorily for me. During this six years, until lately, she'd tell me every time she went out with another man, and ask me to forgive her. But now she goes and goes — to dances, theatres, supper parties, automobile rides — and accepts no explanation, and tells me to do the same.

I don't go to dances, because I don't know how to dance, but I'm dead keen on dancing. When I see her with other friends, she comes up and speaks and is very nice, and wants me to go with other girls. But then I don't care for her alone.

Should I keep on seeking at it? I love her!

John P. J.

You tell me you are learning to dance. Why not, at the same time, learn to make love — at more than a snail's pace? To keep a girl dangling for six years paid you in the dance of what value — if any girl nowadays could call a "slow-footed" beau?

If you have any intention of marrying this girl, better lose no time in telling her. Then you'll actively set long to court a girl without coming to her apartment to dance with her.

This girl deserves a young man along himself. J.

The Days Are So Much Alike

Dear Miss Fairfax:

When I married, I expected to do all my work — washing, ironing, sewing, mending. But have been told and under the doctor's care, though I am better now. I want you to give me some suggestion as to how I can break the monotony of housework.

I love my husband and my little girl, devotedly, but am so lonely. I rarely like every other day! And I crave something to read, but can't. I crave something to look forward to, hence interest in food and cooking. The baby is small, and of course I have to keep her with me. My husband works fifteen hours a day, and we can't be together very much. Do we try to make the best of the little time he is at home?

I'm a proud old, and would appreciate any suggestions you could make.

A Reader.

If you are good at organization, you might start a housekeeper's club in your neighborhood. The members could be invited at your own home, and you and the other women could help each other with your problems, winding up with some delicious refreshment such as tea and sandwiches, or a fruit punch, to add a little air of festivity.

Certain correspondents of mine, who have tried this scheme out successfully, arrange for one neighbor to take charge of all the babies and younger children during the meeting. Next time that neighbor is free to park her own youngsters on the nursery matron of the day, and so on in rotation. You can also try this scheme for going to the movies, after the supper dishes are washed.

If you're fond of reading, you can get books from the Public Library. You can also see what activities your church has to offer. You don't let yourself grow stale!

Mrs. Lost Twenty Pounds on Account of Her

Dear Miss Fairfax:

All of a sudden, after thinking I were engaged, each one would break off definitely. She sanded something that I just couldn't stand to give her — a very expensive ring. She admitted herself that I was too busy and good-natured, even though I couldn't afford to give her the ring on which she had set her heart. Since she has dropped me I have been terribly pounded by weight, and I can't stop sleep. I worry over the loss of her all the time.

I used to wait for her outside the place where she worked, but she stopped speaking to me. I told her if she treated me that way, I would do something desperate. She has told a friend to say that she doesn't love me. Is there any way of winning her love?

Desolate.

At the moment, my dear boy, you will probably not like what I am going to say, but I think that you made a lucky escape from the fair young cold-digger. A blonde, I strongly suspect. Doubtless it was a quarrel-diamond, for you could not afford to give her, and who broke with you on that account.

I'll admit there's a certain glamour about these gold-digging girls that they are many lovely and unselfish girls in the world pining for love in little attention. Let's hope you find the right one.

Lena.

Who Should Write First?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been engaged for three weeks and I thought surely my fiance's mother would write to me, but she has not done so. I'm not standing on ceremony, but I thought I'm glad to write to her, but I have the feeling that perhaps I may not be welcome in the family. It's an very worrying.

Lena.

It all depends on the type of woman your prospective mother-in-law happens to be. If she is a woman of the world and acquainted with the etiquette of the day, she will expect you to write first. But if she's her place to write first. But if she's a simple, old-fashioned soul, she may not know the While Lights, and she may not know that it's up to her to write first to her prospective daughter-in-law.

Some people do not always occur through malice, but often because they are thoughtless. Let's hope that your worry-wise folk do under the circumstances. You might write her a note and find out for your fiance put it in his next home letter. This will accomplish what you desire, if she's the right sort.

Good Eyesight Essential To Beauty as to Health

By HELEN FOLLETT

THERE IS a growing interest in eye make-up, but glamorous pigment is no help if a girl suffers from eye strain. Here we are back to first principles, therefore, a book on how to do with health, vitality and hygiene.

Impaired eyesight can bring along a whole parade of griefs it is no exaggeration to say. Headache and irritability, not to mention grouches. It may even have a direct effect upon the appetite. It is a common cause of frowns, and even when those furrows are there, they are not easy ousted. There is no magic smoothing cream for deep wrinkles.

If eyes are really have them examined by an M.D. Do not prescribe glasses, don't make it from such a book you won't want them. You can't buy new eyes as you can buy a new hat, so take care of your best-sighted.

Treat your eyes with consideration. Bathe them night and morning, using a mild eye lotion with cold. When subjected to a dusty atmosphere, use often a boric acid solution bath. Don't rub them. Don't let anyone fool you into using eye exercises; only medical men know about that. See that the light is right for reading, and that you don't read on trains and don't sew in a dim light.

Seed acne consists of tiny whiteheads that appear usually around the eyes, and are due to a form of seborrhea, sebaceous substance backs up into a hard, beadlike mass. The external application will have any effect. The skin surface should be washed over with alcohol, using small raised spot sits with a fine needle that has been sterilized (hold the point in a flame) and the small plug removed. Pressure does not anything and may cause an irritation. After the removal use alcohol again.

It is a grave mistake to monkey with home-made hair dyes. Coloring preparations are the toughest problem faced by the cosmetic chemist, so how can an amateur expect to be successful!

After selecting a proprietory article, clip off a strand of hair and do a bit of experimenting. See if the color is right before subjecting your tresses bale to the presto-change act. An even better way is to have professional test attention. The trouble with home dyeing is that one can't see to do the work properly and, oftimes, the application must be made quickly if there is to be an even tint.

Women's Meetings

SHANNONVILLE W.M.S.

The regular monthly meetige of the W.M.S. of Shannonville United Church met at the home of Mrs. Arthur Emmerson, with a splendid sermon with thirty-one ladies in attendance. Mrs. Arthur Emmerson presided, took charge of the meeting which opened by singing a hymn and all repeated the Lord's prayer. The Scripture lesson from the fourth chapter of Ephesians was read by Miss Ila Robertson. The devotional leaflet was read by Mrs. Robertson and also led in prayer. The roll was then called by the secretary, members responding by repeating a Bible verse containing the word "love." Mrs. A. Blount and Mrs. Hall an appropriate reading on the same subject. The minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary and adopted. The Watch Towers was then taken. Miss Florence Terry reporting for West Ohina, Miss Dorcas Hoskin for West Africa. Mrs. Phil Knight gave the Canadian report and Mrs. Chas. Liddle, piano secretary, gave a solo. Mrs. Emmerson then led in prayer and all repeated the Mispah Benediction. The hostess and her assistants served a delicious social time was enjoyed over the tea cups.

ST. ANDREW'S GLIDE W.M.S.

The April meeting of the W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. Fred Belcanquel with attendance of 15.

The meeting was opened by music played softly followed by the call to worship and prayer by the president, Mrs. James Huffman. A hymn was then sung, followed by the call of the Scripture lesson was read alternately, Verna Huffman read the devotional entitled "He Had Compassion," and the roll call was answered by a verse of Scripture containing the word praise. A duet was read by Mrs. F. Belcanquel. Business then followed. It was decided to have a travelling apron made and passed from house to house to make money. Plans were made for making missionary quilt.

Music by the Junior Mrs. Fred York Distributed answers to answer questions on "Reasons for not taking in work for missions". Mrs. Walter Trevorton read a reading entitled "Why are we afraid of being", Mrs. Hubbie favored with a solo. Mrs. Wilmot Clare gave a temperature reading. Mrs. E. Yorks and Mrs. Belcanquel gave a talk about the convension held recently at Belleville. Hymn was sung, Mrs. Belcanquel closed the meeting with prayer. The business served lunch and a social half hour was spent.

W.M.S.

The April meeting of the Centenary W.M.S. was held on Thursday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Allens. The President, Mrs. R. Hoffman, in the chair, opened with 151 for the opening hymn and Mrs. Hall led in prayer. The Scripture lesson in Luke was read alternately by the members. Rev. Mr. Pearl and Vera Pearl sang very sweetly together.

Mrs. Hart, Group leader, then took charge of the programme. Hymn 186 was sung and Rev. Mr. Pearl led in prayer.

Mrs. James Ashley read 182d chapter of Mark, for the Scripture lesson and Miss Hazel Keene gave a reading. Mrs. Mr. Hoffman and Mrs. Gasg, Mrs. D. Hotton read a paper on "The Other Two". Mrs. Phillips gave an appropriate reading. Mrs. Hart, Group leader, then took Mrs. Vera Ray, missionary in Kobe, Nigeria, Africa, as her subject. Mrs. Hart, W. Ray, which was very interesting, full of news of her work and the habits of the natives among whom she labors. Meeting closed with hymn 197 and prayer by Rev. Pearl.

SHANNONVILLE W.M.S.

The June Sunday service at the Shannonville United Church was well attended. The church was decorated with flowers, prominent among which were those of the Iris. The W.M.S. ladies sat together in the centre aisle. The Mission Band members were also seated together. After the opening hymn and prayer by Mrs. (Rev.) Clarke, president, led in the responsive service using the printed programme. Miss Ila Hoskin read the Scripture Lesson and several members repeated verses in answer to the roll call for the Easter thought. The Mission Band members then took their places in the front left. The boys and girls in the front row each gave a recitation. Jessie Hoskin, Dorcas, holding a bouquet of each kind mentioned in the recitation. Then the members joined in singing a pretty chorus which delighted the congregation. Mrs. Clarke, who played the piano accompaniment and Mrs. Dacon Hinchey, Mission Band leader deserve great credit for training the Mission Band to take their part so well. Rev. Clark gave a very helpful Easter message. The W.M.S. Easter offering was $24.46.

CENTENARY W.A.

The Women's Association of Centenary church met at the home of Mrs. Roy Badgley.

During the evening, Miss Doris Knapp gave a selection of instrumental music and Mrs. Lorne Knapp at the piano for the hearty singing of old songs beginning with, "Auld Lang Syne" and "Jesus Loves Me". Mrs. Lois Knapp and Miss Margie Knapp contributed a duet and was also the solo by Miss Margie Knapp.

At the close of the programme the guests were invited to enjoy a buffet supper. Mrs. Lorne Knapp and Mrs. Samuel Knapp pouring the coffee. The table was decorated with daffodils and ivory candles, the centrepiece being a lily-of-the-valley wedding cake with its twenty-five candles. Mrs. Badgley wore the locket that had been worn by her by her husband at the time of their wedding and a corsage of roses, his gift to her for the anniversary of their wedding day.

At the cutting of the wedding cake, Rev. Mr. Clarke proposed a toast to Mr. and Mrs. Badgley, speaking of the pleasure it was to celebrate with the friend and neighbor this happy occasion. He spoke also of their long interest and help in all the work of the church. Mrs. Roy Badgley being organist for so many years and even forgot you altogether for long periods.

I see them all the time, these dotting mothers who owe never kept their hands off their children's hair. So Willie or Susan, and just entirely by the plotters as children have so love to do. First they must remove Susan's coat, although it was quite all right as it was; then they must smooth her hair, a task far surpassed by the removal of her hat; next, a whisper, a squeeze, and Susan is dismissed by a reminder to sit up straight.

Dislike Nagging

A smudge is found on Willie's collar. Susan must be spied upon at once: Susan's hair ribbon is crooked: Willie's socks have come down — those faults being corrected, but without squirms and murmured protests. Susan's sash is tied in a tender caress, which to her hurt surprise is resolved by a quick withdrawal and a sharp, "Aw, can't you leave me alone, mother?"

Mother cannot understand, and learns nothing from Susan's reproach, except that they have to have patience with small children, and must try not to mind their rudeness and ingratitude. They don't know any better, poor little things.

Yet, mother doesn't like it when Susan, having only just shut all morning, refusing to go off and play when mother is trying to get something done around the house. She finds it irritating when Susan insists upon climbing all over her when she is dressed to go out.

THE MOST SENSATIONAL TOOTHPASTE DISCOVERY IN 20 YEARS!

THE NEW "SUPER-SOFT" HIGH-POLISH PEPSODENT!

Just Out — No increase in price

The world over there's nothing remotely like Pepsodent's new $200,000 toothpaste formula. Contains a sensational new ingredient—utterly different in its cleansing power—utterly exciting because it gives your teeth the most brilliant polish ever discovered—and it is Super-Soft!

1 HIGH-POLISHES TEETH TO TWICE THE BRILLIANCE—SAFELY

Yes, the new $200,000 Pepsodent high-polishes teeth to twice the brilliance—safely! Dentists' tests show it. Feel the difference with your tongue. Feel the difference in your hands. Actual tests on living human mouths show it. Most tests on long-suffering dentifrices, according to findings of Dentist-working laboratories, are made on teeth known in advance to be perfect. Not Pepsodent! Pepsodent's tests are made on human mouths!

2 MAKES TEETH LOOK WHITER TWICE AS LONG—SAFELY

Yes, Pepsodent makes teeth look whiter twice as long—safely! And yet new dentistry proves it's twice as soft, hence doubly safe on precious tooth enamel.

What's more, this new ingredient, in combination with Pepsodent's other ingredients, provides an improved polishing agent that makes dingy teeth gleam gloriously when you use Pepsodent with regular, brief finger massage. We say it! You see it! Now Super-Soft High-Polish Pepsodent Tooth Paste gives you the value of any cautery dentistry. Get a tube today—look for the words "New High-Polish" on the Pepsodent Toothpaste box.

3 GIVES THIS SAFETY—BECAUSE TWICE AS SOFT

100,000 tiny bristles on metal plate softer than your teeth! grow Pepsodent Toothpaste leaves no soft tooth particles. Pepsodent Toothpaste is super-soft, therefore super-safe, even for children's teeth, and for gums so tender they bleed easily!

See the difference when you really High-Polish your teeth!

● The scientists shook their heads. "Not bush," they said. "Not Super-Soft and High-Polish. Toothpaste don't come that way. You're asking for a miracle, lady. Sorry, but — "

Keep on they did—for 14 years. Spend money they did—$200,000. And found at last the thing they said they couldn't find—the miracle! The new ingredient! A blend of the Super-Soft and High-Polish. A soothpaste that gives your mouth the greatest brave ever knows—and does it with tooth safety!

Pepsodent scientists found this way to make mouth safe and gleam with greater brilliance — and without slightest danger of injury to mouth enamel . . . when they discovered an amazing new ingredient. One never before used in a dentifrice. One that gave them the answer.

This ingredient is the secret of the astounding polishing powers, the phenomenal cleansing action of Pepsodent's new toothpaste. It makes teeth twice as bright . . . keeps them looking whiter, like-for, twice as long. And yet tests definitely prove it's twice as soft, hence doubly safe on precious tooth enamel.

Dentist-working laboratories, according to findings of Dentist-working laboratories, are made on teeth known in advance to be perfect. Not Pepsodent! Pepsodent's tests are made on human mouths!

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Allens on Thursday for its April meeting. Twenty members sat down to a much appreciated dinner at noon. Three visitors were present, Mrs. Bird of Frankford; Mrs. Robertson of Belleville and Mrs. Hamilton of Stone Church. Mrs. Allens, the President opened the meeting with the "Praise God from Whom all blessings flow" and Mrs. Allen led in prayer followed by the Lord's prayer in unison. Hymn 362 was sung and Mrs. D. Ruttan read a reading, followed by a poem sung by Mrs. Allen "A Little Way". It was decided to buy a piano for the church and the ladies are working on a patchwork quilt for sale, having sold two all ready. Much business was transacted and the meeting closed with Mizpah Benediction.

Celebrate Silver Wedding Jubilee

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Badgley, Melrose, Honored by Friends

The 25th old home of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene M. Badgley on the Third Concession of Tyendinaga, at Melrose, was the scene on Monday evening, April 13th, of a happy gathering when friends and neighbors gathered to offer to Mr. and Mrs. Badgley their congratulations on the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage. On April 13th, 1911, Mrs. Badgley was married to Miss Dawn of Selby at the home of the bride's parents in Richmond township.

For this silver anniversary of their wedding day, their home was filled to welcome of its brightness, and the guests were received by Mr. and Mrs. Badgley and by Mrs. Badgley's mother, Mrs. A. Dawn, of Selby.

Those present were Rev. W. H. and Mrs. Allen, Mrs. Alex. Wilson of Napanee; Mr. and Mrs. W. W. McCabe and Donald, of Stirling; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Knapp, and their daughter, Miss Doris Knapp of Picton; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Knapp and their children, Stella, Mr. and Mrs. Lois Knapp, Gene and Richard of "Napanee; from Selby, Mr. and Mrs. James Dawn and Mrs. Stillman Badgley and Mr. and Mrs. George Badgley and from Melrose, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Blatchwick and Mrs. Marion Blatchwick, and Mr. and Mrs. Clifton.

Not Wise to Fuss Over A Child

Nagged Too Much He Becomes Irritable, Says Miss Granelle

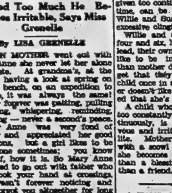
By LISA GRENELLE

WENNY MOTHER went out with Mary Anne she never let her alone a minute. At grandma's, at the movies, having a look at spring on a park bench, on an expedition to the zoo, it was always the same! Mother forever was patting, pulling and straightening, whispering and signaling — never a second's peace.

Mary Anne very fond of mother and appreciated her good intentions. But the girl likes to be left alone sometimes; you know yourself, how it is. So Mary Anne was forced to go out with Mother, the only took your hand at crossings. Even then, however, mother would even forgot you altogether for long periods.

I see them all the time, these doting mothers who owe never kept their hands off their children's hair. So Willie or Susan, and just entirely by the plotters as children have so love to do. First they must remove Susan's coat, although it was quite all right as it was; then they must smooth her hair, a task far surpassed by the removal of her hat; next, a whisper, a squeeze, and Susan is dismissed by a reminder to sit up straight.

Dislike Nagging



A smudge is found on Willie's collar. Susan must be spied upon at once: Susan's hair ribbon is crooked: Willie's socks have come down — those faults being corrected, but without squirms and murmured protests. Susan's sash is tied in a tender caress, which to her hurt surprise is resolved by a quick withdrawal and a sharp, "Aw, can't you leave me alone, mother?"

Mother cannot understand, and learns nothing from Susan's reproach, except that they have to have patience with small children, and must try not to mind their rudeness and ingratitude. They don't know any better, poor little things.

Yet, mother doesn't like it when Susan, having only just shut all morning, refusing to go off and play when mother is trying to get something done around the house. She finds it irritating when Susan insists upon climbing all over her when she is dressed to go out.

CABLE-LOMBARD LATEST ROMANCE—Filmland's latest romance, so rumor says, began when Carole Lombard, film actress, sent the handsome screen star, Clark Cable, a unique Valentine, an old broken-down limb, festooned with paper hearts. But this is the first time they've been pictured in public. Even their friends didn't know where they did their evening-hiding-out. The inquiring cameraman discovered them at the rail at the midget auto races.

MAKING BROOMS NEW INDUSTRY IN BELLEVILLE

Belleville has a new industry, not a large one, to be sure, but one which contributes to the well-being of many in that it manufactures brooms of all kinds, also whisks and mops. Great oaks from little acorns grow, a well known fact, is often duplicated in the business world where a small business grows to large proportions, slowly and gradually, while some large business enterprises begun with much bluster and bragging often crumbles and collapses from its own top-heavy weight.

However, this will introduce the Belleville Broom Works, located at 61 Church Street, satisfied to start in a modest way with high hopes for future expansion. Mr. L. Drummond, well and favorably known in many in this district, is the executive head of the concern, while Mr. George Johnson is the expert in charge of production.

Mr. Johnson is an expert broom-maker, and was for several years engaged as teacher of blind operatives in a broom factory operated by blind workmen at Montreal. It is within the bounds of possibility, in Mr. Johnson's opinion, that in the not distant future Belleville brooms will be sweeping the country. Here's hoping for a growing prosperity for the new venture.

HOLE IN THE DOUGHNUT WENT RIGHT THROUGH

And Try 'Til Golden Brown

"DO YOU remember hanging around the kitchen stove when there was a child, watching the doughnuts turn to golden golden circles in the bubbling fat? Do you remember begging to have the "holes" fried for you? How even these doughnuts smelled and tasted! Our Testing and Testing Kitchens at the Institute seem still to be children, for when the first fragrance of frying doughnuts begins to float out from the kitchens, they are all hand in full force. Indeed all tried food is carefully tried, they emerge crisp and golden brown from the kettle of hot fat.

However, there are a few secrets —very simple ones—in the making of wholesome tooth-some doughnuts. First of all, be sure you use a fat that does not smoke at the right frying temperature, which is quite high—from 370 to 390 degrees. Then, DON'T GUESS AT THIS TEMPERATURE. Use a fat thermometer to determine it, as it is most important to have the fat very hot (but not hot enough to burn), for if the fat is not hot enough you have soaked, indigestible food. Fried foods are wholesome if properly fried. Finally, drain the fat after each frying and store in a covered container; then you can use the same fat again and again.—Good Housekeeping Magazine.

MRS. AITKEN WILL REVEAL SECRETS OF SUPERFINE COOKING

The people of Belleville and district are to have the opportunity of hearing one of Canada's most interesting speakers, as well as one of our international famous women, when Mrs. H. M. Aitken holds a cooking school at the Capitol Theatre Friday afternoon, April 24th.

The cooking school is sponsored by The Canada Starch Company, who also sponsor Mrs. Aitken in her work over the air. Mrs. Aitken comes under the auspices of the Women's Association of the Bridge Street United Church and the entire proceeds of the small admittance charge will be used by that body to assist them in their work.

Among the many exciting and interesting experiences enjoyed by Mrs. Aitken in her world travels, and about which she will speak at the cooking school—was a special and exclusive interview with Premier Mussolini of Italy. This occurred a number of years ago, when Mrs. Aitken was lecturing in Europe for the Canadian Department of Agriculture. The Italian Minister of Agriculture and Mrs. Aitken flew from Geneva to Rome—with a flowed landing in Roumania on the way. Here, together with the subject matter of transporting Canadian feed wheat to Italy, Her story of that interview is only one of the intensely thrilling episodes which Mrs. Aitken will relate on Friday.

As a food expert, Mrs. Aitken is famous. Having lectured in the United States, Great Britain and Europe, Here in Canada, she is known from coast to coast, and is a well known, especially in connection with her radio broadcasts which are heard from Montreal, Toronto, and CROO, Ottawa, each Tuesday and Thursday at 10.30 a.m. and each Saturday afternoon at 1.30.

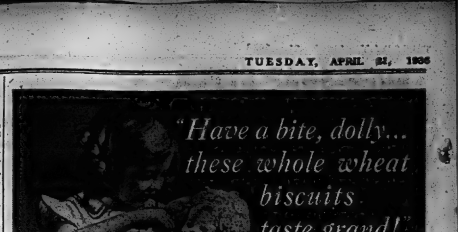
An attendance that will crowd the Capitol Theatre is expected to enjoy this unique and highly interesting event.

At Mrs. Aitken's cooking school there will be a number of interesting prizes given away to lucky program holders. In addition to the giving away of the actual food she cooks, on the stage, there will be a number of prize packages of Canada Starch products, including EDWARDSBURG CROWN BRAND CORN SYRUP, BENSON'S CORN STARCH, and MAZOLA, the famous Salad and Cooking oil.

CHATTERTON W.M.S.

Thursday evening, April 16th, the Chatterton W.M.S. presented an Easter pageant in the Marsh Hill United Church. Visitors from Foxboro and Scott's auxiliaries were present. The president Mrs. W. Chatterton opened the service by all singing a hymn followed by prayer by Mrs. (Rev.) Horton. Mrs. M. Silas of Scott's delivered a few remarks in her usual pleasing manner. This was followed by the pageant "Welcome Happy Morning" by Miss Duncan Yule.

Characters as follows:



Spirit of Easter Joy: Miss Eileen Horton; Spirit of the Garden, Spirit Angel of His Holy Hill: Miss Leila Horton; Mary, mother of James: Alison Vanderwater; Salome: Mrs. A. Turner; Joanna: Mrs. G. Coulter; Mary Magdalene: Mrs. A. Campbell; The Church: Mrs. R. Mills; Youth: Miss B. Bleecker; Service: Mrs. E. B. Finkle; Three Cadetes: Mrs. Shillinger, Mrs. Dafoe, Mrs. Heasman. The early Christians were Messrs. R. Campbell, A. Finkle, G. Frederick, L. Finkle and F. Lindenfield. The roles were rendered by Miss A. Horton, Miss B. Bleecker, Mrs. F. Campbell, Mrs. F. Lindfield and Mr. G. Demill. The choir also assisted with Mrs. J. Frederick at the piano throughout the entire programme.

The pageant was truly beautiful. Rev. Horton spoke a few words of thanks to the ladies after which lunch was served which brought a very pleasant evening to a close. The proceeds were very gratifying.

O.S.D. PRINCIPAL KIND HEARTED

Lifts Sentence Imposed So That Boys Could See Charlie Chaplin

Interesting facts about the Ontario School for the Deaf were told Belleville Rotarians Monday at the luncheon meeting by a fellow member, Rotarian "Bill" Morrison, Superintendent of the School. Incidentally he told of the presentment of a class of boys who had been sentenced to confinement to grounds because of some infraction of the rules—and given the privilege of Chaplin films as they did want to see Charlie. So, a deputation was sent to Principal Morrison asking that the punishment be lifted and the boys permitted to see their favorite actor who is the world's best silent comedian. Permission was granted and the boys flocked to the theatre. An added thrill to the performance was a contest staged by the theatre management with prizes for the best amateur imitation on the stage of Charlie Chaplin. When the contest ended first and second prizes were awarded pupils of the O.S.D.

Briefly sketching the history of the Ontario School for the Deaf, the speaker paid a high tribute to the work of the late Dr. Coughlin, superintendent of the O.S.D. for 32 years, and described the improved methods which had been adopted under his management—also paying a tribute to the efforts of Miss Ford, who spent a year in the Northampton, Mass., School for the Deaf, perhaps the best equipped and advanced in the world, for the purpose of acquiring advanced knowledge to be used here. Dr. Mathison's twenty-seven years' service was also touched upon, and the causes and events, which led to the change from sign teaching to that of oral.

Keeping children happy in school and teaching them in such manner that their lives beyond school days would be happy should be the aim of all modern teaching according to the speaker, who said, that the humiliation of the Dunce's Cap was a relic of the dark ages no longer countenanced in modern teaching.

sation. The order-in-council proclaiming it on Aug. 1 has been passed.

One of the most important changes this Act will make will be to protect Canadian Great Lakes shipping from United States competition. It is believed it will prevent United States boats from carrying grain from the head of the lakes to Montreal.

The Shipping Act now in force was inspired by the fact that it provided that a foreign boat could not carry goods or passengers from one Canadian port to another Canadian port. However it did not prevent foreign vessels from United States boats could load at Port Arthur or Fort William, transship into other boats at Georgian Bay and send their cargo to Montreal.

Before the Welland Canal was completed Canadian big upper-lake boats also transhipped into smaller barges at the Soo or Lake Erie so United States shipping was on an equal footing in transhipping at Buffalo.

PERCY PARKER DIES

Toronto, April 21.—(CP)—Percival Parker, 64, Canadian Great Lakes captain, circles, W. R. Perry, Parker and Co., died this morning in his 45th year. Mr. Parker took ill with pneumonia last Thursday and was rushed to hospital where he died at 10 o'clock this morning.

Mr. Parker was senior partner in the law firm of Parker, Clark and Hart. He was also President of the Ontario Liberal Association. He had been an organizer of the party for years.

SHIPPING ACT TO COME INTO FORCE

Order-in-Council Passed to Make it Legal on August 1

Ottawa, April 21.—(CP)— The Canada Shipping Act, one of the most important measures ever passed by the Canadian parliament will come into force on Aug. 1, Marine Minister Howe, stated last night. Amendments will be made meantime to meet some of the objections leveled at the measure by shipping fishermen.

The Act, after two years study, passed through parliament in 1934 with little opposition. One of its provisions was that it would come into effect only on proclamation. The order-in-council proclaiming it on Aug. 1 has been passed.

One of the most important changes this Act will make will be to protect Canadian Great Lakes shipping from United States competition. It is believed it will prevent United States boats from carrying grain from the head of the lakes to Montreal.

The Shipping Act now in force was inspired by the fact that it provided that a foreign boat could not carry goods or passengers from one Canadian port to another Canadian port. However it did not prevent foreign vessels from United States boats could load at Port Arthur or Fort William, transship into other boats at Georgian Bay and send their cargo to Montreal.

Before the Welland Canal was completed Canadian big upper-lake boats also transhipped into smaller barges at the Soo or Lake Erie so United States shipping was on an equal footing in transhipping at Buffalo.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied by Biggar and Crawford by Financial Service.

Nemenda

Concluding a 5-page analysis on Canada Malting, Limited, Greenshields & Co., state: "In reviewing our conditions of control, the shares of this company as a sound investment and an attractive short term speculation. Earnings estimates are influenced not only by the physical aspects of the company's plant but even more by certain intangibles. The most important of these is the perception has reflected management and direction of a very high order."

Development work on the lowest level has proven the downward extension of high grade ore bodies found in upper levels. Width and general physical conditions of the lowest level workings definitely indicate continuity of the rich veins to the bottom of the property. An important deposits in the Greenstone formation, a considerable distance south of the rich contact-zones explored through the present 1,000 foot level.

Consolidated Paper Corporation's possibilities, official sources state, should place the company in a position of capacity are now being given serious attention.

Accordingly, no options expressed by well informed mining people are lying on the market. Prospects are, recent discoveries and mining progress at the Dickson warrant special consideration.

Dome Mines Report

Statement for first three months of current year, after depreciation at $1,738,097 from the sale of 30,020 ounces of gold obtained from the treatment of 120,300 tons of ore. Estimated operating profit of $951,513 before depreciation, depletion and adjustments. Non-operating income of $106,997 increased profits-to $1,068,511 for the quarter.

Malrobie Mines Acquire Interest in Idaho Property

In view of the many enquiries Financial Service has received with reference to Malrobie Mines, the following official information giving the latest developments of the company will be of interest to shareholders.

A controllable amount of work is now being carried on, adjacent to Malrobie Mines property, and it is the intention to further explore this holding when the season opens up. A comprehensive geological survey of this district indicates that important strikes are located within the Malrobie property.

A meeting of shareholders of the company recently authorized an agreement with Golden Eagle Mines, whereby properties are in Idaho, U.S.A., whereby Malrobie agrees to purchase 50,000 for one weigment for a one-sixth interest, with the right to purchase an additional $20,000 for a further one-sixth interest. The first $10,000 will constitute definitive evidence of commercial ore in profitable quantity shall be developed on the property, the second $10,000 can be called for. Three cents per share to be repaid out of 50% of the net profits, until all has been refunded. Other 50% to be retained as working capital, after which profits will be divided retrospectively.

The following information with reference to Golden Eagle Mines should prove of interest:—

The property, which consists of 5 patented claims, 13 unpatented claims and 8 fractions, comprising a total of about 350 acres, and is situated in Custer County, Idaho. Assessment claims of approximately the same area, which are applied for, are located some 16 miles from Ketchum, Idaho. From Ketchum, which is reached by a U. S. "all year" main highway, which runs south to Salt Lake City, the property is reached by an excellent trunk road which passes within a few hundred feet of another 2 miles distant, is reached by a road which is passable for motor cars for the operation of a caterpillar.

The Canadian Budget is expected to be brought down in Parliament around May 5th and little change in the present tariff is expected. Further changes in the tariff resulting from the reports of the Tariff Board on the automobile and gasoline investigation is anticipated while other changes will arise from the trade pact to meet the complaints of Canadian magazine publishers and of Canadian potato growers.

The local market is not expected to do a great deal in either direction on the announcement of the Budget. The failure of brokers' loans to increase is regarded with the expansion of market interest which would be the outcome of the technical position of the market is sound and urgent liquidation is not in prospect.

Canadian Dredge and Dock has made considerable progress in the last twelve months. In 1935, the directors distributed $3 a share on its dividends and future payments will be on a semi-annual basis. There is every reason to anticipate constructive dividend action this year particularly when it is considered that the company now has $1,000,000 in signed contracts on hand. Canadian Dredge is said-

"Dizzy" Dean Checks In With First Win of Season

By ANDY CLARKE
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Philadelphia Athletics and St. Louis Browns, American League underdogs, are covering today after having jumped into the win column for the first time, in the new season.

Both with five straight defeats against them, they took the field yesterday to top two of the mighty members of the junior circuit, Athletics, displaying artillery reminiscent of a better day, downed New York Yankees, 16-11, while the Browns defeated the champion Detroit Tigers 9-6; belting Tommy Bridges and Schoolboy Rowe from the box in the process.

These upstarts were the prime features of a day in which Pittsburgh Pirates (1) just ended the Jerry Hoyt jinx that had held over them and Dizzy Dean, although touched for nine hits, recorded his first victory of the season.

It took a pinch single by Lovitle Dean, with the bases loaded in the ninth, to bring the victory sailor to the lean favorite of Cleveland Jack. The A's bamboozled Walter Brown and Tommy Bridges for 16 hits yesterday, they were forced to outscore the Yanks, who rebounded to slaughter off the shoots of Doyle and Turbeville.

Browns Win in Two Frames

The Browns were trailing 4-3 going into the seventh inning when they combined their hits and batted in a total of nine runs in two innings. The eight didn't help the condition of Manager Mike Orchenes of the Tigers, who was out of the lineup suffering from eye strain.

Tommy Bridges retreated to the showers under that seventh inning shelling but Schoolboy Rowe, who has pitched the only two games the Tigers have won, also suffered a similar fate in the eighth. Moe Mogeal and Clarence Phillips were duty on the hill for the Tigers before the end came.

Homer Helps Pirates

A mighty home run clout by Gus Suhr, captain and first baseman of the Pirates, was necessary to banish the jinx that has seen Manager Hoyt's mates lose every game played with the Pirates. Suhr's homer, the seventh of the season, came in the first inning with two mates on the base and two out in the last half of the ninth and gave the Pirates a 5-4 margin over the Reds.

It was a fitting end to the reign of Benchley who with a two run margin was confident he was starting on where he left off last year, Hendrick yielded 14 hits, while Pittsburgh Paul Young also hitting for the circuit Chuck Klein got his fourth homer of the season for the Cubs.

Dean had longer journey than that to thank for his first victory, an 8-7 win, over Cincinnati Reds. The Cards scored five runs in a ninth inning rally that was started by Frankie Frisch, who batted a double to send home three runs. An error and a single by Ducky Medwick accounted for two more and the fifth counter. Of the nine hits against Dizzy, one was a homer by Lonnie Frey, one a triple and three were doubles.

Boston Split Twin Bill

In the first doubleheader of the season, Washington Senators and Boston Red Sox broke even, the Sox winning the first game 6-5 and losing the second 6-3. Pyle Appleton spiked the guns of the Red Sox in the afternoon game, allowing Chicago five hits. Bill Dinks and Jimmie Foxx each connected for homers in the morning game.

The four-hit pitching of Vernon Kennedy was the feature of the White Sox's 5-1 win over the Indians, while Boston Bees threw George Earnshaw from the mound as they took an 8-4 decision from Brooklyn Dodgers. Four straight hits topped by Moore's homer spelled Earnshaw's downfall. The Giants dropped their first game in six starts to the Phillies 7-4, despite Mel Ott's homer with two on in the ninth.

Sports Roundup

City Eddie Brietz (Associated Press Sports Writer) New York, April 21 (AP)—What's going on in sports? . . . Well, for one thing, the hottest wrassling we in years is brewing . . . all because Ding Bodack dropped Dazzo O'Mahoney and won the heavyweight title; when he wasn't supposed to. Whether Ding got his dyspepsia crossed, or just decided to give the "trust" the works and be the civvi with it, doesn't matter much; the "trust" is out to get him in a big way . . . right now they are trying to force Dick into a match with Jim Foree of a half dozen tried and true "trusters" who might be able to dispose of the German as easily as they could have licked O'Mahoney . . . had they been given the nod . . . looks like a hectic summer.

Problem Players Heading Towards The Top of Class

City William Weaker (Associated Press Sports Writer)

Chicago, April 21.—(AP)—The Associated Press Sports Writer knows "problem children" are mending their ways by a hitch.

Problem children, because they are bad boys, but so classified because of poor showing on the field, or injuries which made them uncertain quantities. Now at the start of the current championship campaign, most of them are heading again toward the heads of the class.

Foremost among the revived recruits compiled by the writer the following last year is Hal Trosky of Cleveland Indians. The young first baseman was a prize in 1934, but he never lasted past July.

Trosky is off to a blazing start, with ten hits in 24 times at bat for an average of .416. He has banged out two home runs and a double to add him to the batting list 11 runs.

One of Trosky's teammates, Bruce Campbell, an outfielder, has made a great beginning toward proving an alleged spinal meningitis can't keep a good man down. Seized by the illness late season, while hitting at a brisk pall, it appeared Campbell was done, but Campbell would ever play baseball again. Ten hits in 29 times at bat, including a home run, triple and double checks his case as a good as ever.

A pair of former New York Yankee most valuable chattels, Lyn Lary and Bill Dickey, also are engaged in some big slamming. Although Dickey finished the 1935 season with a .338 average, he suffered a slump, that did the boys' struggle for the title no good. Dickey, a roaring slugger through most of his career with New York, slipped off to .278 last year. Lary, a shortstop, out two home runs, three doubles and a triple so far this season, while his hits mark translates his bit for a .391 average.

A change of scenery has acted as a tonic to Al Simmons, for whom Manager Jimmy Dykes gave Chicago White Sox $75,000. The Milwaukee Duke didn't hit much for the Sox, but his early cuts have a .400 mark to his average for the world champions.

THE NORWEGIAN HEAVYWEIGHT

ANDY MOEN

When the wrestling prids of Minneapolis, Andy Moen, meets Angelo Savoldi of France at the Belleville Arena tonight two high-rating wrestlers will be seen in action and one which promises to be a outstanding main bout.

Ed Mazak, Ohio State champion, who is to wrestle Tim Dufresne in the main bout of the Queensbury Club's wrestling show tonight, is one of the most clean-cut, courageous and sensational young grapplers developed in years. He is considered a real contender for the heavyweight championship of the world and he certainly will boost his stock if he can become the champion to beat The Unknown.

The only information available about The Unknown is that he must, because of his victories, be one of the best wrestlers in the world. As to his nationality, age or birthplace, that all is shrouded in secrecy but he has made a reputation as a most sensational performer.

The semi-final is between Irish Jack Donovan of Boston and Al Dunlop,

Five Figured to Have Chance in Kentucky Derby

(Associated From Staff Writer)

By G. ROBERT RAY

New York, April 21 (AP)—Judged solely upon actual performance this year, the "Big Five" among the probable entries in the Kentucky Derby on May 2nd, are Brevity, the Canadian-owned Indian Broom, The Fighter, He Did and Gold Seeker, the latter a filly. Two of the colts have world record performances to their credit.

Joseph E. Widener's Brevity, winner of the mile and an eighth Florida Derby in 1:48 1-5, which at that time tied the Great Discovery's world mark for the distance, is the heavy favorite to capture the mile and a quarter classic at Churchill Downs.

Major Austin C. Taylor's Indian Broom, which ran a sensational race in the $10,000 Added Marchbanks Handicap at Tanforan, favored Brevity's record to 1:47 3-5, but he carried only 94 pounds compared with Brevity's 126.

Both will pack 126 pounds in the Derby, Bookmakers and turf experts alike agree, that Brevity is the highest choice over Indian Broom at level weights. Brevity is held at 5 to 2 in the Derby future books, and Indian Broom at 15 to 1.

Mrs. Silas B. Mason's He Did, winner of the Santa Anita Derby and leading three-year-old money winner to date, is expected to face the barrier in the $40,000 added race at Louisville. Future book odds on The Fighter are 16 to 1 and on He Did, 30 to 1.

Western Cage Teams Ready for Series

Winnipeg, April 21 (CP)—Victoria Dominoes, British Columbia champions, and Winnipeg Fatima, Manitoba athlets, were ready today to decide the Western Canada men's senior basketball championship.

The two aggregations clash here Wednesday night in the first of a best-of-three game series for the Western title and the right to meet Windsor Ford, Eastern champions, for the Dominion crown which was held last year by Dominion under the name of Blue Ribbons.

Second game is scheduled for Friday night and if each team scores a victory the third game will be played Saturday night.

CURRENT SPORT

DAN MY DAY

With local sporting activities taking on rather quiet aires the resuming of the hockey two months ago, naturally Belleville sport fans are hungry for sporting activities and will avail themselves of Jack Corcoran's all-star wrestling show at the Arena tonight. Judging from general street talk a bumper crowd can be expected at the Arena tonight for two special reasons; first Belleville sport fans are athletic-minded at the moment after a lapse of nearly two months from major sports, secondly the calibre of wrestling that has been signed by Matchmaker Corcoran for his Belleville wrestling debut tonight.

It is seldom a Belleville sport enthusiast is privileged to see in action and on the same card, such a galaxy of wrestling celebrities as will appear on tonight's program. Four of the six men on the card are featured in the ring in other cities as New York, Boston and Toronto as head-liners and are among the best possible opposition known. The feature wrestling bout in the opening or preliminary bout, when Andy Moen, the Norwegian adonis from Golden Valley, the Frenchman grappler and protege of Henri DeGlane, former world champion, the fans have a big town boost. When asked about "Yank Dan Peterson" one Al Dunlop need any introduction to any wrestling fan, while Dunlop was only after serious consideration that Matchmaker Corcoran gave Belleville Ed Make-Dunlop's debut as the main attraction. It's a natural.

"I fully intended using Moore and The Unknown in a "shooting match." In Moore's home town of Portland, he put the former Yale classmerring for a shot at Moore, so I put the show aside for the time being it to Belleville. This bout should be a sensational one, although I would find unless there's over 2,000 in the Arena tonight I'll be mistaken. Secondly, this Make-Dunlop affair will be the best wrestling bout ever staged in these parts, for now it's I'm talking about. They are two of the best "mat" men in the business and both are anxious to climb to the top," Jack Corcoran told us over the phone this morning.

On Friday night at the Y.M.C.A. a meeting of all interested in rugby football will be held for the purpose of explaining the rules of the game to managers, coaches, players, and fans alike. Any secretary of the O.R.F.U. and Mr. John DeCrochy, football grand old man, will be the principal speakers. Delegations from Eastern Ontario are expected.

Roy Fox was added to the committee along with Alex Weir and Fabiola Hall of Peterboro, to handle baseball material and accordate their intentions towards playing senior baseball this season. We understand there are three senior calibre ball players in Belleville, the E.C.A.F. base near Trenton. Art Hepps, a star pitcher, Doc Reid, a catcher, while in the American League Vern Kennedy holder of only no-hit, no-run game in the Major last year, pitched the White Sox back into the American League baseball with a victory over the Cleveland Indians.

The New York Giants lost their first game of the season yesterday, while in the American League Vern Kennedy holder of only no-hit, no-run game in the Major last year, pitched the White Sox back into the American League baseball with a victory over the Cleveland Indians.

A new marathon champion was crowned yesterday when Johnny (Tarzan) Kelley, the Narragansett Indian, won the Boston marathon after a long run of the classical race in years. He then was one minute slower than the marathon record held by Clarence DeMar, the first Canadian to cross the finishing line at the Hopkinton path in one of the toughest fields in the history of the Boston classic—Ellison Vic Oakland, Tarzala, was ahead and Jim Shaw of Toronto, tenth. Irving Canada a splendid representation.

Last autumn Connie Mack, it is reported, "took Dan Peterson" over. Tommy Foley, Peterboro's colorful coming fielder, also a try-out with the Athletics. Regarding this the Lifluck City sport scrivener following to Make-Thomas' Foley, best centre gardener in the City, passed up a chance this spring to try out with Philadelphia. Foley had brought above promise and the local slugger was invited to try out this spring. However, he decided against it — and probably was wise at that. Bobby Porter of Toronto hicked good in Ty's spring workouts with the Mackmen but he was been farmed out to an unknown burg in Texas at about a week. Two-watch Tommy Foley his clothes are cluttered up with odd watches won with his bat—is a fine fielder and dangerous hitter. He might to have another good season with the Petes this summer.

High hopes that perhaps Belleville may yet have a senior soft ball team in the notwithstanding turned last night's meeting for one week. A delegation has been appointed in Belleville, while the said Belleville delegation composed from Rebel Anne is reported to be back in the "mouthful" running again. Don't forget, all ye diamond-ite starters, all that is needed is a team with a league franchise! Edgecombe of four clubs. While on the subject of softball, we understand there is a movement afoot to endeavour rejuvenating the old industrial softball league once again.

NEWARK BEARS GAINING PLENTY OF MOMENTUM
Show Real Scoring Punch Along With Classy Hurling
MONTREAL WINS
Albany Chalked up Their First Victory of The Season

(By The Associated Press)

Newark Bears are joining plenty of momentum for the long International League race.

The Bears now have five victories to their credit against one defeat, and they're showing a real scoring punch, that bodes ill for rival hurlers. Yesterday they hit safely all three of their games but they weren't content. The ability to shove runs across the plate, that has characterized the wizards of Ruppert, who have won four straight after dropping their opener.

The Bears have collected 14 runs in three games but the Bears have rammed 31 in five encounters. The Royals, however, have a far better defensive record having allowed only three runs to be scored against them while the Bears have allowed none.

Bears Bench Hits

The Bears got only five hits yesterday as they defeated Buffalo Bisons 4 to 1, but they bunched three of the hits at an opportune time. The hits were made in the seventh inning and combined with an error, two base on balls and a hit batsman, accounted for all of the Newark tallies. Marvin Duke was on the hill for the Bruins and he allowed the Bisons but four hits, one of them a triple by Fletcher. Four of the Bears five hits were doubles, Roy Schalk getting two.

Louis Polli held Syracuse Chiefs to four scattered hits in Bayonne as he collected six off Ray Starr to give Polli a 5 to 2 victory. Tony Sedzi, Montreal left fielder, was the batting star of the game as he doubled in the first run and then belting a triple.

In the third game on the schedule, Albany chalked up its first victory of the season at the expense of Rochester 8 to 1. Alton Benton held the Red Wings to four hits in check at all times. Their only run of the day came when unearned Benton also drove in the winning run with a single.

Wally Berger, Bost: Found Brooklyn pitchers for three hits, one a double, and drove in two runs

Ernie Bowman, Phillies: Checked Giants with 10 hits and cracked out three singles.

George Puccinelli and Frank Demaree, Cubs: Former hit home run with two on and later got three hits and as many runs as A's defeated Yanks.

Frankie Frisch, Cardinals: His ninth-inning double cleared the loaded bases as Cards beat Reds.

Jimmy Foxx, Red Sox and Pete Fox, Tigers: Foxx delivered hit home run and double in first game and Appleton pitched five-hit in second.

Lyn Lary and Tom Carey, Browns: Led attack on Tigers with three hits apiece.

Gus Suhr, Pirates: Hit home run in ninth with two on to give Pirates victory over Cubs.

Vernon Kennedy, White Sox: Held Indians to four hits.

Louis - Schmeling Bout in Yankee Stadium on June 18

By PAUL MICKELSON
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, April 21. (AP)—A word picture of a man who did not want a million dollars. In fact, a man who was scared almost speechless by the prospect of getting that much money.

When Promoter Mike Jacobs offered to shift the Joe Louis-Max Schmeling fight to San Diego, Cal., for a million dollars on the line, he winked at his friends and said:

"Well, that'll be the last of that offer. We can forget about those guys in San Diego. That million'll stop 'em."

But to Mike's astonishment and embarrassment the San Diego crowd wired that a million dollars would be forthcoming in a week.

"Wow! What'll I do now?" absorbed Promoter Mike to his friends. "I can't move this fight out of New York. If I do I might as well clean up shop in New York. What'll I do, what'll I do?"

"I'll tell . you what," advised a Solomon, who hung heavily on Promoter Mike's desk. "Tell 'em to get that million here by Monday, April 20, or the whole offer is out. That'll stop 'em."

Promoter Grins

So Promoter Mike grinned to himself and laid down the million dollar ultimatum to the San Diego crowd.

Then came Monday.

Mike, as per habit, arrived at his office at 46th and Broadway at 9 a.m., but he didn't stay there for more than a minute. He ducked out to join several newspaper reporters who were eating over a $1.50 breakfast check.

"Hell," said Promoter Mike, "You drink."

guys think you have your worries. What would you do if you weren't afraid of having a million bucks thrown on your desk."

Then it and you," chorused the reporters who bet Mike pay the check and then hustled him off to his office, hoping the guy with a million dollars would come in. He soner had he settled in his chair than his girl secretary announced a caller.

"What does he look like, what's his name, and what does he want?" Promoter Mike asked nervously. "No, never mind. Tell him I'm not in."

The telephone rang. Promoter Mike jumped.

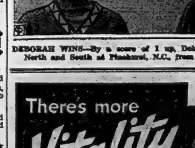
"I'm not in," he called.

Reporters Had Laugh

An armored car, carrying money probably to a midtown bank, passed. A reporter saw it.

"There's that guy, Michael Marco, from San Diego with that million," Mike," he yelped.

"Where, where?" gulped Promoter Mike as he scrabbled to the window for a look.



The reporters had their laugh.

At 5:31 a big smile swept across Promoter Mike's face. He slapped his knee, strode out of his office and called for Walter St. Dennis, his publicity man.

"Walter," said Promoter Mike, "I want to make an announcement. Overnite paper."

"The San Diego man did not come up with the million dollars," began the announcement, "so we have cancelled the offer and the fight will be held at the Yankee Stadium June 18."

"And now," said Promoter Michael Strauss Jacobs, "I need a

REAL KIDNAPPERS MAY BE ARRESTED

Solution of Lindbergh Case Only a Few Hours Away Says Lawyer

Chicago, April 21.—(AP)—Arrest of the persons he termed the "real kidnappers" of the Lindbergh baby "within several weeks at the most" was predicted today by Bernard J. Finnigan, young Chicago lawyer, who said he was taking part in Governor Harold G. Hoffman's investigation of the case.

After flying home from the east Sunday with a claim to discovery of a hidden cache of $6,000 of the kidnap "ransom money," Finnigan declared "optimism" of the case "may be only a few hours away".

Finnigan asserted Gov. Hoffman of New Jersey, now has evidence showing that Bruno Richard Hauptmann, executed for the child's death, was "a positively innocent man".

"A number of other people" were the kidnap plotters, the lawyer added, explaining he "couldn't say why" he thought so "without saying too much."

"Someone will issue warrants" against those people after Gov. Hoffman weaves the tangled threads of the case together into a closely knit whole, Finnigan said.

Dwight Ransom Morrow

He indicated Colonel Lindbergh's son-in-law would be uncovered "in New York State" as the head of a clique. Stephen Spitz, would "unquestionably" lead to a clean-up of the case.

Spitz a convicted forger, who left Israel here to seek the money he had "bought" it in Trenton, N.J., for 40 cents on the dollar, Finnigan said it was "available" to Hoffman. He said "a lot more ransom bills will be produced".

The attorney said "friends of the Governor" were willing to put up bail by paying an $863 balance of a $1,000 fine against Spitz.

Finnigan criticized Chicago officials, too, who, he said, publish fact that he was trying to gain Spitz's release in order to make the "ransom" search.

"If it hadn't been for the ugly warranted and deliberately harmful statements made by a few Chicago officials, and by them statements in confidence by Spitz and myself, our job would have been finished in time to save Hauptmann's life".

Spitz claimed to have "bought" the "ransom money" from two men called "Adolph Blaustein" and "Fred Fisch" in August, 1934. He said he then claimed he hid it.

Caboose And Cars Derailed at Capreol

North Bay, Ont., April 20 (CP)—Slight damage to cabin 2 Fwy and some rolling equipment was caused by derailment of a caboose and two freight cars of a southbound Canadian National Railways freight train near Capreol, about 10 a.m. today, according to a report reaching the office of T. Wood, C.N.R. General Superintendent for Northern Ontario, this afternoon. Conductor G. O'Leary and brakeman Fred Redfern, both of Capreol were riding the van at the time of the derailment and both received a shaking up. They refused medical attention, however, and took the train into Ferry Sound. It is expected the line will be cleared in a few hours.

THANKS VOICED BY ARCHBISHOP

Authorities Urged to Obtain Fullest Possible Aid For Separate Schools

Ottawa, April 21 (CP)—A canvass of the Catholic electors in provincial authorities to obtain fullest possible support for Separate Schools in Ontario, has been undertaken to take full advantage of the recently passed Separate Schools Bill.

Priests of all Ottawa parishes Sunday read from their pulpits a letter by Archbishop Forbes expressing gratitude to the Ontario government for "the corrective law it has just passed concerning the distribution of school taxes."

The Archbishop declared: "It is the duty of all Catholics to support our Separate Schools. If in the past a number of Catholics have been assessed as Public School supporters in order to benefit by the Lower School rate we trust that they will now join the general body of Catholics in supporting their own schools. If this is done we can hope that the Separate School rate will be lowered for 1937."

He also asked priests to interview their parishioners who have not been Separate School supporters in the past and urge them to change their assessment.

At the same time Rev. Father Joyal, director of the French-Canadian Educational Association of Ontario, said in a speech before the Ottawa Rotary Club that the bill is edited in the English way and is not very clear. There is a lot of work to be done and already steps are being taken to hold meetings throughout the province to explain the new legislation."

At the same meeting Miss Minister Leduc of Ontario asked the audience to give their gratitude to "the 54 protestant members of the legislature who supported the bill. I made it a point to thank them personally for their noble gesture."

Mr. Leduc said of his own part in the legislation: "I only did my duty and any other French Canadian would have done the same thing as I."

Obituary

STEPHEN ROUGHTON (Kingston)

Kingston, April 21.—Stephen Roughton, 86, manager of the Mutual Life Assurance Company of Canada's Kingston office, died in hospital here Sunday. Mr. Roughton suffered a heart attack a week ago. He had been in the insurance business for many years. He was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. Surviving are his widow, one son, Donald, who was associated with him in his business and one daughter, at home.

The late Mr. Roughton was born at Nottingham, England, and came to Belleville when a young man. For some time he was associated with his uncle, the late Stephen Burrows, in life insurance work in Belleville. Later he went to reside at Kingston as representative of the Mutual Life Assurance Company under the supervision of the late Mr. Burrows, in whose territory the city of Kingston was included for many years, and he continued in the life insurance business up to the time of his death. During his residence in Belleville the late Stephen Roughton was well known and was highly regarded by many friends. Announcement of his death will be received with regret by those who knew him in this city. In his younger days he was the possessor of a fine voice and was a member of the choir at Holloway Street United Church.

LATE HERBERT PALMER

Madoc—Following a long illness due to heart trouble, Mr. Herbert Palmer passed away at his home in the Palmer homestead in Madoc Township, seventy years ago. His father was the late Rufus Palmer and his mother was formerly Miss Catherine Brennan. About 45 years ago he was united in marriage to Jennie Keene. Mrs. Palmer and three daughters, Minnie, Mrs. R. Montesan of Rochester; Laura, Mrs. George Begley of Smith's Falls and Gertrude, Mrs. (Dr.) Willis of Brooklyn, N.Y., and three sons survive the homestead, Roy at home and Percy in Brooklyn, N.Y., and Herbert, one sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Mordon of Belleville, is the only surviving member of the Rufus Palmer family.

Mr. Palmer was of a retiring disposition and loved his home. He was well liked and a good neighbour. The funeral was held at Hart's Church, where the family have attended for over fifty years. The service was conducted by the Reverend Mr. Morris, the present pastor. The hymns sung were favorites of the deceased and the anthem "Shall we Gather at the River", was sung by request. The pall bearers were Newell Hart, George Glover, George Love, Field Allen, Chas. Thompson and Earl McCaffrey and flowers were carring by Robert Bruce, Allen Thompson, Lowell Glover and Allen Love. Interment was in the family plot at Hamard's Corners. Those from outof-town attending were, Dr. and Mrs. Willis of Brooklyn, Mrs. Begley of Smith's Falls, Mrs. Mordon, and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Mordon of Belleville, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Palmer, Ethel Mordon of Belleville, Mrs. Pearce and Mrs. Jess Palmer, Jr., of Prince Edward County.

POINT ANNE

Point Anne, April 21—Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Bowers and son of Campbellford spent Sunday at the home of Mr. J. Dontaloy.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Akey spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Miles Lucas, Front Road.

William Lee and family have moved from Belleville to the house recently vacated by Amah Akey.

Mr. and Mrs. Willie Akey and family spent Sunday visiting relatives in Belleville.

Spring seems to have arrived at last and maydowers have been found in sheltered corners. Robins and other birds are making the air lively with their songs.

One tiny girl recently on seeing a robin for the first time called for some one to come and see the bird with the red paint on his chest.

School reopened on Monday after Easter holidays and now the pupils are busy down to the work and holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Somers and family of Carleton called at the home of Mr. Orly Cummings on Sunday.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Noble Vance is ill in Belleville General Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. George Winters of Carleton called at the home of Mr. and Betty spent Sunday evening at the home of Mr. Harry Greatrix, Front Road.

Mr. Leonard Maracle has returned home after spending some weeks with his grandparents in Deseronto.

Recently I have given several exercises covering the most important parts of the swing—gripping the club, addressing the ball, and starting the club back right—up to starting the downswing. Now I bring you to a stage of the swing where the shot is made or spoiled.

Most players look upon the downswing as the only real important part of the swing. This is wrong, because your downswing cannot be one bit better than your backswing. Having made the correct backswing all you have to do is keep your chin properly pointed and swing the club downward toward the ball.

Any attempt to guide the club or consciously direct parts of your body in the downswing results only in upsetting the swing as a whole. It spoils the timing and blending of the various movements. When you give most of your attention to pointing your chin you'll find that the rest of your swing is under subconscious control, the sort of control under which it is almost impossible to make a mistake.

Practice swinging down and keeping your chin pointed back of the ball. In covering the hitting position next week I'll tell you more about the chin.

● All the countless thousands who buy newspapers every day are potential customers of those who offer goods for sale to the consuming public.

Practically every merchant in Canada will lose customers in 1936—a law of business. This loss must be replaced or his business will die. The trader who loses customers, even to the danger point, can find them again and increase his turnover by good merchandising linked with advertising in the daily newspapers.

People are reading daily newspapers as never before, not from curiosity, but from need to know today the best things offered to supply their daily wants.

Lost markets, which are only other words for lost customers, are now being regained by you or acquired by others. You owe it to yourself and to your business to keep in touch through the newspapers every day with the Canadian buying public.

"GLITTERING GIRL"

By MAY CHRISTIE

Mrs. Van Tyle smiled patronizingly. This woman was too quaint! Such smart Stock somewhere on the King's English! If she'd married one of the Van Tyle family there was not so broke and it was essential for her Teddy to marry money, she wouldn't waste another minute on these queer Tysons.

"I could have helped you had I had the pleasure of meeting you before the invitations to Vernon's party were despatched, dear Mrs. Tyson. The only thing I can see for you now—provided you decide not to entertain these people, and who could blame you?—is for someone to turn sick, or be called out of town —and then give the party later on."

Thus Mrs. Van Tyle. Inordinately she was thinking: "Why couldn't I make a considerable sum of money out of this? Take the whole thing off my hands, and for a stiff commission? Times are changing. I could charge her at least $15,000 for my list of friends and for chaperoning the young daughter! If Vernon likes her, I'll insist on a large settlement for him, poor darling! But how ever could he, or I, or his father swallow that dreadful mother?"

It was a somewhat crestfallen Teddy Van Tyle who arrived at the Tyson apartment that evening. He brought his pen. Simply he must spend his money, or commit himself until he saw how the land lay. His mother's account of the girl's mother had been quite appalling.

Imagine his further chagrin, then, when he learned from Mrs. Tyson herself—replacement in orchid and satin drawn so lightly on her stout figure that the line of her corset clearly showed—that she was accompanying them.....!

Too well-bred to show his displeasure, he quickly racked his brains for a suitable spot in which to entertain them, to dine and spend the evening. The smart hotels and night clubs were unthinkable. The former would rank him to death about the old girl, and it might not be thought he was "companionable", matrimonially speaking, to the daughter, with the mother in the party.

"Would you enjoy a little whirl at the tables, Mrs. Tyson?" he asked deferentially. "The old Stuyvesant Breckenridge mansion on West Eighteenth has been turned into a first-class gambling house. I often go there."

Now next to her urge for Society —Sadie Tyson loved any kind of a gamble, and the turn of a wheel.

She accepted gladly. Any place that he selected for them would be "okay by me," she told Teddy quashingly.

"You didn't bring your car with you? And I let Jake use ours last night! We're all mighty inspired! Hi-spanky-squeeze you over hold your eyes—there! Oh, we've got to go on the last cars in the world, Mr. Van Tyle!" she said affably as the commissionaire of the hotel signalled a taxicab.

They got inside and Teddy gave the address of the mysterious house in the East Eighties. Sadie made room between Vernon and herself on the back seat, though with her plumpness it was a tight squeeze. She congratulated herself that Vernon was looking beautiful tonight in a Chanel model of pale pink velvet. "My daughter, Mrs. Tarkheimer, Van Tyle'.... how elegant that sounded! And there was every chance of it, apparently!

Of course that horrible Merrina de Sray.... or rather the Metchen de Sray.... had let her down as woman to woman, and had her down over the guests invited for Vernon's coming-out party one week from tonight. But between now and then many things might happen, Mrs. Van Tyle would come to their help.

Vernon was saying in his drawl: "I've given the address of the this gambling joint. If Terry and Jerry haven't come on here, they'll tell me that tonight I will see him...."

She was correct in that. But little did she reckon under what circumstances.

Dinner was rather a stodgy affair. They had ordered it themselves and it steadily went about the Tysons' wealth in the proportion.

But Vernon thought: "Mummy-Jane doesn't really entertain as one unless one is in interesting company." That almost the only certain intuition told her that tonight, no matter how late, she would see Terry.....

After dinner, she and her mother and "Teddy" played bezique.

Vernon lost. She was $200 out when she rose from the table.

"Unlucky at cards, lucky in love!" She felt calm and cheerful and queerly ambidextrous, somehow.

Her mother and "Teddy" Van Tyle had formed a partnership. That had been his suggestion. They would split their winnings or lose.

Vernon wandered off into a quiet nook in the big, roomy old mansion and found an interesting book to read.

The book gradually slipped from her fingers to the floor. Her eyes closed. She was exquisitely tired. She slumbered.

She had a wonderful dream..... that Terry Shannon knelt before her.....that Terry told her that he loved her.....

She awoke suddenly. Was it still a dream? Terry in the flesh stood before her!

"I phoned your apartment. The maid told me you'd come here. I followed at once to take you right out of this, Vernon."

She blinked at him. She smiled sleepily. She said: "I knew you'd come, Terry."

But Terry didn't smile. He said brusquely: "You're no business to be here. Of all things, you have to pick the night when the police are going to raid the place!"

"Raid this place? Why?" Vernon was still dazed from her wonderful dream that had now changed to a dear reality. She stared up at Terry.

"Private gambling happens to be illegal in New York, and there are certain counts against this house as well. I've just warned your mother, Mary lost $1500. She insists on writing her check for the amount. She's getting on her wraps now."

"And what about Terry"—Teddy —what's his name? Where's he?"

Terry said sharply: "He can take care of himself, but it seems you can't, you silly little thing! I'm to command now. Get your coat and you and your mother and I will be out of while the going's good!"

They went down on the main floor where Sadie Tyson, considerably disgruntled, joined them. It was unlikely that her by Teddy would pay any of the loss. He had pointed out, in his well-bred, supercilious way, that it was entirely her own fault. And after all, $1500 was a tidy sum to pay.

She bewailed all this to Terry Shannon in a loud voice.

"Mother, let's go. Mr. Shannon came all the way here to get us out before the police raid the place," Vernon whispered to her mother.

And how did Mr. Shannon know that we were here?" Sadie gave them both a sharp look.

"Never mind now. Darling, it's dangerous to waste time. Let's hurry!"

"What's all this stupid nonsense about a raid? How could Mr. Shannon know about it unless he's in cahoots with the police?"

Irritated as he was, Terry could n't help smiling at that. She was so like a ruffled parlor parrot!

CHAPTER XXXVI.

"Well, if you insist on leaving, and not giving me a fair chance to win my money back, you can just wait right here for me till I fix my hair and powder my nose," Mrs. Tyson departed. She was gone for fully five minutes.

The three of them were almost at the front door when they were halted in their tracks by a sudden and alarming knocking from outside. Almost at the same moment, warning bells whirred upstairs in the gambling rooms, and a great iron door swung to at the top of the stairs, cutting off that part of the house from the invaders.

"The police! The raid's on!" Terry said sharply.

"Oh!" gasped Mrs. Tyson, thoroughly alarmed. She clutched his arm. "For heaven's sake, get us away quickly!"

He refrained from the obvious answer that had been his earnest wish for the past ten minutes or more. The pounding on the door grew louder. A stentorian voice demanded that it be opened in the name of the law.

"They'll smash it down. They'll take us to jail. Oh, Mr. Shannon," moaned Sadie, "hide us away! This is terrible."

"Follow me," said Terry, "I know this house. The previous owners were friends of mine. As I remember, there's a trick door in the cellar that leads through into the house on the left. The Nordstroms live there. I've met them once or twice."

"Oh, take us there! Get us away!"

"Come!"

They followed Terry into the kitchen quarters which were empty, who was trembling violently, followed him.

They found themselves in a big cellar. "Come on—through this archway—it's dark in there—I'll strike a match." They snipped a smaller cellar hung with cobwebs and very dusty.

"Oh, Mr. Shannon, the police are smashing the front door in upstairs. Oh, hurry!" urged Sadie.

"See—here's the door in the wall. It's going to be a tight squeeze getting through. Let's hope it isn't bolted on the other side. Apparently it hasn't been used in years." Terry tugged at the rusty bolt. It was obstinate, but with repeated assaults it yielded.

"Thank heaven for that!" Another violent tug. The little door flew open, revealing Stygian darkness. "I'll go through first," said Terry, "then Mrs. Tyson—and then you, Vernon."

Terry's broad shoulders jammed at first. But, with many jerks and wiggles, he contrived to get through. Sadie followed.

Poor Sadie had a terrible time because of her stoutness, and the nervous tension that possessed her. She struggled frantically, goaded by Vernon's slim figure had little difficulty in getting through the aperture.

"Oh, it hurts! I can't!" With Vernon pushing from behind, and Terry hauling lustily, her beautiful orchid gown was being almost torn from her body!

"I've stuck. I can't get through. Pull me back, Vernon."

"No. Wiggle yourself. Like an eel, darling."

"Ouch! Oh! I'm moving!" Terry was winning the battle. With a final pull that tore the orchid gown almost from stem to stem, she landed in the darkness on the other side.

"Splendid! Not hurt, are you, Mrs. Tyson?"

"No. Only shaken a bit. Get Vernon through, Terry."

Vernon's slim figure had little difficulty in getting through the aperture.

"We'll shut this door but we won't bolt it, because someone may try this means of escape too," said Terry. He struck a match. They were in the rear of the cellar in the next door house. They followed him through a pile of rubbish into a clearer space and up some stone steps.

"I'm afraid we're going to scare

At this very moment, Tarzan himself was in danger. Under the stress of his anxious search for the boys, he was heedless of that vigilant caution which was his sole insurance against sudden death in the jungle. And now a great black panther stalked him on silent feet!

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

Proudly Zopinka drove his captives toward the gates, whence streamed a mob of hideous tribes people, children and adults — jabbering excitedly. The teeth of the savages were filled to sharp points, but fortunately the boys did not know this was a mark of cannibals.

The children threw sticks and stones at the strangers, and each time a hit was scored, the assault increased uproariously. Emboldened by the applause, an ugly boy rushed at Boy from the rear and swung a stick at his head with sufficient force to crush the white boy's skull . . .

. . . . Though the aptos of Dick and Doc were not specimens of Tarzan, the ape-man might have effected their immediate rescue had he known where to find them. But the mighty Lord of the Jungle was many miles away, scouring the perilous forest with unwonted feverishness.

the Nordstroms by our unconventional arrival," Terry grinned, They climbed through the kitchen premises out into a hallway, which had lights burning.

"Whist, there's"—in a man's voice from above.

"It's I, Terry Shannon, with some friends. Come down, and I'll explain, Mr. Nordstrom."

A tall figure in a dressing gown descended. Mr. Nordstrom and his wife had been aroused from sleep by the noises of the raiding party in the street below their windows. Terry, a twinkle in his Irish blue eyes, told him of their predicament. They had sailed from the gambling house into this haven of refuge!

FEARLESS DRAEGERMEN RISK LIVES IN "SUICIDE SHAFT"—Here is shown the Reynold's shaft at Moose River Mine, where Stellarton draegermen are frantically clawing and digging to reach the three e ntombed Toronto men. Though warned and forbidden to enter the trenches when "suicide shaft" the miners refused to obey. One early slide and it had to be carried out. Almost any moment engineers expected to see the shaft cave in, burying the fearless diggers under tons of rock a nd gravel. It was through this shaft that rescue was eventually effected.

RESCUE WORKERS DIG FRANTICALLY IN FALLING SHAFT—While rock and earth fell around them and a new cave-in threatened momentarily to precipitate a new disaster, miners and rescue workers seeking to extricate Dr. D. E. Robertson, Herman Magill and Alfred Scadding from the Moose River mine tunnel, which has held them prisoners more than a week, threw themselves frantically into the task of tearing a hole into the 14-foot level where the men are. News that Magill was already dead, and that seeping water threatened to drown his companions, drove the workers to desperate efforts. A scene of the men at work is shown. Miners are shoring up the caving walls as a slight belo in holding up the falling rock and earth.

"GLITTERING GIRL"

By MAY CHRISTIE

"Well, I'll be d——d!" Mr. Nordstrom grinned as he viewed the extremely dirty and dishevelled trio. The stout little lady was the worst. Her hair was hanging down her back, a colored lay across her nose, and her gown was ripped in a dozen places.

"I'll tell my wife. Come on upstairs and fix up a little."

The Nordstroms were extremely kind. It was a good half hour before they would permit their unexpected visitors to take their leave. "Better stay indoors till the fev'r's over." Mr. Nordstrom declared sensibly.

Then Terry drove Vernon and her mother home, Mrs. Tyson declaring over and over that he had been "a perfect angel," saying them from scandal in the papers (the thing she dreaded most) and that she could never, never thank him enough for what he had done for them that night.

Jake Tyson was waiting for them in the drawing room of the apartment. He had been uneasy, somehow. He had been when he heard the key turn in the lock.

His wife immediately burst into an excited account of their recent adventure.

"And this young man came all the way up there to get us out of it," she chirped. "I call it fine of him. Go on, Jake, and thank him."

Now Jake had only met Terry Shannon once before, but he had taken a liking to the young chap. Where his sons were concerned, Jake was a good and quick reader of character.

"We'll have a little drink to celebrate the occasion," he said heartily. "Then you, Sadie, get directly to your bed. You're all bet up."

Shortly after Sadie had retired, Jake made a sly excuse and left the young folks together. He could see that Vernon really liked this young man. She had come through a nasty experience with "Prince Karinoff." But here was a clean-cut young American, a "square shooter,"....

From the dining room where he sat with his newspaper, he could hear the continuous murmur of their voices. They had a very great deal to say to each other, that was evident.

"I want you to know everything about my—my experiences with the man—how I came to spend the night in his apartment. He had drugged me." Vernon was saying haltingly to Terry.

Terry was holding both her hands tight in his own. "I love you, Vernon," he loved you right from the very beginning."

"And I hate this stupid life—this whirling around with people who really look down on me—who only want us for our money—"

"I want you for yourself, Vernon. I won't accept one nickel with you. Terry asserted, "I earn plenty for both of us."

"You're wonderful. I don't know what you see in me, I've been such a fool—so carried away by Park Avenue and all—"

"I love you because you're you. You're what I want. I saw right through the surfaces, darling, to the real woman." Terry drew her into his arms and kissed her repeatedly. "My adorable girl!"

"I love you, Terry. Kiss me again. Don't stop kissing me."

"We're going to stop in a minute and get right into my car and drive up to Greenwich, Vernon—and this night be married—"

"Oh, Terry—I'd love to—but Mother—"

"She'll agree once the deed's done and it's all over. She'll have to make the best of a bad bargain."

"You're not a bad bargain. You're clever and handsome and simply wonderful!"

Terry rose. "I'm going directly to and tell your father what we're going to do tonight."

"No, darling—not now—he might stop us—I couldn't bear that!"

But Jake Tyson, full of sympathy for both, and impelled by his love for his daughter, had stolen to the open door of the dining room and heard the Greenwich proposal!

As he tiptoed back into his dining room, he decided then and there that this was the best thing that could happen. It would put the Park Avenue struggle which he loathed with all his simple heart. And it would bring real happiness to Vernon, for he knew intuitively that she did love this young chap.

"We're going for a little ride, darling," said Vernon to him at this moment, poking her head into the dining room door. "Don't be alarmed if we're gone a couple of hours. We'll be right back."

Jake made no demur at the strangeness of this suggestion. But as he nodded, his eyes twinkled sympathetically.

X X X

The clock was chiming a quarter to three in the morning when Vernon returned to the apartment on the arm of her Terry.

Mrs. Tyson, nervous after the raid, was awake, and Jake sitting with her.

"Mother darling," exclaimed Vernon as she entered the bedroom, and still clinging to Terry, "I want you to call off my coming-out party —and send word to other announcements—"

"Announcements? Of what?" gasped Sadie, staring at the young couple.

"Of our marriage, darling. Terry and I just drove up to Greenwich—we were married, Mother! Oh, darling, won't you please congratulate us? I'm so happy!"

"Married!"

"Mrs. Tyson—Mr. Tyson," Terry cut in, with shining eyes, "will you forgive us? I'll take the greatest care of her. I'll honestly devote my life to making her happy."

"Bless you, my children." Jake's voice broke. "We can right back home and live where we belong—in Texas, Sadie! From now on, we're going to give this Park Avenue stuff the go-by!"

To Vernon's astonishment, and Jake's too, Mrs. Tyson held out her arms to her daughter and son-in-law.

"It's all for the best," she declared. "I'm real glad I've a good reason now for calling off that dee-bo-lantie party!"

(THE END)

THESE FATHERS DIED BEFORE RESCUE SQUAD REACHED HIM—Here are the two daughters of Herman Magill, Toronto attorney, whose death occurred after a week's entombment in the Moose River mine shaft along with Dr. Robertson and Alfred Scadding. Seamen Lee Boyd Jennings, RIGHT, was trapped into before Magill's death came. His two daughters, Joyce Attree (LEFT), 3 years old, and Patricia, aged 9, are shown at their Toronto home, unaware that death has taken their father.

MINERS BEAR WORDS OF GRATITUDE—"You men are wonderful," said Mrs. Herman Magill as she turned to the rescue workers digging frantically to extricate her husband, H. R. Magill, Toronto, and Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding, after contact with the entombed men had been made through a diamond drill. The Toronto trio were escorted alive and well; later the rescue workers were shocked when the news of Magill's death was shouted up the narrow tube and the mine was reported flooding. Mrs. Magill can be seen at she talks with a begrimed worker at the shaft-head.

Little Benny's Note Book

Yesterday afternoon me and pop and ma was taking a wark on account of the sunshine, and Mrs. Martin came out of her house in a red dress, ma saying, Well, Spring is here with a vengeance, that's really a lovely creation, Mrs. Martin, I mean congradulations, really.

I'm so glad you like it, because it really is supposed to be something exceptional, I mean the French department at Hoohhbens claimed it was the original model taken rite from the French wrappings without a stitch added or subtracted, so I could hardly expect to get anything newer than that, Mrs. Martin said, and ma said, My, imagine getting a new born creation a hundred per cent pure strate from Paris, some people are lucky. I must admit I envy yer, not that I'm envious, she said.

Go on with you, I never saw a more stunning ensemble than the one you're wearing rite, now, Mrs. Martin said. You look like the spirrit of Spring reborn, she said, and ma said, Well, I guess I can flatter myself that there's not another woman in town that has one like it. It's one of Madam Cherie's personal creations and she never duplicates it. She has but one model in the last try-on 2 days ago, she said.

That's raw enough, Mrs. Martin said.

And me and pop and ma kept on acting and was petty soon Mr. Hinkins stopped going passed and tipped his hat to ma and about hands with pop, acting like he was. You look quite cashing, is that a new Spring suit?

It was now last year and the way it's going it'll be just at its peak next year, pop said. You're the one that looks as if you had stepped out of a bandbox, he said, and Mr. Hinkins said, Dont make me laugh, I haven't been to a tailer in 3 years. But my wife threatens to drag me to one soon, so I fear the worst, he said.

Dont put say notions in Mrs. Puth's head, pop said.

And he quick kept on going and ma said it really was time he had a new suit and pop changed the subjeck.

AT THE BELLE

"Modern Times"

Reception Accorded Charlie Chaplin Proves Comedian Still the Top.

"Modern Times", Charlie Chaplin's funniest film, now in its third sensational day at the Belle Theatre introduces to Belleville and vicinity film fans the comedian's lovely new leading lady, Paulette Goddard.

Miss Goddard, a radiant young brunette beauty, is a graduate of the musical comedy stage and the Hal Roach comedies. She is Chaplin's own discovery and has been pronounced the greatest find in a decade.

The comedy which is said to be the comedian's greatest and funniest to date, finds Chaplin again the lovable little tramp whom he has endeared to millions, but this time the auto-comic little figure wandering through somewhere different settings.

Features Elaborate Sets.

His most pretentious film to date, "Modern Times" features elaborate and elaborate sets, notably the interior of the modern slept factory where the opening of the story finds Charlie a poor abused mechanic everlastingly lightening bolts on a moving belt. The monotony of this job "gets" Charlie and he runs wild, attacking everything and everybody in view with his brandished wrench in one of the funniest scenes ever filmed.

The factory, with its monster dynamos and machines, proves a terrifying nightmare to the "little tramp" and offers a perfect setting for Chaplin's comedy. From this locale he finds his way into a hospital, a jail (where he inadvertently thwarts a jailbreak and wins a cell all to himself), a department store, a series of short-lived jobs, serving with side-splitting results in each highly diversified capacities as shipyard riveter, night watchman in a large department store where is enacted some of the most uproarious pantomimic sequences ever staged on a local screen in many years, another highlight in his role in the cafe as the singing waiter here indeed is another of the comedy highpoints of the picture.

Love comes into the little chap's life in the person of a comely gamin of the waterfront, whom he befriends and aids. The lovely Paulette Goddard makes her debut as Charlie's leading lady in this role and proves a delightful discovery. Also prominently cast are Chester Conklin, Henry Bergman and Hank Mann.

Written, produced and directed by the star, who also wrote the music, "Modern Times" is a million dollars worth of entertainment. See it with the family and treat yourself to the greatest film fun fest in years.

The Belle latest world news flashes and a smart musical revue "Harlin Days at Lido" all in full beautiful technicolor, and featuring a host of stage, screen and radio stars precede the exhibition of the feature attraction.

Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.10 and 9.15. "Modern Times" starts at 2.00, 7.35 and 9.40. The entire program will be repeated again tonight and Wednesday, matinee and evening.

AT THE CAPITOL

Two Great Hits "Tough Guy" and "Stowaway"

Hair-breadth escapes, thrills of running automobile battles and airplane pursuits, the amazing cleverness of a dog, and comradeship between three of the most oddly assorted characters ever thrown together are to be found in "Tough Guy", Mascot-Gaudsmith-Allegory's new drama of the government Secret Service which comes tomorrow to the Capitol Theatre.

Jackie Cooper, Joseph Calleia and Rin Tin Tin, Jr., play the gangster boy and dog who, thrown together in hiding become friends and comrades. The story is an original by Florence Ryerson and Edgar Allan Woolf, directed by Chester Franklin of "Sequoia" fame and produced by Harry Rapf.

Magill went on a death with a boy who runs away from home to save his dog, who blunders into a criminal gang, and among them finds the best friend of his life. The methods of the Secret Service in ferreting out criminals are shown in detail, thrilling battles, a gripping denouement on an old tug that is the gang's hiding place, and many deft human touches embellish the story.

The cast includes Harvey Stephens as a government agent, Jean Rouse as the old veterinarian, Robert Greig, Edward Pawley, Phillips Auer and Robert Warwick.

On the Same Bill "Stowaway"

Thrills, start, forceful and real. Fierce hate and love that would break no obstacles.

A smashing stampede of wild horses in a background of the most beautiful breath-taking scenery in the world.

These are the treats awaiting you when "Stormy", the spectacular Universal drama of the great outdoors, opens an engagement at this theatre tomorrow. Filmed entirely in the Painted Desert and other beautiful spots in Arizona, "Stormy" is the picturization of the popular Cherry Wilson novel.

Noal Beery, Jr., plays the title role, and other principals include Jean Rogers, Fred Kohler, J. Farrell MacDonald, Raymond Hatton, Walter Miller, James Burtis, Rex, the king of wild horses, his seven weeks-old colt, and the original Arizona Wranglers, a superb cast of real frontiersmen popular on the radio.

This picture has everything that makes for entertainment.

Ending today—Liberty's five star laugh hit of the season. Snowed under with four star cast headed by George Brent, Genevieve Tobin, Glenda Farrell and Frank McHugh.

MINE DISASTER PROPHESIED

Moose River, N.S., April 21.—(CP)—A month ago Mrs. Herman Magill went to a palmist in Toronto, it was just a young woman's lark. "Within a short time your husband is going to meet with a serious accident, but he won't be killed," the fortune teller told her.

Most of last week, Mrs. Magill was watching rescue workers trying to release her husband and two other men from the Moose River Gold Mine, where they had been trapped by a cave-in April 12. Yesterday he was reported dead in the mine.

Too Many Crooks

-x- by -x-

Hal G. Vermes

You would think that Bessie Bertie would be shaking out of his shoes because he stood to lose twenty-five grand. And while that many dollars don't sound so very much money unless you stutter, it is a terrific amount when it is all you have got. Which is the way it was with Bertie.

"What about this Pete Pepper," I ask, "who had had four wins out of six starts this season already?"

"We do not have to worry about that hangtail," says Bertie, "and we not have to vet our hair about Passerby, Last Laugh, or any of them. My Sweet Sugar already has this handicap won for sure!"

"But," Mudder McMort states, "in every race there is always a couple of bets".

"And also besides," Harry the Pinhead adds, "some ifs and maybes."

"Otherwise," I point out, "we would be retired millionaires long ago."

"That is correct," Bertie said, "and of course. The reason for which being that, like with a lot of other things, there are too many people looking for easy money."

This is indeed very true, like anybody knows. Nowadays with good racing commissions on the job there is very little fixing of races. But ten years ago, when Bertie owned Sweet Sugar for the Hudson Handicap, a smoked race still occurs much too frequently. Which is why we are worried.

"But no crooks are going to get near my pets Billy," says Bertie, "because I will not let her out of my sight all day and two of you chicks are going to stand guard in her stable every night."

And that is the way we do. Mudder and the stable boy watch one night and me and Harry are there the next. Besides which Bertie gets up a couple of times and comes over to make sure we are not asleep.

The first three nights nothing happens and we are thinking that everything is going to be okay. But on the fourth night Bertie is found out the next night when four plugs bear down on Harry and me about 2 a.m.

We sure had a hot time there in the dark with what the gangsters' blackjacks and a couple knives they are using these days. And this would be a different story had not Bertie come around for a look-see just then and shoved his gun into Harry, being an ex-jockey, is only a shrimp and I am by no means a giant myself. But Bessie Bertie stands 219 with his hands in his pockets, which is all the moment something to be thankful for. So while Harry is busy the ear of one plug and I am tied up in a hay with another, Bertie mops up the place with the other two and does a very neat job of it, indeed.

While we now do not expect to have any more trouble, we still have Sweet Sugar on our hands and it definitely nowhere to be found. But we figure that the gangsters realize by that because we have fired got a horse to take care of. And we are right on the job with her the next day and Sweet Sugar is still race record. Which is very encouraging to our ideas, to wit.

We all in the grandstand and watch Bertie's entry get off to a beautiful start in the Hudson Handicap. We are happy because by now we are now going to collect for all our troubles. Here is is when Mudder finally shows up and spoils everything.

"The jockey on Sweet Sugar," Mudder shouts, "has sold out to the bookies on the pack as they go into race! I find this out four days ago and have arrangements so the gang holds me till now so I cannot tip you off until it is too late!"

"I am not worried at all," says Bertie, still holding his field glasses steady on the pack as they go into the back stretch.

"Now the jockey is going to throw the race!" Mudder yells.

"I am not caring," Bertie insists.

"The fool has put the double wraps on the reins!" I shout, looking through my glasses. "He is acting like mad as the horse's mouth!"

"Sweet Sugar knows my hands," Bertie says, "we will be as penniles as blind man without a tin cup."

"Still and all!" I scornfully repeats, "I am not worried."

We are very excited except for Bertie, who is watching the heat close and as they go by more, then the field comes around the last turn, Sweet Sugar is back in fourth position. But on the home stretch she takes the bit in her teeth and shoots straight for the wire. Nothing can stop her, not even the crooked jock who fights to hold her back. Flying past the other hicks, she finishes by the one in the lead, and Sweet Sugar wins!

We are so surprised that we practically pass out with relief. And while we lay back in our chairs and try to get our breath, Bertie, who is cool as a pickle just out of the brine, looks down at us and laughs.

"How is this," squawks Harry, "that though you stood to lose everything plus when Mudder informs us that your jock has sold out to the crooks, you do not worry at all and still are sure that Sweet Sugar will win?"

"That is simply because while you can never tell about a human being," says Bertie, "a horse, he is always honest."

Stretchers Brought Out Through Twisting, Narrow, Low Channel—Miners Fear to Touch Sides Dreading Collapse.

By RALPH MORTON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Moose River, N. S. April 22—(CP)—Doctors at the emergency entrance to Moose River gold mine said shortly before two o'clock (E.S.T.) this afternoon the removal of Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding from their mine prison to the surface would take "some time."

Moose River, N. S., April 22—(CP)—A hacksaw and extra blades were sent down into the old Moose River gold mine today after word had reached the surface that rescuers had broken through to a clear channel reaching Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding, imprisoned 10 days in a dark, water-filled pit.

Ambulance men with improvised stretchers disappeared down the shaft behind Dr. F. R. Davis, Nova Scotia Minister of Health, who volunteered to administer hypodermic injections to the suffering doctor and his companion. Both men were ill from cold and exposure and were suffering from inertia.

Hundreds Crowd at Shafthead

Hundreds of miners and onlookers crowded around the crumbling shafthead, awaiting word from the 141-foot level where rescuers were believed to have reached the crevice where the two men were held prisoners with the body of their companion, Herman Magill, who died early Monday morning.

Significance of the saws was not indicated and doctors at the emergency entrance to the old mine said it would be "some time" before the men could be removed.

It was known there had been a network of old pipes through the mine and it was suggested the diggers had to sever them before the stretchers could be carried out.

Muckers Scrape Loose Earth

"Muckers" officials indicated, were still clearing loose earth from the small, twisting passage through to the uncharred level.

Meanwhile, it was announced an inquest would be opened into the death of Magill immediately the imprisoned men were released. But it was accepted as a formality and probably would be adjourned until Robertson and his employee were able to reveal details of the tragedy.

Moose River, N.S., April 22—(CP)—Stretchers were carried down the shaft of the old Moose River gold mine early this afternoon a few minutes after an excited digger had rushed to the surface and shouted "we've got through" to Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding, trapped 10 days on an uncharted level.

It was expected the men would be carried to the surface with the body of their companion, Herman Magill, who died early Monday, after they had been given hypodermic injections to relieve the agony of hunger and cold.

Appeal for the hypodermics came from Dr. Robertson over a miniature microphone with which he has kept contact with rescuers.

No sooner had the appeal been announced than Dr. F. R. Davis, Nova Scotia Minister of Health, volunteered to climb down the treacherous passage to the 141-foot level and administer the injections to the doctor and his timekeeper.

List of Those To Receive Remuneration to be Supplied by Minister

Toronto, April 22 (CP)—As the joyful reports that Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding had been reached in their Moose River gold mine tomb arrived in Toronto, the Moose River Fund Committee had completed its first formal meeting today with the announcement $10,000 had been obtained for the heroic men who toiled in the rescue work.

"There will be no canvassing," Chairman Norman Bonnerville said. "It is a general, popular, voluntary subscription by the public and the public are urged to make their contributions as speedily as possible, voluntarily, not waiting to be asked.

"The funds will be distributed by the committee among the persons selected by the committee in appreciation of their heroic and devoted services.

Hon. Michael Dwyer, Nova Scotia Minister of Mines, has been asked to co-operate by providing the names of those participating. We have received this telegram from him: "Appreciate message very much but will be glad to supply list after rescue task has been completed."

Mr. Bonnerville said the money should be made payable to the Canadian Red Cross Society and addressed to "Moose River Rescue Fund", and sent to the society's office at 63 Jarvis street, Toronto.

Special Stretchers Designed to Carry Entombed Men Out

Moose River, N.S., April 23 (CP)—Special stretchers have been designed to remove Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding from their mine prison of the last 10 days.

Constructed of heavy canvas, they have been bound with ropes instead of poles to pass through the narrow, tortuous rescue channel almost completed between the men and the 141-foot level of the Moose River gold mine.

The Canadian Army Medical Corps squad here built a special litter with collapsible poles, but Major Gordon of Stellarton, in charge of the Canadians, suggested canvas. "It will never do."

In some places the tunnel is only 18 inches wide. There are only two places near the mouth of the Reynolds shaft, in the approach to the tunnel, where men can stand erect. Elsewhere it is to the face on their hands and knees.

Dr. Robertson
Famous Surgeon

Alfred Scadding
Mine Timekeeper

Herman Magill
Toronto Lawyer

Dr. David Edwin Robertson, rescued from the Moose River gold mine today, achieved a wide reputation as a skilled surgeon through his work as surgeon-in-chief of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto. Recently it was calculated he had performed more than 20,000 operations on children.

He was the only surgeon alone in his specialty in practice.

Dr. Robertson began his medical career at Toronto in 1907 after having graduated from the University of Toronto. He became assistant surgeon of the Hospital for Sick Children in 1913, associate surgeon in 1920 and surgeon-in-chief in 1926. He has also been attached to the Department of Surgery, University of Toronto, since 1913.

He served in France as a medical officer from 1914 to 1917 and there laid the foundation for his knowledge and skill in bone surgery that enabled him to correct physical deformities in hundreds of children.

Dr. Robertson was the first Canadian doctor to perform a sympathetic nerve operation, severing certain nerve centres to bring back life to partially paralyzed nerves.

His skill, however, is not confined to orthopedics in which he ranks high among Canadian and British surgeons. A skilled general surgeon, he is in constant demand for consultation and operations.

Dr. Robertson married Miss Pauline Ivey of London, whom he met when she was a war nurse, in 1917. They have two children, Donald, 17, and Graham, 16.

Charles Alfred Scadding, 44, became timekeeper at the Moose River mine through his close friendship with Herman Magill, who died in the mine Monday.

Scadding went to Nova Scotia from Toronto as timekeeper in January. His wife stayed at her mother's home near Barrie, Ont., to care for their eight-months-old daughter.

His mother was seriously ill at the time of the cave-in and she was not told of her son's plight until it became known Sunday morning he was still alive.

Herman Magill was born near Dundas, Ont., 30 years ago and after a preliminary education in Hamilton schools was graduated from Osgoode Hall law school in Toronto and was called to the bar.

He became interested in mining properties and until two months ago was a partner of R. G. H. Flemming, investment counsellor. Mr. Magill was a lieutenant in the Toronto Scottish Regiment.

Gov't Caucus Cheers Rescue

Ottawa, April 22 (CP)—Applause greeted the announcement during the regular government caucus today, that the rescue squad at Moose River, N.S., had at last reached the Toronto men who have been entombed in an abandoned gold mine since Easter Sunday. Fervent hopes were expressed by the Prime Minister that the men would be brought safely to the surface.

No official announcement followed the caucus.

MAGILL INQUEST WILL OPEN TODAY

Order Issued by Coroner as Sequel to Death in Mine

Moose River, N.S., April 22 (CP) —An inquest into the death of Herman Magill in the Moose River Gold Mine early Monday morning was ordered to be held this afternoon if his two companions have been released from their ten days' imprisonment.

The inquest will be conducted by Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Sheriff R. A. Brenton of Halifax County, and County Councillor Adam Burris of Middle Musquodoboit.

Donald G. Grant, Halifax barrister, legal representative of the Magill family in Nova Scotia, was sending a hearse out from the city in expectation that the body would be forwarded to Toronto in the morning.

Coldest April in 95 Yrs. Report from Gt. Britain

London, April 22 (CP)— Great Britain is experiencing the coldest April in 95 years.

For the second day in succession, snow fell today on London streets. Yesterday was the coldest April day in England for the last fifty-two years.

In South Wales and parts of southwestern England heavy snow fell. Some parts of South Wales were snowbound.

Bitter easterly winds whipped the English Channel to fury and drove shipping to shelter.

Thunderstorms, heavy April showers and mellow April sunshine have given way this year—on a number of days to bitter winds, snow and frost.

Easter Sunday in London was colder than last Christmas Day had been.

Feverish Interest in Rescue Is Indicated in Belleville

A sudden hole in the ground at Moose River in which hardy miners and engineers are marching with bare hands in a last desperate attempt today at rescuing two living men and one dead man entombed in a narrow shaft one hundred and forty feet below became city's and the nation's focal point of interest this morning as the last few yards of stone were being slowly broached.

Interest which had been sensationed at a high level throughout the day and until the early hours this morning reached its most feverish point today.

Across the blaring mouths of radios in hundreds of homes through the city, in the offices of business houses, stores and apartments, the drama unfolding in the depths of the scene of the, disaster and from metropolitan newspaper offices were being received keeping residents informed of the slow progress of rescue work. In many of the places special radios had been installed only for the single news items that could be received by workers.

Along Front Street scores of citizens stood in especial groups before radio stores through whose transoms the speakers of receiving machines jutted. News items received at quarterly intervals held the attention of those who stood and waited for hours. In the meantime telephones in the office of the Daily Ontario Intelligencer set a record for number of calls received and answered by the editorial staff. But to reporters on their beat the same statement made to eager questioners as they made the rounds became slightly monotonous in its repetition: "Well, they're digging right, the only statement that could be given up to a late hour today."

"Have you any word yet. Do you think they'll get them out? Are they digging in the right place. Is it true that Dr. Robertson is dead?"

Through the whole gamut of human emotions ran the same tone of anxious questioning, questions that were made more difficult to answer owing to the suggested false reports and rumours that made the rounds of the city.

"We're still hoping, as well as you are", was the only answer that could be relayed by the staff of the paper. "As yet however there is nothing really definite to report."

SCROLL OF HONOR CARRIES NAMES OF BRAVE MINERS

Never Has Such Concerted Heroism Been Shown

JOY IS TEMPERED

Sorrow Felt For Family of Dead Companion Magill

(By The Canadian Press)

An epic of collective heroism was written feelingly today on Canada's scroll of honor as weary rescuers brought to a glorious end their dramatic battle to liberate two Toronto men, imprisoned for 10 days in the treacherous depths of Moose River mine.

Seldom before, when tragedy or disaster cast its shadow over a community, have Canadians followed with such heart-rending concern a battle against perilous odds to save human life.

A wave of rejoicing swept across the country when the dramatic news was flashed that Dr. D. E. Robertson and Arthur Scadding had been released from their prison of horror and relieved pent-up tension which was almost world-wide.

The joy however, was tempered with deep sorrow for of the three that were so suddenly trapped early Easter Sunday, one failed to survive the ordeal. Herman Magill, who was unwell when he entered the shaft, died from the effects of the terrifying experience.

Collective Heroism.

Through the years there has never been such concerted, unrelenting rescue efforts, as witnessed at Moose River, according to available records.

Back in April 29, 1903, a rock slide in Frank Valley, Alta., sealed the entrance of a coal mine, trapping 17 miners for 13 hours. The small living human beings, all of whom from the Continental Divide, was wiped out with a death toll of approximately 70.

SAFE CARRIED AWAY

Mitchell, Ont., April 22 (CP)—Thieves broke into the Mitchell Creamery early today and carried away a safe containing $100 in cash. Approximately $160 in cash as well as valuable papers.

Police are working on the assumption that it would take at least two strong men to do the job and it is believed that either a car or a truck must have also been used.

SIDNEY HOME BURNS TO GROUND

Albert Haines, Loses Property And All Personal Effects

Fire of an unknown origin completely destroyed the two and one-half dwelling house of Albert Haines, Sidney, concession 6, Sidney, at an early hour today. The Halton Mills fly was in Belleville when the fire broke out and the inhabitants are not how it originated could be arrived at, when Mr. Haines was approached today.

The first signs of the fire were observed by neighbors at 12.45 a.m. today when Mr. J. Wellman, a nearby neighbor, happened to awaken and see the Haines residence ablaze. The alarm was relayed to other farmer neighbors but nothing could be done to save the burning frame building. The volunteer firemen, made up of neighbours, managed to save the garage and outhouses on the Haines farm with a successful bucket brigade was organized. At times the flames bursting embers threatened other nearby farm houses but high winds blew the sparks in an easterly direction.

Mr. Haines home was burned to the ground, the only personal property of the family that was saved was the clothes the family were wearing while in Belleville visiting friends. Mr. Haines also saved the piano in the house in time to see the walls of the building crumble. The interior of the house was enveloped in flames. Very little insurance was carried.

Obituary

MISS ELLEN WILLIAMS
Of ... (Brighton)

On Monday, April 20th, Miss Ellen Williams, formerly of Pontiac, Mich., died at the residence of her cousin, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Rendell, Brighton.

The funeral service will be held at St. John's Anglican Church, Brighton, on Wednesday afternoon. Interment will be made in Pontiac Cemetery.

LATE MISS ANNIE STRACHAN

The funeral of Miss Annie Strachan, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Strachan, took place Tuesday afternoon from the Thomas Thompson Funeral Home, Everett Street. The service in the funeral home and at the graveside in Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. R. E. Newton, pastor of the Bridge Street United Church.

The bearers were Messrs. M. P. Deaton, S. O. Frederick, H. Spafford, G. S. Kerr, W. Gilbert and Wilfrid Jackson.

MRS. GEORGE JOHNSON (Cassaca)

Mrs. Johnson, widow of George Johnson, who died some years ago, died suddenly at her late residence at Consecon Tuesday morning, April 21st.

The late Mrs. Johnson was born in Upper Canada sixty-seven years ago and had lived in the Consecon district all her life, having resided on the Carrying Place Road prior to moving to Consecon Village. Her maiden name was Miss Annie Chase, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Chase, her mother's maiden name was Miss Amelia McDonald. She was a woman of most estimable character and was held in the highest esteem by all who knew her. In religion she was a member of the United Church and when able took an active part in all church work, having taught the children's class in the Sunday School for several years and, interested also in the work of Group 2 and the Women's Association in connection with the church.

Surviving her are three sisters, Mrs. Garra Twigg, Wellington; Mrs. W. Potts, Toronto; Mrs. Chas. Gilson, Winnipeg; two brothers, Mr. Kenneth Chase and Mr. Alva Chase, both of Wicomain, and several nieces and nephews.

The funeral will take place Thursday afternoon.

S. A. Legion Visits Trenton Citadel

On Wednesday evening the local Salvation Army Young People's Legion will journey to Trenton, where in the Citadel in that town they will entertain the Young Folk of Trenton, with a very interesting programme.

The activities of the evening will be in charge of the local president, Mr. Eric C. Naylor, and he will be assisted by the chaplain, Miss Irene Young, and other officers of the Legion.

The programme will consist of instrumental and vocal numbers and also readings by the various members.

At the conclusion of the gathering a special rehearsal will take place, the late morning concert, "Songs of Spring Revive," in which a fifty voice chorus will take part.

The Young Legion has only been formed during the past year but has proven a great help to the local Corps, and has made splendid advancement.

It will be interesting to note that the Trenton Youth Movement has as its leader the old Belleville Boy, Mr. Harold Burke.

Clever Young Artist Interprets Works of Mrs. Nellie McClung

Miss Mildred Conerty Featured in Gifted Recital at Holloway St. S.S.

Wellknown works of Mrs. Nellie McClung, Canadian authoress, were represented in a very fine recital given on Tuesday evening at Holloway Street United Church by Miss Mildred Conerty of Merrickville, who studied elocution in Montreal. Miss Conerty who is a young girl of attractive personality, excellent voice and fine platform presence made the personages of the stories from which she drew her readings live before her audience. In narrative Miss Conerty exels in the clearness of her presentation while her work in dialogue reveals the talent or careful differentiation of character and ability to depict the finest shades of human emotion. The novels of Mrs. McClung seemed to be particularly appropriate for this talented young girl who is humming on her career which is bright with promise of success.

Miss Conerty gave a very apt introduction to Mrs. Mc Clung's works of the authoress. The reader's style of delivery is pleasing in manner and her voice capable of expression in many shades of tone. Her speaking voice is rich and flexible. Naturally graceful in her appearance her introduction to the last of the six selections she rendered.

The three presentations she showed particularly well in "Sowing Seeds in Danny" "Mothers of Men" and the same name. This selection introduced a large number of the characters which Miss Conerty made to stand out as actual living individual beings. She showed careful study of child life and mood.

Her second number, chosen from the book "Sowing Seeds in Danny" she rendered with the utmost in story-telling. "Knowledge is Power" the child rendering demonstration of her gifts in delivery of clean-cut and comedy. That delicate little selection "Flowers for the Living" from the book of the name was given with beautiful feeling and mood by Miss Conerty. From the book "Second Chapter" the last two numbers were chosen. Again in these the reader proved herself best student and an interpreter of story, setting and mood.

Her readings were sympathetic and wide view of the works of Mrs. McClung. Miss Conerty's ability indicates her possession of rare talent in the field of the story and character presentation as well as in dramatic climax. The development of the young artist her stories was clearly indicated by the young reader who has learned the value of proper emphasis in the movement of the narrative. It is such talent as this which gives the girl promise to the young girl in her career.

During the evening Mr. James Brodie sang "Annie Laurie" "Drink to Me" and "My Dear Soul", Mr. Templar acting as accompanist.

The second section of the program which was under the direction of Miss Zonella Scott, Art Teacher was tendered the reader, the soloist and accompanist an ovation for Mr. Pairman, superintendent. The Rev. R. E. Newton, pastor of the church paid high tribute to Miss Conerty's work as elocutionist in presenting readings from the works of Mrs. McClung and wished her every success in the field which she has chosen as interpreter of such inspiring literature as the works of Nellie McClung.

GOVERNMENTS AND MINE WORLD

tear their way towards the rock-locked cavern 141 feet below the surface.

Governments and other individuals did what they could. Now Skoda made the first move, hauling a steam shovel from Halifax to the pit-head. J. P. Bickell of Toronto, president of the McIntyre-Porcupine Gold Mine, sent four expert rescue men from Haileybury, Ont.

Crew from McIntyre

The four, carrying with them 800 pounds of emergency equipment from the Northern Ontario field, travelled by train and airplane to Moose River and immediately plunged into the hazardous job. They were W. H. Hennigan, Harry MacMillan, George Mitchell and Elmer Moran.

Second Cave Used

Early yesterday the Ontario premier sent a second plane out of Sault Ste. Marie bearing more telephone equipment to be used in improving the established means of communication. Later in the day he shipped 24,000 words of radium by air. This was to have been used if rescuers had difficulty in locating the miners.

The radium would have been lowered through the hole and acted as "spotting" apparatus, taken into the rescue shaft, was revealed to indicate the exact position of the prisoners.

Behind the radium, in all probability would not be needed, as the rescuers neared the goal, Dr. Hepburn nevertheless sent the radium away again. He feels that another setback, perhaps another small cave-in, would spoil plans and "we want to go right this time."

That was the spirit everywhere. Prime Minister and, courageous miners did everything they could—and won.

POLICE BLOTTER

Following through investigations by local police, Frank Jones, London, and Carl Smith, Montreal, two transients being held in Cobourg on charges of breaking and entering, were later found implicated in a breakin, that occurred with Irvin's grocery on April 4th last, Constables Constable Fred Lord revealed. According to information which has been given out by the two youths stolen from Irvins' store was found in the possession of the two alleged burglars when they were apprehended in Cobourg.

Charges will be preferred against today located in a Toronto secondhand store, it was revealed.

Robert Blackadder, Tweed, was taken into custody at his home today on a serious charge implicating himself. Constable Fred Lord has arrested by Sergeant Thompson of the Provincial Police and Chief of Hayes of Tweed. The accused man was brought to Belleville and charged before a Justice of the Peace. He was remanded in custody in the county gaol, it was learned.

A local motorist was apprehended at the corner of Bridge and Front, Sts. late yesterday afternoon by City Police and Chief of Police when it is alleged he have failed to stop for a Stop sign at the corner of the intersection and drove against the showing red light. Charges are pending.

Following complaints from residents of the lower end of Front St. and Cedar Hills, Montreal, police were called to investigate reported unnecessary noises, which were caused by motor transport drivers racing the engines of their vehicles. Upon investigation the police found a motor transport with the engine running. The driver explained to the officers that his engine starter was broken and he had had the cab of his engine which necessitated leaving the motor running while he procured an early lunch and Cedar Hills restaurant. Later the vehicle was removed from that area.

KIWANIANS HEAR JACK McCALLUM

"Objects of Kiwanis Inspiration" Told The Members

Kiwanian Jack McCallum, past president of the Toronto Club gave the members of the local club an interesting talk on "Objects of Kiwanis Inspiration" at their weekly luncheon at the Quinte Hotel on Tuesday noon. Kiwanian Hall presided with Harold Seldon as song leader and Eddie Logan collecting the several fines. Announcement was made of the Inter-city visit of the Picton Club on Tuesday night of next week by Cliff Baragar. While Corwin Griffin secretary gave report of the directors' meeting on Monday night.

It was decided to assist in playground development but just what was not known, until the ground has not been determined. The club will hold an open meeting in the Quinte Hotel when the question will be thoroughly discussed from every angle. Word was received from the local club will attend the International Convention to be held in Pittsburgh in May, with expenses paid by the club. These will be appointed in the near future. Plans for entertainment for the members and their wives on Tuesday night if plans of Eddie Shapiro go through. The Knights of Columbus Hall will be used for the event if arrangements can be made. Many of the members identified themselves as desiring of competing.

The speaker of the day was introduced by George Griffin and Kiwanian appreciation was extended to Mr. McCallum. The speaker stated, that Kiwanis was very much out of the depression, and although it had been said, there was no place for the service club, he could not agree. He said there was a real need and that need was for those who were underprivileged. He outlined the articles of faith of Kiwanis and stated that Kiwanis was more friendly spirit shown in the clubs and the fellowship that was the result determined stand for the underdog and make him know that he was there for him as well as us. He was of the opinion that patriotism was the crying need of the life of a nation and asked what the members of the club were doing to instill it up. "Justice and patriotism are the keystone of the arch." said the speaker, "and they transport dirt." The weather is decidedly cool for hours he guided the efforts of a score of rescue workers as they battered their way through a wall of earth and rock in that cramped and dangerous hole where a sudden blow-in might wipe out the lives of all of them.

When he staggered to the surface that night, the 52-year-old mine inspector had no thought of his own comfort although he was still wracked by fever.

Then he almost collapsed. He was ordered to the improvised hospital.

Waving aside the orders of his doctor, he drove past Tuesday into the mine-mouth and underground where men toiled in the slime and lung-searing dust of the shaft.

As Covered With Mud

Covered with mud, he came to the surface about noon. In a statement The Canadian Press he outlined the progress of the task, the heartbreaking difficulties in the overcome.

Again it was the courage of Dragerman that came in for encomium.

"The men working in the old headway risked their lives every time they went below. Yet every change of crew the man who were below fought to remain and chose on the surface insisted on being permitted to go back below."

At 3 a.m. Wednesday morning he broke down the shaft again. "I'm going to stay down until we get the men up." That is Mike Dwyer.

ilarity with the tools of the miners' trade and the voice skilled in debate was still able to use the good, hard words of the men about him.

On Monday as the Dragerman, courageous rescue workers, burrowed their way toward Dr. D. B. Hepburn and Alfred Spadding, and toward the body of Herman Hughes held in a cavern 141 feet underground, Mike Dwyer, the miner, put the weapons of his old trade aside and entered the dangerous Haileybold's shaft.

For hours he guided the efforts of a score of rescue workers as they battered their way through a wall of earth and rock in that cramped and dangerous hole where a sudden blow-in might wipe out the lives of all of them.

The tragic men attempted to escape by a lower tunnel but found the water was rising faster. They then groped their way more than a mile to an upper level for their tools and finally reached the surface by tunnelling a passage. Mining in the section was stopped by government order in 1918.

Twenty years ago, Neil MacDonald was entombed for eight days in the Florence Mine, in the Sydney coal fields of Nova Scotia. Trapped behind an old cave-in, he laboured until found in the dark, damp ,working without any means of communication and with little to eat.

Without water or food, MacDonald groped his way through the gas-drenched caverns. Without matches his miner's lamp was useless, but he found a way for the seal oil in the lamp. He sucked it from the wick and continued his labours. Rescue workers had spent sleepless days and nights searching for him.

ONE WAY STREET

by JOSEPH McCOLE

CHAPTER I

Mark Sturges, the new general manager at Cannon's paused in a morning stroll through the fourth floor to cast an appraising glance about the dress department.

He was tall, he was lean, but his shoulders were muscular and he held them well back. His hands were thrust aggressively into the side pockets of his well tailored flannel coat. His blue eyes traveled about swiftly absorbing the details of the big room. Its great windows of plate glass across the front, the deep, plaid carpet of restful green, the display cases with rainbows of shimmering silks and silver-hued contents, easy chairs and settees about, floor lamps contributing subdued touches of color.....

"Neat looking spot in this place," Sturges decided with an approving jerk of his smooth dark head. "Stewart's a fellow with ideas. Hello....." He smiled. "Life class in session."

The amused remark was caused by the discovery of a girl seated on the steel rear one of the large pillars where the light from a window full directly upon her. She held a small drawing-board in the hollow of her left arm and was sketching a gown that hung against the flat figure of a modernistic wooden female posing nearby.

Sturges strolled in the direction of the artist who was so deeply absorbed in her task that she did not sense his presence when he halted almost at her side.

The girl herself was rather a picture. Mark thought. Her thick red-brown hair was bobbed becomingly. His appraising way it revealed the shape of the small head. Where the lights touched the curls of the soft waves there were golden glints. The hair, falling forward, concealed the greater part of the profile, but the small chin was interesting. Something very determined about it.

Young Mr. Sturges likewise favored the chin. Square and rather pugnacious. Mark's own was of the same type, but his was softened by a cleft in the middle.

The girl's pencil moved with swift sure strokes. A very capable one about this person.

Mark took a step nearer and deliberately leaned over the drawing over the worker's shoulder before he remarked, "That's a very good job."

"Oh....."

The red-brown head came up with a startled move, as Mark had suspected, the eyes looking at him from under their delicately arched brows were dark blue. The mouth was wide and sensitive. A doubtful little smile revealed the fleeting presence of two pearls.

Which also was as it should be.

When the artist volunteered nothing more than her brief exclamation of surprise, Sturges took the situation in hand. He glanced from the sketch to the model. Back again.

"For a display ad?" he inquired crisply.

"Yes, sir."

"Accurately drawn. Ever try your hand at designing?"

"A little."

"You should."

With a brief nod, he resumed his circuit of the room. A glance into the office of Emory Stewart, head of the department, revealed only a young woman busied with a filing cabinet. "Mr. Stewart will be back in a few moments, Mr. Sturges," she volunteered. "Will you wait?"

"I'll see him later. Thanks."

The general manager walked directly to the nearest elevators and entered an upbound car.

Mark Sturges' office was on the top floor of the store, directly adjoining the extensive suite of the Cannon owner of The Iron Block. Although Mark had spent the better part of a month in his new position, he still paused reflectively each time he crossed the threshold of his quarters. Usually, the room wrested a wry smile from his firmly set lips.

Too fancy to suit his idea of a workshop.

The walls were paneled in walnut. Heavy silken drapes hung at the one wide window. The desk in the centre of the soft rug was massive, its top glass-shielded. There were two cavernous lounging chairs upholstered in dull blue leather.

This morning, something more than the room and its expensive contents accounted for Sturges' halt and the blank surprise in his eyes. Beside the desk, combining clock and inkstand stood a slender vase. In the case was a full-blown crimson rose.

Neither the rose nor the vase had been there a half hour ago.

With an impatient shrug, Sturges dropped into his swivel chair and paused to light a cigaret before attacking the pile of letters awaiting his attention. A puffy shade of affable red-headed Gerry was going to distribute fragrance roses with the morning mail.

Mark tossed aside the first letter on the heap and picked up another. There came the sound of a door opening softly. He glanced up to find a young woman in white uniform coming from the suite of Spencer Cannon's inner office.

X X X

Sturges had a confused vision of a pair of grey eyes, half veiled by dark lashes. A red mouth whose utter perfection alone saved it from the word that came to his mind.

"I dare say. I came in through the hall and didn't bother to ask her. What do you think of Gorham by this time? It might be interesting.....if you cared to tell the truth."

"Very nice.....so far." For some reason he found himself assuming the defensive.

"You don't have to say that to me. It's a perfectly deadly place. You must know that after living in .....Chicago, wasn't it?"

"Among other places. To be truthful, since you insist, I've seen very little of Gorham except the part between the house and my office. Almost a square and a half."

"Really?" She reached for the pack of cigarets lying near. "Do you mind? My brand at the moment."

"Please do. Pardon my neglect for not offering them to you. Here .....Let me give you a light."

Miss Cannon leaned back and let her cigaret indolently against the carved bracelet of white jade encircling her left wrist. She toasted the tip between her cupidine lips and leaned forward to the waiting flame. Sturges caught the subtle scent of gardenias.

"Quite chic, stunning!" was his mental comment, as he watched the girl blow a thin cloud and allow the smoke to filter slowly through her dainty nostrils. "Known it, too."

"I wanted to apologize for not being in accord.....at having you out to the house," the caller continued, in a voice as cultured as her inhalation. "I've been out of the city, you know. Looked in on a house party at the lake and was my luck I didn't reach home until yesterday."

"That must have been pleasant," Sturges wondered vaguely if she thought he expected an explanation.

"I wasn't. I loathe house parties. But this was.....one of those things." There was a touch of curiously in her voice as she asked, "Then you really were not in circulation while I was away? I fancied you'd be quite in demand."

"No. Indeed."

"Then you met anyone at all?" Miss Cannon persisted.

"Surely. Your father has been very kind. He's seen to it that I have encountered some of the....well, Mark's blue eyes twinkled slightly over the memory, "Rotary, Gorham Club.....I know. Please don't forget you are engaged to dine Sunday evening."

"Sunday evening?" he echoed politely. "Where?"

"The Arden Terrace. At the humble abode of the Cannons. You're having supper with them. Pardon that version, but Dad's father old-fashioned. It's all events, it's six o'clock and informal, of course.....

"That is very kind. Thank you," There was the sound of a door closing nearby. Blythe left her seat at the desk and raised her voice slightly, as she called:

"In here, Mr. Cannon."

In spite of a daily contact with his chief Mark Sturges still found it difficult to reconcile Spencer Cannon with his preconceived picture of the typical industrial autocrat. Cannon, indubitable sources he had been impressed with the fact, was a merchant's son. Gorham's outstanding citizen.

Besides being sole owner of the department store, whose name already was Sturges' own personal property, Cannon was president of the city's strongest bank, as well as a director of two others. Extensive real estate holdings were among his assets, including the new skyscraper owned by the municipality, the Cannon Tower, with its thirty floors. The largest and most fashionable church in Gorham was originally erected as a "tax" for one of the Sturges' informants offered a pleasantry to the effect that the mayor and council were at home in the Cannon vest pocket.

It was the steadily growing demand upon the merchant's time that led to his search for a progressive young executive to take over the management of The Iron Block, the post thereby created whereon his father had laid the foundations for the family fortune.

With these bits of information presented to him during the early negotiations, Sturges envisaged his prospective employer as a lean and leathery individual. For some reason, the name Cannon suggested a stern, uncompromising type. Any clothing and gray hair..... probably gray side-whiskers, closely trimmed and meeting the corners of a tight mouth. The Gorham magnate would be a modern Scrooge. Suave, but hard. Very hard.

On the contrary, Spencer Cannon proved to be a short rotund man who waddled. His feet were large and toed out in a fashion suggestive of a penguin. A similarity heightened by the white spats that usually were a part of an immaculate costume.

From the moment of their first meeting, Sturges found himself quite fascinated by the Cannon eyes. They were small, peculiarly set always in a vacant unwinking stare, focused vaguely. They gave the unpleasant impression of being without lids. Finally, that was pretty close to it. And the corners of the lid-cloth had the strange habit of flickering. It seemed a mechanical attempt at a normal act always in a vacant unwinking stare, focused vaguely. They gave the unpleasant impression of being without lids. Finally, that was pretty close to it. And the corners of the lid-cloth had the strange habit of flickering. It seemed a mechanical attempt at a normal act

IN NEW YORK PULPITS

The church for one hundred years has been getting back to the simplicity and the depth and breadth of vision of Saint Paul, according to the Very Rev. Philemon F. Sturges, of Boston, preaching at Christ Methodist Episcopal Church, New York. "The modern Christian reads the Bible in the light God has given us through history, science and growth."

Without God, the human race and the world in which it lives would be inexplicable, Bishop Herbert Welch, missionary bishop in the Orient for the American M. E. Church, asserted in New York. "The longer I live, the more I am convinced of the final victory of truth and righteousness and that love and forgiveness furnish us the key to a joyful and triumphant life. Oh I know how often the facts seem to be against us. Sometimes the wicked seem to flourish while the good are crowded to the wall. But there is a God on the side of truth and righteousness. I cannot help believing in a God who is over us all. I cannot believe that this world, of which I am an infinitesimal part, came about by chance or by some blind force. I am forced to the conclusion that there is a spirit being who is the source of the spiritual beings in this world. I am also convinced that there is a movement towards higher things."

Dr. Bonnell in Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church took exception to the statement of Protestant Churchmen that "Protestantism is bankrupt." He said "Anyone who is guilty of feeding the fires of intolerance or religious bitterness has committed a crime against man and has rendered a disservice to the Christian Church. It is folly for any branch of the Christian church to attack any other when there are so many forces in the world working against all religion." He mentioned fascism, the attempts to throttle all religion and communism which seeks universal atheism. With these enemies in the field he thought it ill became any one Christian body to attack another. Yet many Protestants, he said, had become so broadminded that they believe in nothing. He called on his people to remember their heritage.

Peace was Christ's whole mission on earth and the divine commission, He entrusted to His Apostles, declared Rev. Father Thomas L. Graham at St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York. Likening confession to a "misercordia hospital" he urged the congregation to take advantage of its power to produce peace in the individual soul. Father Graham said that there were many doubting Thomases in the world today, skeptical of Christ's power, and others who deny it entirely, but even the unbeliever will admit that many a heart has been turned from the path of sin, many a weary soul, consoled, many a repentant criminal buoyed up by confession. It comforts consoles, renews courage, and to the foolish brings words of wisdom. To understand the power of confession he said man must start off with the promise that Christ is God, adding "that every student who has really studied and weighed the testimony must admit His divinity and believe therefore that His promises to forgive sin will be kept".

Man is getting lazier and lazier, according to Rev. J. B. Bernardin at All Angels Episcopal Church. "It used to be that he tilled the fields and prepared the food before he at it; now he telephones a delicatessen and orders it sent up. He once cut the logs and built his own home, now he finds an apartment and moves in. He spun the wool and made his clothes. Today he buys them ready made." This prompted the preacher to say that in this effortless age, man has become so accustomed to having things done for him that he expects to get religion without working for it.

It is to the men of "honor" that civilization must look for its salvation, said Rev. Minot Simons at All Souls' Unitarian Church. He said that there is an underside of the world's life today which where standards of honor seem to have disappeared. In this respect the days of depression have seemed more demoralizing than those of the war. Economic insecurity places the heaviest strains upon standards of honor. Honorable business is made increasingly difficult and insecure by dishonorable business. Dr. Simons looked upon the intellectual rivalry at the university as a healthy sign. Intellectual aspirations should lead to the one which is higher, the aspiration to be held honorable. He said honor was the best virtue, the basis of dependability and progress. If modern nations cannot trust one another, modern civilization is doomed, he said. If integrity goes, character goes, business goes and social relations return to the primitive.

Light grief are plaintive, but great ones are dumb.—Seneca.

THE FIRST PLOUGHING

Helen B. Anderson, Consecon

The sun shines bright on this fair April noon,
The crow's dark shadow drifts across the lea,
The robin's song — our hearts with it attune—
Falls on the ear—a welcome melody.

The damp, dark mold a mist of incense flings—
A subtle fragrance on the April air—
The ploughman to the field his horses brings,
No satin sheen can with their coats compare.

With patient step they haul the sturdy plough
And turn the furrows from their winter's dream;
The sky o'ercast — the rain is falling now—
And in the silver rain the furrows gleam.

With hope the ploughman plods 'neath sun and gale,
Firm in the faith in which his fathers trod—
That seeding time and harvest shall not fail—
The ploughman's promise from his father's God.

"WHEN IT'S SPRINGTIME IN THE ROCKIES I'll be coming back to you"—one of the sweetest of modern popular songs—one of the gems in a flock of half-baked gin-fizz effusions, reminding us it is of the great outdoors, the clean-ness of the mountains and the fresh sweet breath of the springtime, recalls the above poem, written some time ago by the poetess of Prince Edward, the lilting voice of the Garden of the Gods called prosaically enough Prince Edward County— Prince for royal lineage. Springtime on the banks of beautiful Consecon Lake, with its rising terraces of green sward and forest, after the long winter when the waters of Consecon have been tightly locked beneath many inches of ice. When one thinks of Consecon and the winter the brightest spot that shines out of much dullness is the ice harvest and what a harvest it was this year—so every season has its uses, and Consecon ice will make many a summer day pleasanter this season. The poem aptly expresses the awakening of spring and the stirring of all nature after the winter's sleep. There is also that undercurrent of reverence, that instinctive worship and awe which comes only in the great silences of the outdoors when the Creator seems so close and his handiwork so visible and unmistakable that one feels very close to the heart of Nature—in other words close to the heart of God. This poem has been published before but it is well worth publishing many times, and is repeated here because it seems to fit the season so closely and carry feelings which are so hard to express by the ordinary writer.

A MANIA FIREBUG HAS CREATED A REIGN OF TERROR IN THE uptown tenement district of New York City. Manhattan breeds all kind of freaks to bulge the chapters of crime history of the century, and there is always something new in the way of sensations. The fire maniac is something new to the detective force of New York City. His (supposing it to be a him) modus operandi is to set fire to a baby carriage in the lower hall of a tenement, push the carriage under the stairs and decamp, thus endangering the lives of many in the apartments above. Detectives who have studied the case deduce that the pyromaniac is inspired by liquor, that he is a working man who drinks heavily between payday Saturday and Monday and while under the influence of liquor has a mania for setting fires. When he emerges from his drunken stupor he regains his sanity. Six crowded tenement buildings were fired in the space of two hours before dawn Monday morning, and more than one thousand men, women and children were driven from their homes. While one blaze flared up another would break out, while hundreds of policemen and firemen joined in a man hunt of the cellars and alleyways of the upper Bronx. With the coming of Monday the fires ceased and the police think that in accordance with the alcoholic pyromaniac theory they will not recur until the dark hours between next Saturday night and Monday morning.

Let your sleep be necessary and healthful, not idle and expensive of time beyond the needs and conveniences of nature; and sometimes be curious to see the preparation the sun makes when he is coming forth from his chambers in the east.—Jeremy Taylor.

THE FIRST DRAMATIC SIGNAL—Hours after their diamond drill had pierced the 141-foot mine level where Dr. D. E. Robertson, Alfred Bradding and Herman Magill were believed trapped, workers had surrendered all hope of finding the men alive, having received no sign from below. Then suddenly from the depths of the earth came the tap-tap, tapping "My God! They're here!" shouted drill operator Billy Bell as he fell to his knees and pressed his mouth to the drill pipe to shout words of encouragement to the men below. The dramatic scene is pictured here. Beside Bell shouting excitedly down the tube is W. J. Hannigan, leader of the Kirkcaldy miners from South Porcupine, Ont., who helped in the rescue efforts.

20 YEARS AGO

APRIL 22, 1916

With about forty people upon it the platform at the west side of the Griffin Opera House overlooking the armouries haveollapsed during the presentation of the Colors to the 80th. Battalion and men, women and children fell to the ground about 12 feet below. The cracking of the timbers, the screams of the women and children were heard for several hundred yards. It was with difficulty that the soldiers who were drawn up in line for the presentation of the colors, upon the Armouries lawn, were restrained from rushing to the scene. Ambulance men and Col. Alger, M.O., of the 80th. Battalion went to the scene and aided in the rescue. Mixed with the timbers and planking were women and children who could not move until the timbers were removed. A soldier sustained a broken nose, but otherwise except for shock, bruises and scratches no others were seriously injured.

Letters Written by Mr. Geo. M. James Conveying Impressions of His Travels Across The Continent to The Land of The Golden Sun

No. 2

Hello Buffalo, good-bye Toronto!

Most of this letter will refer to Toronto, because we were unable to complete our notes in the train.

ONTARIO EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION

This powerful association of teachers, known as the Ritsenberg Parliament of Ontario, is celebrating its 75th anniversary with appropriate pomp and ceremony. It would require large volumes to set forth in detail its beneficial influence and direction in the cause of democratic education, without which freedom would vanish from our fair province. There are other provinces, who advertise themselves more gloriously, but none can compare with the results achieved by the Province of Ontario in the matter of educational pedigrees. As masters stand to-day the stability and even the salvation of the world is in the hands of the under-paid school teacher. The school is admittedly of greater importance now than the home or the church and the maximum of praise for its great services and unselfishness has not yet been uttered. All this has been gleaned over and over again at the most wonderful convention ever held in the history of Ontario.

The writer expected to be able to report some startling news concerning contemplated changes in our educational system but the Minister of Education and his Deputy confined themselves to flesh, bread generalities that the writer's imagination might well run riot in any direction. However we state these few general principles so that the reader may declare his own opinions on his head.

Education in future will contribute to the greatest good of the greatest number. From this general principle several deductions were vaguely suggested.

(a) Latin and French will be curtailed until after the present Lower School course.

(b) The Lower School course will become more practical for the sixty per cent. who go no further in our school system.

(c) Geography, History, and English along with Business Practice will be major subjects for the present Lower School course.

The writer is saying at present very little about the contemplated Intermediate Schools which will comprise the two highest forms in public schools along with the two lowest forms in High Schools and Collegiates, because the project is still visionary and perhaps ultimately impracticable. Teachers as a whole do not look upon the Intermediate School with favor and the writer believes that their conversion and cooperation is vital in any scholastic propaganda. Our school system is the Teacher, and woe betide those who obstruct!

The writer has attended annually the O.E.A. for over forty years and he never saw a larger nor more enthusiastic aggregation of teachers, to him the salt of the earth.

CONSOLIDATED SCHOOLS.

Several representative trustees from various parts of Ontario gave me their views on the matter. One or five neighboring public schools into one central school with teachers and equipment sufficient to give the training of city schools with special emphasis on agriculture.

"Such strong union schools would prove beneficial in many ways but there are serious obstacles to be overcome.

"(a) Consolidated schools would necessitate township or county school boards, and very few rural trustees are as yet willing to part with the power they now possess. A school trustee has always been respected as a person of importance.

"(b) This union of schools would require considerable initial expenditure even though after that our tax burden would be lighter with greater benefits. At present most farmers are heavily mortgaged, and the prices they receive for their products are so low that they can scarcely make a living. More expense for any purpose whatever is out of the question.

"(c) But the most serious obstacle of all is getting the children to and from school each day. Roadways must be built at various suitable places where the children would assemble and be picked up by the school conveyance. These shelters must be heated and properly supervised in the physical and moral interests of the children."

Now as ever before radical changes are made only gradually and with much difficulty. We cannot stand still in education; we must either advance or fall back."

MATHEMATICAL SECRET

Many groups of the writer's former students, now teachers, called on him at the exhibit of the writer's former students at the entrance to the University of Toronto, and congratulated him on his five hundred educational publications and on his success as a teacher.

"We adopt your ideal methods of discipline," they invariably proclaim but "please reveal to us the great secret of the mathematical problem you gave with such marvellous results." To the outside world the writer must confess that his mathematical problem was not only original but a success in humiliating the most obstinate delinquent.

The problem, suitable from Entrance to University, was given to those who were detained after school hours for any offense whatsoever. It was a simple problem in multiplication and division, but nevertheless proved a stumbling block in accuracy, even to many of advanced standards in mathematics. The following is a typical problem: Multiply 782371 by 9863, and divide by 32. Without placing a pencil to paper, I knew that the quotient would end in 39 and also that there would be no remainder. Only the true but ill-tempered offender was a giant in mathematics. I could add all the figures I wished to the left or 782371 and 1623678339 and the result would be the same. This broke the resistance of the most defiant student. Soon after I was looked upon as a prodigy to be feared and emulated. Now reader if you are interested, solve the above problem and then continue. If you can explain the method by which I can determine the last two figures of the quotient in such problems without a remainder by a simple mental process, send your explanation to The James Tests, Belleville, Ont., and you will receive a reward which you will prize throughout your lifetime.

The James Tests will publish in circular form soon a full explanation of this greatest of all school disciplinary methods at the trifling cost of twenty-five cents per copy. The teachers who now assign two hundred lines of Shakespeare or of history to be written HORRIBLY as a punishment will be so ashamed of their methods that they will go mathematical.

The writer is one of the happiest and most fortunate retired teachers in the world. There is rarely a day that he does not receive some evidence of appreciation and commendation. Can a King receive more?

CANADA'S HUMILIATIONS

As a Canadian and an optimist, I believe not only that Canada is destined to be very great and powerful, but that she has arrived already as the Fourth World Power. My travels throughout the world but deepen this conviction, nevertheless since leaving home a few days ago I have encountered some discouraging experiences.

1. While in Toronto and now in Buffalo, I called on many who collect stamps like myself. They are preparing to attend a great international convention of those interested in stamps in New York next month. I attended a similar exhibition in London, England, just four years ago. From all these sources I regret to report very serious and persistent complaints. "Russia alone in all the world produces stamps inferior to those in Canada which ranks a bad second. Stamps issued by Great Britain for herself, and for over fifty of her colonies are the best. The earlier Canadian stamps were not printed in Canada and are consequently among the finest in the world. From the Victoria Jubilee of 1897 to the present, Canadian stamps have been printed in Canada and have steadily declined to be horrendously humiliating."

"(a) The imprint has not been properly centred in order to show a narrow white margin of uniform width all around the edge of each stamp. Gummy stamps may be described as cruelly-gyped with all the ignominy therein implied.

"(b) Many sheets are not properly perforated and as a result numerous stamps have straight edges on one or two sides like a dog with his ears closely cropped close to his head.

"(c) A stamp collector is not allowed to purchase his stamps from any stamp vendor anywhere in Canada. He must go to the expense and inconvenience of remitting his hundreds or thousands of dollars to the Parliament Buildings, Ottawa, for all that he requires. Collectors can only guess at the reasons for this peculiar procedure. Stamp vendors in the lobbies of post offices used to receive a commission of two per cent. but now it is only one per cent. and the requirement that collectors buy their stocks of stamps at Ottawa is designed to still further reduce their meagre income. Then again Canadian stamps both used and unused are collected in every land in place as well as in hut. The officials at Ottawa perhaps select the best sheets available (only five per cent. are perfect) and send these out to collectors to protect Canada's artistic pride at least to some extent. Undoubtedly there is still another possible reason. The standing of each and every post office in Canada is determined by its revenue from stamps and money orders. The thousands derived from collectors must be considered as an item aside and apart. How would the reader like to be under such discouraging circumstances?

We quite properly pride ourselves on our loyalty to Crown and Empire, and yet we insult our rulers and their relatives by the horrible imperfections of our postage stamps, those of the 1935 Silver Jubilee being our worst to date. Canada expects much better stamps no matter where they are prepared."

The above is a brief summary of remarks heard by the writer not only on this holiday trip but on other journeys both at home and abroad. The discussions have been non-partisan, and without reference to any public official whatever. The feeling invariably has been disappointment but not bitterness or antagonism.

Since coming to Buffalo a few days ago, I had occasion to transact some business at the Liberty Bank here. The first thing that struck me like a physical blow in this palatial bank—in large red letters—read: "Canadian Exchange—one per cent. or 1% discount. 2½% discount for silver". Instinctively I felt that Canada was an inferior nation and it hurt me greatly. Could not the world respects Great Britain, with her pound sale near the $5.00 mark when $4.86 2/3 is par or normal! What can we do as Canadians to maintain our dignity? An optimist is proud because he has high ideals.

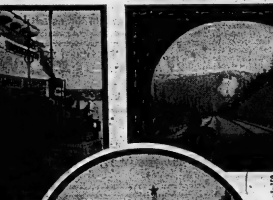
Before leaving this depressing subject may I state that I often hear over the radio at home and abroad, "Hello America", but never "Hello Canada". Surely as a people we are far too modest; we are not good advertisers! If I have more than usual from now on, you will understand my motive—"Place Canada before the eyes of the world".

BUFFALO

During the four days we have been here, the weather has been cold and wet with snow. Women in fur coats and men with turned up collars hurry along the street to home or office. We visited the Chippawa fruit and vegetable market here on Washington street, the finest and largest we have yet seen. Everything was artistically and tempitingly arranged, and the prices were very reasonable. Very fine bananas at 30c per dozen, asparagus at 5c a bunch, the largest grape fruit (double the size of ours at Belleville) at 6 for 25c, strawberries at 25c for a very large box, and all other things in similar proportions. Most of the produce came from California with a few raw oranges from Florida. Buffalo people have plenty of beautiful fresh fruits and vegetables.

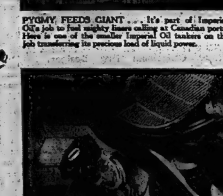
A visit to various libraries revealed the fact that unemployed young people here are improving their time. Various attendants at these libraries informed me that Buffalo was making a major effort to instruct and improve young people so that they would not become lawless drifters. Many classes were provided for the purpose in libraries, and other suitable institutions like the Y.M.C.A. I am always pleased to report such good news, because the greatest danger of the depression is not so much the monetary loss, as the loss of the morale of our young men and women.

FASHION NOTES



Mrs. James reports that Ontario has the better class of tweed suits. All styles are much the same as those already described in our former article, but the grey dresses have wine colored coats while grey fur for collar and also down the front to the bottom. The effect is very fine. The prevailing colors are much the same as in Toronto but in addition there are many cinnamon brown dresses and suits. Print chiffons and real silk flowered dresses, chiefly purple, are very popular. The height of fashion demands a purple hat and flowered dress, especially chiffon for street and evening wear.

Flat crown derbies are much worn with suits. Handbag, shoes and gloves should match as far as possible. Further details will follow soon from New York.



Best wishes to all.

Gardener Makes Complaint

Frankford, Ont., April 20, 1936.

The Editor
The Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ontario.
Dear Sir:

I would like to draw to your attention a little incident that happened to our good market about the beginning of the New Year. Your council passed a by-law to prohibit the farmer from cutting meat on Belleville market, because the merchants claimed it was not a fair competition.

We as farmers and market gardeners would like to know, is it fair competition for the fruits and vegetable stores to occupy all the best non-rented stands on the market? They run over in the morning when we are doing our chores and take possession of stands, collecting a lot of imported products that may be fresh or kept for some time.

We all sell our share but with competition of that kind, it is almost impossible for us to attend your market and make it pay. The farmers spend a great deal of their earnings in the city.

Now Mr. Editor do you know that a number of the vendors that attend your market are hucksters or transient traders? Do you know a number go to Toronto and other farther markets and buy during the week to sell on Belleville market Saturday's and market days? Now Mr. Editor I have rented two stands on your market for a number of years. I think I am perfectly justified in making this complaint. Is it or is it not! a farmers market?

Yours truly,
Thoughts of a discouraged gardener.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Dickey, Shillsway, announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary May, to Norman Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Foster, Moira. Marriage to take place quietly, Saturday, May 2nd.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Dell left this morning for Paris, Ontario.

Dr. Lily B. Muhleson has returned from Toronto where she was called owing to the serious illness of her mother.

Mrs. Allen Kelker of Bethany has left to visit friends at Port Hope.

Mr. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G., was in Brighton on Monday evening to take part in the exercises of the Forty Hours' Devotion in that parish.

Mrs. Harry Pringle, 24 Pine street, left today for Toronto, where she will meet Mr. Pringle from Lindsay, and celebrate the 36th anniversary of their wedding.

Rev. J. M. Fee, S.J., left yesterday for Pomfret Centre, Conn., after spending a few days at St. Michael's Rectory, visiting Rev. Charles O'Brien, S.J., whose condition shows marked improvement.

Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Bell, 29 Isabel Street, returned Tuesday evening after spending the past five months in California. During their stay in that state they covered a motor car all the territory and visited the principal cities, from San Francisco to San Diego. At the latter place they greatly enjoyed the sights at the Exhibition. The two months was spent at Long Beach and a similar length of time at Balboa Beach. At Glendale they visited the grave of the late Will Rogers in Forest Lawn.

Mrs. Russel Long was hostess at a charmingly arranged tea Tuesday afternoon at her home, Oakhurst Street, in aid of Christ Church Guild. Lovely bouquets of Spring flowers decorated the rooms, where cheery fires burned in the grates. The hostess was assisted in receiving by the hostess, Mrs. Sprung, and the president, Mrs. Bert Hickey, and were talled to the tea room by Mrs. Addison Vandervoort. The dainty table appointments were of yellow and tall green candles. Tea was poured by Mrs. Russel Hammond and Mrs. Reginald Hinchey. Assisting were, Mrs. P. Smithorne, Mrs. James Cloake, Mrs. Gordon Sinclair, Miss Phyllis Wright. Home-cooked delicacies were in charge of Mrs. Allen. During the afternoon a short piano recital was given by Mrs. Cressy Dennis and a solo accompanied Mrs. Douglas Clelland's song, which gave much pleasure. Mrs. Neale was treasurer. The tea was arranged by Mrs. Allen Bishop, who has a group of undefatigable workers.

CATHOLIC WOMEN'S LEAGUE ELECTS YEAR'S OFFICERS

In St. Michael's Academy last evening the annual meeting of the Belleville subdivision of the Catholic Women's League took place. Reports of the year's activities were presented and election of officers followed, with Miss Margaret Hayes being unanimously elected president.

Mrs. A. B. Chilton, retiring president, was in the chair and in presenting her report, thanked all those who so cheerfully co-operated throughout the year and spoke of the splendid spirit existing among the parochial societies. At this point, Mrs. Leo Callaghan, on behalf of the members, presented Mrs. Chilton with a handsome silver dish as an outward token of appreciation of her work during her term of office. Mrs. Chilton graciously thanked her associates for their gift and good wishes.

Reports of the various phases of League activities were given by Mrs. Leo Callaghan, membership, and hospitality convener, who pointed out that there were two hundred and eighty-six members enrolled; Mrs. F. Fitzpatrick, who in her report of education, told briefly of the progress of the Study Club, and spoke of the school prizes and programs during the year; Mrs. E. J. Kelly, social welfare convener, who gave an outline of the work of the Benevolent Society of which Mrs. F. S. Anderson is president, and to which the C.W.L. is affiliated. The recording secretary, Miss Margaret Hayes, read correspondence received; Mrs. J. M. Trunick, also submitted reports, and the financial statement was read by Mrs. George Wilson, treasurer. Mrs. Arthur Brown, representative on the V.O.N. Board, gave a very interesting resume of the work of the Order during the past season. A paper on Convent Schools was given by Miss Alma Callaghan.

Rev. Jas. F. F. Nicholson, V.G., congratulated the president, officers and members on the splendid work accomplished so unassumingly and quietly during the past and expressed good wishes to the new executive for a successful season.

The report of the convener of the nominating committee, Mrs. J. Lafferty, was received and the following officers were elected:

Chaplain—Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G.

Past President—Miss A. B. Chilton.

President—Miss Margaret Hayes.

First Vice-President—Mrs. Leo Callaghan.

Second Vice-President—Mrs. J. Mulligan.

Third Vice-President—Mrs. H. R. Kelly.

Recording Secretary—Mrs. F. Fitzpatrick.

Corresponding Secretary—Miss K. Dolan.

Treasurer—Mrs. George Wilson.

Travellers' Aid Convener—Mrs. J. Lafferty.

Convener of the Hospitality Committee—Mrs. J. Legault.

Press Convener—Mrs Agnes Callagher.

Study Club Convener—Mrs. J. M. Trunick.

V.O.N. Representative—Mrs. R. Brown.

Councillors—Foster Ward, Mrs. J. Lynch; Bridge Ward, Mrs. W. Frayley; Ketchenon Ward, Miss Anna Hurley; Coleman Ward, Mrs. T. O'Hara; Murray Ward, Mrs. Norah Hayes; Sleeker Ward, Mrs. W. Allen; Baldwin Ward, Mrs. M. J. O'Callaghan.

CONTEST WINNERS FETED BY LOSERS

The attendance contest of Belleville Chapter No. 84, O.E.S., was announced last Friday night when the Blue Group treated the Red Group to a delightful banquet in the Upper Hall of the Oddfellows' Temple, Front Street.

The banquet tables were attractively decorated with tall tapers, flowers and large blue stars. The Blue Group served a delicious banquet. Good fellowship prevailed throughout the evening, and the Red Group enjoyed the facetious record of their defeat. A table hostess, even to the trick buns and pineapple cheese.

Mrs. Evelyn Allman, captain of the Blue Group, presided, and called upon Mr. Mr. Cherry, past worthy patron, to make a presentation to Mrs. Elsie Harrison, captain of the Red Group. With inimitable banter and clever pendigree, Mr. Cherry presented Mrs. Harrison with a bouquet of aromatic roses. With gracious banter, the recipient thanked the Blue Group for their gift. Mrs. Ethel Adams, worthy matron, congratulated the Group on their splendid success and inasmuch as the Red Group had won by a very small margin, it proved that both Groups had rendered ready assistance in increasing attendance at the Chapter meetings.

On behalf of the Red Group, Mrs. Harrison moved a very hearty vote of thanks to Mrs. Aikman and her group for the delicious repast. At the close of Chapter the Red Group entertained the Blue Group with a delightful program and dance music by members of the Austin family, of Wooler.

Mr. Frank Wessells, past worthy patron, acted as patron. On behalf of the Chapter an appreciation of the evening's entertainment was capably expressed by Mrs. Adams, worthy matron.

FIRST MEETING OF BOARD MAY 2ND

First meeting of the Belleville Cheese Board of the present year will be held in its accustomed place at the City Hall on Saturday, this coming Saturday, on May 2nd. Although factories are reported opening up in the district five offerings are expected to be light.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

Your liver should pour out two pints of bile juice into your bowels daily to help digestion. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may just decay in the bowels. Then gas pressure gets right up into your chest, pressing on your heart and lungs, and you feel sour, sunk, sleepy, headachy and grouchy.

A mere movement of the bowels doesn't always get rid of this bile. It takes those good, old, time-tested, dependable, purely vegetable liver stimulants in Dr. Caldwell's Senna Laxative with Pepsin to help Nature flush that bile out of your system. Then you'll "up and go," feeling like a million. Don't stay sick, sour and grouchy. Don't lose pep and ambition. Don't be constipated. Take Dr. Caldwell's Senna Laxative with Pepsin and see how much better you feel.

Brushing Hair Essential for Pretty Crown

GRACE MOORE

Her Handsome Tresses Receive Careful Grooming Every Day

By HELEN FOLLETT

Brushing is to the hair what the plucking of dead leaves is to a plant. It is necessary for the well-being of the glorious crown. But shall your woman's crown daily hair brushes any more. Their explanation is simple: why put your money for an elegant finger wave and destroy it by carelessness?

When the hair falls it is particularly necessary to use the brush. Every hair that drops around the brushes is dead and done for, live hairs can't be torn out that easily. The sooner the old chaffs are removed, the sooner the lithe young tresses will appear to carry on.

Cleanliness of the scalp is imperative and those who say one shouldn't bang onto the finger wave too long. Since the hair lives on the blood streams, scalp massage is helpful. Spread out fingers and thumbs, give the brain root a tingling, rousing friction.

Only applications keep the scalp free of dead skin flakes, impart a glitter to the hair shafts. Just before the shampoo, apply light-gravity mineral oil which washes out more easily than olive oil or castor oil and alcohol.

How many glasses of water one needs each day cannot be definitely determined. Some individuals need more than others. Then, too, there must be considered the food one has eaten. Many foods have a high water content. Tea, coffee or milk are taken with meals, less water is required.

Since a large percentage of the human body consists of fluids, fluids are necessary for its well-being. Plenty of water taken between meals will sometimes correct dryness of the skin. More fatty foods also because they make sebaceous glands more active.

Midday Nap Needed by Child

Helpful if it's Made Pleasant Interlude, Miss Grenelle Says

By LISA GRENELLE

When Oswald was called for his nap, he ran and hid. He wouldn't be tired he was. If he were caught he planted his feet and made his mother drag him to bed. Then he sulked and kicking all the way.

Naturally, the mother worried, and naturally, her nap-time call had a note of menace in it; it sounded irritable, tired and determined. Naturally, there was no tender tone or note of calm mastery—because Mother knew she was in for a "carry," and shouted it. Mother did not expect Oswald to come willingly to bed, and Oswald did not. She did not expect Oswald to regard nap time as a pleasant interludeand Oswald certainly did not so consider it.

From east, west, south and north mothers write me of this nap difficulty. "They say: 'I'm afraid it's getting on my nerves'. . . . "The more tired he is the more he fights"

"But I feel it is so important". . . . "The days Willie doesn't take his nap he is more all after-noon."

It is Important

No, one who knows anything of small children will deny the importance of the midday nap. It is essential. Nothing takes the place of it, even a long night's rest.

But, my dear mothers, you can't force a child to take a nap or to sleep. You can drive Jimmie into action, but you can't drive Jimmie to inaction. You know yourself. If you are upset and irritated, you find it difficult to get to sleep. You are restless, your mind is overactive and your nerves are on edge. It is the same with a child.

If he is exhausted, irritated and has been put on the defensive but before rest time, he is in no mood to relax. You can lift him forcibly onto the bed, but you can't forcibly make him sleep, or even relax.

Child Responds

All children are quick to respond to suggestion. Every young child is particularly sensitive to the manner, mood and tone of voice of his parent. It is the mother who makes his rest time. If his mother approaches his nap-time call with a cheerful, matter-of-fact attitude, he will not be disturbed. He will not be irritated. He will not be tired. He will not be overwrought. He will not be overwrought. He will not be overwrought

Replica of Moose River Disaster at Stratford

Stratford, Ont., April 23.—(CP)—Stratford had a replica of the Moose River disaster this morning when a 30-foot excavation was partially buried by sewer cave in on the lawn at the home of Mrs. William Dolan, 310 Ontario Street, Brunston suffered a fractured collar bone and is under the care of a physician. Other medical treatment.

Brunston had dug the sewer to a depth of about 4 1-2 feet. While he was bending over to work with his pick he felt a slight rush of earth and fled in with suddenly slid into the ditch on top of him.

His collar bone was broken by the weight of the earth and he was buried to the waist. A hurried call for assistance was sent to the city engineer's office.

Before the arrival from that department Mr. R. F. Kay, who happened to be passing the house, went to the trapped man's assistance and dug him out.

Neck is Fractured As Motorcar Skids

Cornwall, Ont., April 22.—(CP)—Suffering a broken neck and other serious injuries in an automobile accident, William Gillespie, 48, of Cornwall, was in a critical condition in the hospital here today with little hope held out for his recovery. Although he was driving towards Cornwall when at a point two miles west of here he car skidded on a sharp curve, struck a soft shoulder and went out of control.

IN MEMORIAM

—Wife and Family.

LUPENSITE—In loving memory of Angelo Lupensite who died Belleville on April 22, 1932.
Dear dad, no dear father,
It has been long years,
Since you left our hearts
In sadness and tears.
We do not forget you,
And you too dearly,
For your memory is dear,
From our hearts like a dream.
Our lips tend not speak,
Often our hearts sincerely,
For grief often dwells
Where it seldom is seen.
You know how we loved you,
And we love you still,
Our God took you from us
We cannot forget.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied by Rigger and Crawford by Financial Service.

Fanner Peerless

The mill now being erected will be brought into operation at the end of May or early in June of this year and the mill building is large enough for equipment capable of 1500 ton daily capacity but only equipment now being installed is designed for 600 tons daily, and the output of the capacity could therefore be reached by the expenditure of a small amount of money on equipment, but considerably more development and the mine must be performed before any increase is decided upon.

Sullivan Cons. Mines Annual Report—Consolidated Statement of Ore Reserves at 31,/36 tons Averaging .123 Oz.

In presenting the annual financial statement of the company mailed to shareholders yesterday, President A. H. Paradis states that "During the year 1935 there was erected the mill capacity from 80 tons to 200 tons per day. One concentration will be given to a further increase in capacity during the fourth and fifth levels have been reached."

The Profit and Loss Account for the year ended 31st December, 1935, shows a profit of $470,007 and $470,007 and operating profits of $210,313. Development expenditures, reserves, taxes and after charging off $230,676 as balance of pre-1935 development expenditure written off, there was a deficit for the year of $29,956.

The Balance Sheet shows cash on hand at $126,991, and total current assets of $203,607, Current liabilities total $36,252.

General Manager Irvine M. Marshall, in his report to the Board of Directors, the following is the say regarding ore reserves:

"On April 1st, 1936, the estimate the ore reserves to be 32,800 tons averaging .123 oz. per ton. This estimate includes a conservative, but reasonable allowances for dilution. The ore reserves do not include tonnage indicated by diamond drill holes and no estimate has been made on sections of the property where indicated values have not been confirmed by subsequent underground work."

Regarding the year's development work, Mr. Marshall writes: "Development operations during the year established three different types of ore occurrences in the property. These three types are: first, gold values in stringer quartz veins; second, gold values in cross-fracture parallel to a porphyry dyke; second, gold values in cross-fracture parallel to a porphyry dyke and yielding long, lenticular orebodies; third, gold values in the quartz stringers within a basic dyke. Each type of occurrence has its limited orebodies of substantial size and value.

"The system of mining in use on your property does not require the extraction of pillars to support the walls and the ore broken in the mine at any time is sufficiently large to warrant wholesale liquidation of pillars, although in some cases it may some traders who become interested in the property could, in view of the sound business structure, the wise policy appears to be to hold on to the better situated equities.

The Trader in Barron's says that it is not surprising that, as a market full of cross currents and apparently haphazard speculation should begin to taper off in the market. 1,000,000-share level which has never been able to yield a profit to the brokerage community as a whole. Commissions are taken to the side-lines, and the tips and rumors that are the stock in trade of the Sources of the buying and selling proved little last week. At times the buying was by those who believed Motors, and United States Steel appeared to be good, especially on reports that Myron C. Taylor, who has been so active in the motor industry for months past, has substantial account. Again, on occasion the buying at times appeared good. The buying in Chrysler, however, failed to impress, since it was particularly active in former movements, was for substantial amounts, and was checked and then took stock, and helped as the selling. The established order keep the resistion within normal limits.

Failure of the stock market to respond to such brilliant earnings exhibits as those of International Electric, Caterpillar Tractor, and Colline and Aikman was discomforting. The precipitant retreat of the railroads was equally so. And instability of the established motor leaders to push forward, as the publication date of first-quarter earnings approaches and production is at a crescendo of activity, must be set down on the debit side of the column. Unless food news produces action in the coming week or two, considerable liquidation might be expected. Such liquidation is not quite if the market is not in process of creating a turning movement. The market's thus has gone one way for a number of months has resulted in over cautious persons looking for a substantial reaction. This could well have occurred before this had the market's foundation been considerably better. There have been from time to time unexpected developments that could have caused a severe reaction.

H. R. Bain & Co., Ltd., in an exhibited Canadian Industrial Letter, says:—"Since the repeal of profits tax in the United States, the company's business, like that of all leading Export companies in Canada is a remarkable comeback. The demand for the company's material products has increased with great rapidity and with greatly increased profits. Large purchases have been made recently with U.S. organizations which further tips the prospects of the American market. Another very important feature of Canadian business is the large increase in earnings of his financial position. In the beginning of 1935 the company accumulated deficit of $4,230,000 was reduced to $1,230,000 through the auction in capital stock account. This action will permit the maintenance of dividends which are reasonably assured prospects for the year."

Hollinger Consolidated is handling approximately 155,000 tons of ore per month. Grade of ore fluctuates between $7 and $8 per ton. Production is running at a rate of very close to $13,000,000 a year.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, April 23.— The steady upturn which has been a feature of the local wholesale potato market for several weeks was halted Tuesday and prices reversed their trend and dropped five cents per 80 pound bag on Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick stock. Quebec potatoes showed a sudden decline was that receipts were extraheavy and trade dragged very large and that the high prices now prevailing had tended to curtail demand on the part of buyers.

Today's new prices follow: P.E.I. No. 1, $1.70; No. 2, $1.60; No. 3, $1.75; No. 1 cobblers, 90's, $1.65 to $1.70; No. 2 cobblers, $1.60 to $1.65; No. 1 $1.70. Quebec No. 1 Montcalms Frederick $1.60; No. 2 whites, $1.45 to $1.50; N. 1s 10's 2s and 3s cents. The three later are unchanged.

On the wholesale produce markets today there was little beauty under a fair demand. Grade A large on the open market sold at $1.10 to 30 1-3 cents; medium at 18 1-2 to 18; grade B, 18 1-3 cents; pullets and grade A, 18 to 19; 17 1-3 cents, per dozen.

The light butter market was hushed to ease with heavier offerings of fresh butter being reported at 31 cents per pound.

Livestock

Toronto, April 23—(CP)—Cattle trade was fairly active on the Toronto livestock market today with prices steady.

Sheep and lamb early sales were also at steady prices while calves ruled weak and hogs were unsettled. There was a liberal delivery of 600 head.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock branch were: cattle, 260; calves, 200; hogs, 610; sheep and lambs, 450.

A few lots of good butcher cattle brought $4.75 to $5.00 and a few medium quality weighty steers sold around $4.50 to $4.75 and medium to good fed calves brought $5.00 to $5.50.

The slow calf market found a general top of $8.00 for choice with a few sales up to $8.00. Common calves ranged steadily to a finish.

The hog mart showed unsettled with indications of the market opening steadily to a finish.

Yesterday hogs were steady at $9.60 for bacon weights, $8.35 off trucks and $8.75 off cars

Corcoran Wrestlers Please In Opening Card of Season With 3 Well Matched Bouts

"Unknown" Runs String of Wins to 47 Defeating Meeks

AL DUNLOP IMPROVED

Holds Irish 'Jack' Donovan of Boston to a Draw in 45 Minute Bout

Despite the fact the great "Unknown" wrestled part his string of victories to some 47 consecutive wins, when he defeated Ed Meeks, Ohio, State champion at the Belleville Arena, last night, the main bout failed to impress the 700 fans present as did the semi-final scrap when Al Dunlop managed to squeeze a draw with Irish Jack Donovan from the Boston marvel. Doubtlessly the Donovan-Dunlop bout was one of the best ever seen in a local ring, while in the preliminary Andy Mosko, the Minneapolis flash, merely lived up to his pre-advertisements when he whipped Antoine Parkin, of France, into submission in a brutal opening bout.

The semi-final bout was undoubtedly stole the show as Dunlop and Donovan wrestled for forty minutes draw. In the main scrap Meeks won the first fall, but the puzzling "Unknown" soon had the "hoodoo mask" by using fair and foul means to subdue Ed Meeks in the subsequent two decisions, much to the displeasure of the crowd. Big time wrestling, with a capital "W" ended into Belleville last night with the introduction of a championship of Corcoran's wrestlers, all of whom gave a splendid display of the present-day art.

FROM PAULINO-LAND — From the land of Paulino Uzcudun comes this new, leather-jacketed seeking gold and flatin glory in western boxing circles. It's Pepe Del Rio, light-heavyweight champion of Spain, saying hello to the Pacific coast.

Meeks Wins First Fall

The main bout opened with the "Unknown" applying many punishing holds and taking the full advantage of his excess weight. The "Unknown" asked nor gave no quarter through the early stages of the bout, Jack Meeks won the first fall, when he applied an Australian wrist hammerlock and forced the "masked one" to concede the first fall in exactly fifteen minutes. Much to the delight of the fans, Meeks retired to the corner after the first round of the main bout to endeavor to unmask the "Unknown", but without success; for the heavier man used his excess weight and subsequently escaped the headlock and strangle holds to subdue the Ohio champ. The "masked wrestler" finally succeeded with a splendidly placed elbow smash and then full nelson to win the second round with a top body press in exactly eleven minutes. The third round of the bout was more balanced rapidly. Meeks again tried his famous scissors hold, but the "Unknown wiggled out and again used heavy tactics, much to the chagrin of the fans. Referee Wells tore the masked one from Meeks after a struggle, and Al Dunlop, "Unknown" pushed the official aside and fell on the prostrate Meeks with the choke hold, which gave him the better two falls and victory.

Dunlop Most Improved

Showing superior ability to his previous appearances in a local ring, Al Dunlop, Toronto's newest threat to the local mat game, held "Irish" Jack Donovan to a draw in the 45 minute bout that was at times literally stole the show of the evening. Donovan, a veteran and proven wrestler, was forced to the limit by Dunlop in a bout that saw numerous holds applied and escaped by both contestants. Donovan, a classical giant, opened the bout in a manner that was unexpected, while Dunlop proved the more pugnacious, but before the bout had gone to holds at different intervals, Dunlop had forced Donovan to the mat to concede a fall with a Japanese arm stretch, while "Irish" Jack returned to nearly win when he floored Dunlop with a punishing spread-eagle. Donovan also managed to get into a twisted double step-over toe hold at the same time and it looked as though Referee Wells would have to count both men out, when they finally rolled under the ropes and in finality took the official of the night time to unscramble the contestants. Donovan seemed to be the aggressor, however, as the final bell sounded and the bout was declared a draw. Throughout the 45 minutes both men were given excellent backing of the mat game in a pleasing bout.

The opening prelim saw Andy Mosko, of Minneapolis, prove far superior to Antoine Parkin, France, as the former was the aggressor and won with a Japanese frog scissors. The highlight of this bout came when Meon refused to break an illegal hold, when warned by Referee Wells and resulted in the offender missing a well-placed punch in the referee's face, that knocked him clear of the ring, as the crowd howled with delight. Meon is a pugnacious wrestler, who needs attention and local fans would appreciate his defeat in a Belleville ring. With new faces to battle last night's wrestlers, Matchmaker Corcoran will be back with a better wrestling card next week, it was announced after the bouts.

"PER CAPITA" COST OF U.S. ATHLETES TO OLYMPIAD TO BE $500

(By Alan Gould)
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

New York, April 22.— (AP)—All "per capita" stories to the contrary notwithstanding, the United States is going to muster a full quota of Athletes for the 11th Olympiad at Berlin this summer.

The Olympic Committee has met with difficulties and certain committees now have sufficient assurances, plus prospects, to guarantee at least 250 Athletes will wear the shield in competition abroad.

The maximum, figured on originally, is 415, but it will be up to the scene brushing up in events, where the United States does not have a chance of scoring.

Financing is now well for each sport to handle the cost of sending its own representation to Berlin. Even the basketball squad, which fell far short of expectations and failed to contribute much, if anything, to the general Olympic funds, enough was obtained to pay the expenses of the basketball squad to Berlin and back. It is hoped the general fund will fare a bit better from the gate receipts of the final boxing tryouts, to be held in Chicago.

The "per capita" cost of sending the American team to Germany has been sharply reduced, according to the latest information. Originally it was figured at least $750 would be required to pay all expenses per athlete. Now it is estimated $500 will cover each individual's Board, lodging and transportation, without any country of home being missed or mesh skipped.

TWO GAMES FROM TITLE

Edmonton, April 22.—(CP)—Edmonton's Grads, perennial National and International champions, faced two more games today before retaining the International Trophy and the International Women's basketball championship they have held for fourteen years.

Grads turned back Polish Stenos 45-36 here last night in the first of a best-of-five games series with the International title at stake. Victories Thursday and Saturday night for Grads will end the games but if Tulse break into the win column additional games will be necessary.

"WHITE HOPES" READY FOR BELL

Entry List Cut to 29 When Contestants Under 170 Ibs. Eliminated

Toronto, April 21.—(CP)—Disheveled at this distance of the initial Bowen flats of Joe Louis, 29 fighters of all shapes and sizes will produce amateur comedy in the second Toronto "White Hope" Boxing Tournament here tonight.

As in the first tournament, the opening will be given a place in Jack Dempsey's New York finals. If he survives the finals, and cares for anything to go on under the direction of Dempsey until a possible meeting with Louis. Then he can do some serious hoping.

It isn't likely anyone 17,000 will pack Maple Leaf Gardens tonight but the early ticket sale indicates a good house. Most of them will come with expectations of seeing some more of the comedy produced in the first tournament.

An entry list of 49 was cut by 20 yesterday as examining physicians and the promoters decided any under 170 pounds and not in the best physical shape. The heaviest fighter is Phil Hartford of Toronto at 208.

The matchmaking will be done by drawing names from a hat and Sheriff Ike Pitt will be called in witness to declare it. The show will wind up some time Thursday morning.

Fourteen of the entries are from Toronto. The outsiders, all from Oshawa, are: Harry Russell, Kingston, 194 1-2; Richard Aikin, Dundas, 186; Chauncey Bennett, Oshawa, 188; Edgar Peterson, Brampton, 194 1-2; James Findlay of Preston, 190; Ernest Hamilton, Stratford, 180; Ramsay Dillon, Niagara Falls, 184; Eric Dreyfuss, Stratford, 180; Alfred Anderson, Muskoka, 176; Joe Kaycke, Brantford, 175; Fred Hargreaves, Oshawa, 172; James Squibb, Brockville, 180; Marcel Linton, Oshawa, 186; Fred Davies, Toronto; Richard Russell, Lansing 176.

DRAKE TESTS HIS LEG AFTER CASTLEIGH OPERATION—Teddy Drake, great International centre-forward of the Arsenal, was recently operated on for a cartilage injury suffered in an England vs. Wales game. Arsenal followers are hoping he will be fit for the cup fix against Sheffield United, and Drake is seen trying out in kicking practice for the first time since his lay-off. The results were satisfactory.

Passed Ott to Get Leiber With The Score Tied

GROVE WINS AGAIN

Pitches Three Hit Ball And Should Have Had Shut-out

(By Andy Clarke)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Hank Leiber, cleanup man of the Giants, today shrieked in the satisfaction that Jimmy Wilson, pilot of the Phils, had paid for his lack of respect.

Hank was the central figure in a pulse pounding drama, that featured a day on which cold, rain and darkness conspired to cause postponement of four major league games and halt two others before completion: a day on which Bob ("Lefty") Grove hung up his second win of the season and went baseball history again to the park of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

It was the ninth inning, the score was tied and the winning run was on second base. Curt Davis was on the mound for the Phils and Mel Ott the adversary in the place for the Giants, when Wilson, yelling "walk him a minute", ran out to the pitcher's box for a conference. He ordered Ott and then at Leiber the latter swinging a couple of bats in the background. Then he made his decision.

"Pass Ott and pitch to Leiber". Now Leiber is a heavy hitter, as he knows it. That conviction fanned him to be the most stubborn beldoot the Giants had to contend with this season. He began tossing them balls viciously at Davis intentionally passed Ott and the number of the bases deepened.

Hank stepped to the plate. The first ball was a little low but the second one was to his liking and he leaned on it for a single single to centrefield. Jimmy Ripple scampered around thing to home and Hank, crossing the plate looked to the Phils dugout to see Wilson disappearing into his depths. It was complete vindication. The final score was 7-6.

Last Place Five Run Lead

The Giants had blown a five run lead in allowing the Phils to draw even with them but it's probable that a bit of sensible misfortune worried the other way. Sambo Elsmore, Leiber, the slugging Negro lieutenant, was out of the lineup with a bad cold and the pinch hitting Bill Terry was forced to resume his first base duties. That old gentleman, however, collected a double, two singles and a walk and scored three times, which probably is more than Sambo would have done.

Three hurls for the Washington Senators to three scattered hits as the Red Sox defeated the Nats 6-1 in a game, that was halted in the seventh inning. It was the second win of the season for the young sourpaw, who pitched a two-hitter in his debut. He deserved a shutout, Washington's second inning run being the result of Eric McNair's error on Al Powell's grounder. There was one out in the first ball of the seventh, when the game was called on account of darkness and rain.

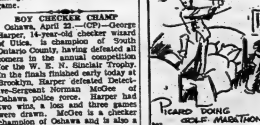
Called For Darkness

The Brooklyn Dodgers-Boston Bees game was called in the 12th inning because of darkness with the score tied at 5-all. Even as Leiber had been the man of the hour for the Giants, Dick Siebert was the man, who failed for the Dodgers. With the bases loaded in the last of the 12th, Siebert stepped dio the plate and hit into a double play to The Athletics, showing surprising end the game. The Athletics showing surprising power in their last two starts, gave the Yankees plenty of trouble before going down 7-6. Three Yankee pitchers saw duty. Johnny Broaca was chased after bringing his team into the ninth with a five run lead. Johnny Murphy and Pat Malone also saw duty before Marvin made Jimmy Higgins foul out and Wamsley ground out to Cronetti with the tying run on third. Bill Dickey belted his third homer of the season with two on in the third.

Yesterday's Stars

Bill Dickey, Yankees— His third home run of the year with two on in third featured victory over Athletics.

Jimmy Bucher, Dodgers— His three hits led attack on Bees, his last single being mainly responsible for tying game in 9th.



Hank Leiber, Giants—Singled in ninth to score run that beat Phils, 7-6.

Lefty Grove, Red Sox—Let Senators down with three hits in 6 1-3 innings and won second straight game.

BOY CHECKER CHAMP

Oshawa, April 21.—(CP)—George Harper, 14-year-old junior champ of Utica, is champion of South Ontario County, having defeated all comers in the provincial competition for the W. E. N. Sinclair Trophy. In the finals finished early today at Brooklyn, Harper defeated Detector-Provincial Constable Robert of Oshawa police force. Harper had two wins, a loss and three games drawn. McCee is a checker champion of Oshawa and is also a former Ontario checker champion. Checker enthusiasts claim Harper will win the provincial championship within a few years. He won the Sinclair cup last year for the first time and was a runner-up the year before.

Young Harper "just plays naturally," he says. He never studies books on the game. He started as a child by beating his family and in a few years was defeating all comers in the neighborhood.

GOLF

BY ALEX MORRISON

RICARD DOING GOOD MEDITATION

Henry Picard is piling up quite a record for himself in the number of competitive rounds played. The big Pennsylvania pro is a master of record, but I don't know of an open tournament that he has missed for the last three years.

He did pass up one or two in California this winter when he was kept in bed by the doctor but with those exceptions he has been consistently on the go. Johnny Revolta is his only rival for endurance. But Revolta stopped up the trip to the west coast and also the British open last summer.

Picard's routine finds him playing golf in his sleep. Every day he goes through either a practice or exhibition of a competitive round. On many days he gets in two rounds on the course. Even an athlete in top condition would find this quite a grind.

Henry's friends have advised a rest away from golf, but he insists upon driving on toward his goal, the U.S. open.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Jack Corcoran's wrestlers moved into town last night with a big time show that presented some of the better known grapplers of the day. Some of the bouts pleased, but to many of the fans Ed Meeks, who lost to the Unknown, a masked gent, who had no friends in the Arena, it was slightly unfair in Meeks to lose in the manner he did. Of course it must be admitted that the "behooded gent" took full advantage of every available opportunity and every win after he had been pried away from Meeks, while using a straight hold. No sooner had he been pushed aside than he suddenly hurled Referee Wells from interference and fell on the prostrate Meeks for a third and final fall and victory.

One of the most improved wrestlers we have been privileged to see in a local ring, was Al Dunlop. When Dunlop wrestled in a draw with Irish Jack Donovan last night he completed the best bout he ever wrestled locally. Donovan is recognized as one of the best men in the business and although he seemed to be slightly the aggressor in the latter moments of his bout with Dunlop, he proved quite a match for the Toronto grappler added another feather to his cap, when he stayed the limit with a man the calibre of Donovan. We are not hesitate in saying, that the Donovan-Dunlop bout, last night, was the best ever staged by a pair of wrestlers, although a good opponent in meet Andy Mosko would draw a crowd. Mosko proved a big time attraction when he took the head off Antoine Parkin, the Frenchman, in the opening bout. Meon drew the wrath of the crowd upon his head when he refused to reprimand the attacks on his fighter adversary.

In the main bout the cry of the fans was always the same—"Pull that mask off, Ed," but Meeks was more interested in trying to pull off the "hooded gent" which finally he did in the second. Despite public opinion we would like to point out, that "The Unknown" was a much heavier man than Meeks and naturally took advantage of his excess weight to gain victory. Meeks is one of the cleanest grapplers we have had the privilege of seeing in a local ring. He knows the ropes and his winning the first round with his surf-board hold won him many a local friend. A bout between Meon and Mosko would be well worth about tops in Belleville.

On Monday Alex Wolk and Ray Hamilton will flash from the Trenton R.C.A.F. camp to wrestle at Belleville. Ryley will be the referee in connection with the R.C.A.F. boxing bouts. Both grapplers should be very much like to play baseball in Belleville this summer. Hamilton, in particular, could be made valuable to his being able to leave the camp when ball games were being played. Of course it is understood that certain rules and regulations are laid down by the Air Force regarding participation in outside sports by R.C.A.F. members, but we feel sure they can be taken up with Wing Commander Johnson at a later date, we understand.

When interviewed regarding his turning out with the local senior team, Ripp was quite anxious to try out with the Belleville team. "I have played senior ball with Brantford in the Intercounty League and we were always informed of the fact that we were not to play with the O.G.R.L., so naturally I'd like to try my luck in your loop," added Ripp. When questioned regarding other baseball players at the Airport, Ripp stated there was at least one good infielder, he thought, but he would not personally recommend any of the players at the R.C.A.F. base as being senior calibre.

If Ripp and an infielder are available from the Airport the general impression is that the Belleville infield be elevated immediately. The outfield should be well taken care of with Ripp, Wally Grey, Grey, Johnnie Kerr and Cliff Bennett. Cecil Clarke is quite anxious to turn out with the locals again and coupled with Kruk Wilson, Bill Wilson, Ken Weeks, Red Webber and Sonny St. Louis the local infield should not be much worse than second year. Add a couple of good pitchers and several lettermen would be quite acceptable. Weeks is still available, Sonny St. Louis is also of plenty of promise, but now an experienced catcher like Ripp behind the plate, maybe these young members would be given a chance to develop in Belleville baseball, two good boys in Bill Wilson and Cecil Clarke and a better of the local infield is still a matter of guessing, but baseball looks better already.

Incidentally we understand that Art Ripp is scheduled to play hockey in England directly after he concludes his radio schooling at the R.C.A.F. Ripp, who starred with the Atlantic City Sea Gulls two years ago, is expected to be one of the best amateur hockey players in Canada. He has rejected numerous professional offers, but they say, like classmates, Ken Partridge and Bobby Bauer, are also hockey players of the first school.

If regular hours of rest will be a gain sports day in Belleville, it will see the Belleville Intercounty Lacrosse Club, Belleville's senior athletic organization today, just as a jig to avoid a hot-water. Despite the fact applications have been made of the lacrosse boards and the dressing rooms are possible as it may be necessary to have the membership swing to the lacrosse members if a number of baseball players are interested in this rejuvenated sport."

STEVENS QUERIES TOMATO PRICES

Wants to Know Prevailing Prices Paid in 1934, 1935, And 1936

Ottawa, April 21 (CP)—A query by Hon. H. H. Stevens (Bat. Kootenay East) relating to the filing of canning company's statistics appeared on today's notice and proceedings. "The Reconstructionist leader said—Division his inquiry into some parts.

His wants to know the prevailing prices paid to tomato growers for 1934 and 1935, and the figure of forward growers this year.

Mr. Stevens further asks if any government department has been charging in touch with the canning situation, and if the canners responded the bureau of statistics to withdraw its demands for the filing of "carry over" figures.

"Has the government authorized the discontinuance of the filing of statistics regarding 'carry over' in the canning industry?" he asks.

MINE IS OLD ONE WORK DIFFICULT

Charles Ivey Expresses Confidence in Efforts to Reach Men

Moose River, N.S., April 21 (CP) —"I wish to say emphatically that we have every confidence in the government and assisting engineers from other units," Charles Ivey, brother-in-law of one of the men entombed for more than eight days in the Moose River Gold Mines, said today.

"They have had a tough time in attempting to reach the 141-foot level of a caved-in mine. They are working without a plan of an old-time mine, but please rest assured that everything possible is being done to rescue the two men.

"There seems to be great concern outside regarding 'the accident,' the London, Ont., man said in acknowledging expressions and offers "from those not fully understanding the situation. We are deeply moved by these offers of assistance, he said.

Caches Around Shaftshead

Around the shaftshead hundreds of men waited with wives of the two men, and Charles Ivey, of London, Ont. It had been a long, tiring and at times discouraging wait. The crowd was roped off and was kept back from the pithead by Royal Canadian Mounted Police officers.

The word that came from the pit said the men had broken through the rock barrier and had found an open level, expected to lead them direct to the trapped men.

The approach was made through dangerous "live" earth along channels that had been closed by the cave-in.

During draegermen from Stellarton and unmarried volunteers had burrowed their way through this channel, which threatened to collapse on top of them at any moment.

Every foot of the way had to be propped.

The cave-in which trapped the men had affected a wider area than was at first thought and hindered rescue attempts from the beginning.

On the surface, an area 150 feet long, 75 feet wide was sunken 15 feet.

Supplies Taken in Medical supplies, blankets and hot water bottles followed Dr. Davis and his hypodermic into the shaft.

The men were to be revived with stimulants before the difficult task of taking them to the surface was begun.

The way was along a twisting, narrow, low channel and stretchers with rope supports had been devised to carry them out. Miners feared to jar sides of the tunnel for fear of collapse.

It was not known how long it would take to get Scadding and Robertson and the body of Magill to the surface, but it was believed it would be perhaps an hour or more.

Hospital Staff Stand By

Members of the hospital emergency unit brought here from Halifax waited in the roped-off area. Their doctors said they would be "overjoyed" if Robertson and Scadding could be removed within a half hour but said word from the pit indicated it might be another two hours before the stretchers reached the surface. They didn't know what was going on down below, they said, as workers were not taking the time to report their progress.

At the mouth of the Reynold's shaft, through which the miners have been digging for days, the four rescue men from South Porcupine, Ont., stood waiting. Their equipment was all unpacked and their oxygen pump and tank were close to the mine entrance.

The wooden mine office has been prepared as a temporary hospital where the two men will be kept at least a day until they regain sufficient strength to make the 75-mile ambulance trip to Halifax over bogged rural roads.

Flags Train from Treetop As Wolves Howl Below, Girl Saves Self, Chum

7 Timberwolves Are Frightened Away by Whistle of Freight

SWEATER WAVED

Indian Children Taken to Byng Inlet on Train

Sudbury, Ont., April 22 (CP)—Followed by a pack of seven timber wolves, a young Indian girl used her red sweater to flag an approaching freight train, saving herself and a smaller companion from possible death.

The two young girls were walking from Naiscoot to Byng Inlet, and noticed an animal following them. They paid no attention, thinking it was a dog. A half mile further on, they looked back again to see seven timber wolves following behind. The younger girl climbed a tree while her companion hastened to the railroad track to flag the approaching train by waving her sweater.

At the noise of the train, the wolves ran away.

Conductor W. E. Johnston was in charge of the train, and took the two children to Byng Inlet on the train.

TAKES LIFE AFTER LOSING AT POKER

Will Probated Showed Man Had Assets of Over $3,000

Sudbury, Ont., April 22 (CP) — Death won the poker game played by Harry Pigun March 10 and played yet another card yesterday when the miner's will was probated. Pigun committed suicide when he failed to realize at the poker table enough money to bring his wife and 10-year-old daughter over from Poland.

Yet in estate and insurance, he left enough to bring them to Canada—and several others with them. Though the man's savings account totalled but $371 he left $2,500 in insurance.

Pigun drew $100 from his $400 account early in March. He went out to gamble and try to bring his savings up to the $500 mark enough to bring his wife and child to Sudbury. But he lost his $100 and his body was found the next morning in his home at Gatchell.

Yesterday Judge Proulx probated Pigun's will, in which the public trustee of Ontario was named executor.

To his wife and child in Poland will go nearly $3,000—and he committed suicide for lack of $100.

DRS. A. R. DAFOE AND ROBERTSON 1907 CLASSMATES

Both Graduated From Toronto University in 1907

BOTH LOVE CHILDREN

North Bay, Ont., April 22 (CP)—Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, the country doctor who rose to medical fame by his expert care on the Dionne quintuplets, today expressed relief and happiness when word reach his north resorts had reached Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding in the Moose River Gold Mine.

Through the ten days of anxiety as Dr. Robertson and his companion lay imprisoned in the mine, the Dionne quintuplets doctor watched eagerly for reports of the condition of the famous surgeon while his memories went back 29 years when two youths launched their medical careers.

1907 Graduates

In 1907 Dr. Dafoe and Dr. Robertson graduated from the School of Medicine, University of Toronto. They faced the young doctor's task of building up a practice. One joined the Hospital for Sick Children some years later to become one of the most outspoken and clever child specialists in the Dominion. The other went north in the arduous and trying life of the country doctor.

A quarter of a century passed. Then on May 28, 1934, Dr. Dafoe took his place at the top of the medical professions, when he was summoned to the farm home of Oliva Dionne where five daughters were born under his care to Mrs. Dionne.

Dr. Dafoe's services in raising the quintuplets to healthy, contented young girls sent him amongst the great physicians to children, one of the leading ones Dr. Robertson. So as was done at the beginning of the country doctor greeted word that the youth with whom he graduated had been saved from death by the blackness of a Nova Scotia gold mine!

LOCK YOUR CAR

"Local motor car owners should securely lock their automobiles whenever they are left alone, whether it be in their garage, on the street or wherever they might be parked," warned Provincial Police authorities today. These instructions were issued today following the continued and numerous auto mobile thefts, that have been so prevalent throughout Eastern Ontario during the past ten days.

"We have been rather fortunate in Belleville relative to the absence of car thieves in our midst, but in the districts to our immediate east and west there has been an alarming increase in the number of motor cars stolen. To date police have been successful in recovering practically all of the stolen cars reported taken this spring, but the inconvenience of having one's individual automobile stolen is still paramount in minds of the owners. It is with a warning note we hope local motorists will adhere to the suggestions of always locking their automobiles and thereby assist in the diminishing of car thefts in this district," added Provincial Police today.

Traffic officers also added a word of warning to this note, as they added: "a car thief repeatedly will pass up a locked car for one, that is ready to drive away with the key in it. Our warning to cautious car owners is 'keep your motor car locked and save yourself the embarrassment of perhaps finding it missing some day'."

During the past ten days a total of ten automobiles have been stolen in the district east of Belleville, all being been recovered by police however.

MAYOR REQUESTS BOARD TO DELAY SCHOOL ADDITION

$69,000 as Asked Would be Heavy Strain on Finances, Claim

ASSESSMENT DOWN

Free Parking Space to be Provided at Rear of Front Street Stores

Mayor Harry Hill asked, for the co-operation of the Board of Education and requested, that the $69,000 addition to Queen Mary School be delayed this year on account of the heavy expenditures that the council will be called upon to make in the present year, at a special meeting of the council held last night. General business was also transacted and a by-law passed to ratify the agreement between Wm. H. Patterson, contractor, and the Corporation for the construction of a new footbridge.

The school question was not discussed until fifteen minutes before closing time, which was at eleven o'clock. It was expected that members of the Board of Education would appear before the council to personally present the request for the addition to the school but there were no members present and therefore the Mayor gave a short resume of the financial position of the city and hoped, that action could be deferred for a time at least. Mayor Hill stated, that the Board of Education had asked the council to supply $69,000 for the building of this addition but "never to my knowledge has there been a written request for this money" said His Worship. "Our assessment will be $60,000 less than last year", continued the Mayor "and if the Gas plant is returned to the city, there will be a further reduction of $45,000. There will be a tax sale of 100 pieces of property in this city this year which represents about $21,000 and the Sand, Mother's Allowance is assured and the city is handicapped in a good many ways. Bond is maturing and being paid to the city this year must be diverted to Separate Schools next year and as the council is trying to keep the tax rate at last year's figure, I think that the Board of Education should be considerate and not ask for the addition this year."

Debentures Debt Heavy

Continuing His Worship stated, that the debenture debt for the Collegiate this year will be $21,-431.16 and for public schools $63,-983.47, which is a total of $85,-414.62 and with the $69,000 added for the new addition, it looks almost impossible to handle the expenditure without a raise in the tax rate.

The Mayor then asked if any member of the Board wished to ask questions and Alderman Barlow, a member of the school board before taking his seat in council, said, "I know something of the question for I served on the Board for six years and to my knowledge the same question was brought up then as now. I know it is working a hardship on the Board to have school children are going out of their jurisdiction and that some parents are complaining about their children travelling so far to go to school but children of the Sir Mitchell's Island may have to travel from every part of the city to attend their school and no complaint is heard. The Board ought to be able to carry on for some time yet and I think it was unjust to criticize the council for not granting the Board a generous meeting of their body."

Regarding other discussions, Alderman Ben Safe said "The less said the better," while Alderman Armstrong praised the Mayor for his clear picture of the financial situation of the city and thought he admitted the children had to be educated, the Alderman was of the opinion, that the Board could get along without the addition for another year or so. He suggested, that the Board members co-operate with the council in keeping the rate down as it is high enough at the present time. Alderman Clapp asked if one of the members of the Board is in favor of building the addition yet wanted a remission of taxes on a garden plot he was going to allow the city to use for the unemployed. There was no further discussion on the question.

It was recommended, that the council take immediate action to prepare vacant property at the rear of Walker's Hardware, Quinn and Robertson and Kresge's for free parking space and that the special committee be granted permission to sign an agreement with the owners of these properties with that object in view. Thomas Thorne will commence his duties as dog catcher at once at a salary of $50.00 per month. Aldermen Jennings, Lewis and Armstrong were appointed as a committee to consider the proposal made by the Ontario Shoes Co. Company in response to the thirty day notice sent by the council about the property. The committee will report to the council at an early date.

KILLED IN LACHINE CRASH

Montreal, April 22 (CP)—Mrs. R. Taylor, 50, of Verdun was killed and Martin Haynes, 29, and Miss M. Lalonde, 22, critically injured in an automobile accident at Lachine early today.

It is believed the driver lost control of the car and the machine crashed through a fence across the sidewalk and finally stopped in a field.

HOPE AND DESPAIR ARE LOT IN MINE-HEAD-VIGIL—Scorning hope and hour despair have been the lot of Mrs. D. E. Robertson, wife of the Toronto surgeon trapped within the depths of the Moose River Gold Mine as she keeps a shaft-head vigil while rugged miners fight grimly for her husband's rescue. Through all the frantic struggle she has refused to leave the scene and has talked through the diamond drill communication tube with her husband. Here is Mrs. Robertson, surrounded by reporters as she hears the latest report of progress toward the 141-foot level where Dr. Robertson and Alfred Scadding are trapped, Herman Magill is already dead.

Mothers Weep Before Small Caskets Of 5 English Scholars Lost in Snow

LONDON, April 22.—(CP-Havas)—The bodies of five English school children who died in a blizzard in the German Black Forest, last week, arrived at Liverpool Street Station, here today.

As the doors of the funeral car were opened, the mothers of the dead boy fell to their knees and wept bitterly before the black coffins, which were strewn with flowers.

In a burst of anguish, one of the mothers ordered a casket to be opened, in order to look for the last time upon the face of her son.

The station platform was crowded with mourners, including schoolmates of the dead boys, the director of London's Secondary Schools and a representative of the National Board of Education.

ODESSA CITIZEN KILLED ON ROAD

Collision Between His Car And Transport Occurs at Morrisburg

Morrisburg, Ont., April 22 (CP)—Herbert J. McNeely, 47, of Odessa, was killed almost instantly today in a collision between his car and an Ottawa transport truck driven by Poulin of Ottawa, on highway number two. Poulin was not hurt.

McNeely was found in the wreckage of the car by E. Dagenais who had been following the truck in another automobile. He was still alive but died before medical aid could be summoned.

Coroner Dr. H. Marrellus of Iroquois ordered an inquest.

The transport was travelling towards Prescott when the accident occurred. The car travelling in the opposite direction. Identification of McNeely was established through his motor car license and paper found in his pockets.

Poulin told provincial police the motor car was travelling on the wrong side of the road.

Resourceful is Description of Alf. Scadding

Cleveland, April 22 (AP)—Dr. Fred C. Scadding, uncle of Charles Alfred Scadding, one of the men entombed in the Moose River Gold Mine, described his nephew today as "a daredevil and a resourceful fellow."

"Fred has got out of so many tight spots I'm sure he will climb out of this one," Dr. Scadding said. "He escaped the bullets of three years of war. He couldn't dodge the gas, but he survived it."

Dr. Scadding said his nephew sailed with the first 35,000 Canadian soldiers in 1914.

"Fred was always a daredevil and a resourceful fellow," he said. "Of course, I am worried about him but I think his luck will still hold good. How he happened to be in the mine I don't know, but somehow he always seems to find his way into unexpected spots and then gets out of them."

MECHANICAL GIANT AIDS RESCUERS—Lifting two tons of earth and rock from the mouth of the demolished shaft at their swoop, this giant crane with mechanical claws is aiding sturdy miners in frantic efforts to dig a path of rescue to where Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding of Toronto lay entombed in the Moose River gold mine. The death of Herman Magill, their companion, from exposure, drove the workers to even more desperate efforts to reach the trapped men.

INTENSE EMOTION SEIZES TORONTO

Car Traffic Tied up as Citizens Scan Great News of Rescue

Toronto, April 22 (CP)—Downtown newsstands were mobbed by thousands of excited citizens today when extra editions, with "rescued" in big black type poured from newspaper offices to tell the story Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding had been reached in their Moose River mine prison.

Mounted city police swung into action to clear lanes about the stands and street intersections.

Office workers, out for lunch, milled about feverishly reaching for the papers that appeared a few seconds before big Ben in the City Hall tower tolled one o'clock.

"There was much shouting of "wonderful!" "great", "they're safe."

One man breaking through the throng at Yonge and King Streets waving his paper shouted "those rescue miners shouldn't have to work another day in their lives."

Car Traffic Tied up

Automobile and street car traffic became tied up and police went from one intersection to another to untangle the congestion.

The news spread to each newsstands rushed to read bulletins at newspaper offices, bawling into the street and adding to the traffic snarls.

One motorist stopped his car on Bay Street between Adelaide and King, hopped out, fought his way to a newsie and scrambled back. The long line of traffic had to wait until he scanned the news.

Everyone seemed to be smiling. Some held up their papers so office workers, craning their necks from windows, could see the screaming headlines.

Fails to Appear, Man is Found Dead

Tillsonburg, Ont., April 22 (CP)—O. L. McCoomb, retired salesman of London, failed to appear in court today to answer a charge arising out of a motor accident here Monday evening.

When Constable Ham phoned the hotel where McCoomb was registered, porter Phil Wood went to his room and found him dead on the bed. Chief Phillan and Coroner Dr. Gordon were called and expressed the opinion that death was due to natural causes.

McCoomb leaves a wife and four children, in London.

Mariners' Church Service At Cherry Valley Honors "Those Who Go to Sea"

PICTON, April 21 (Special)— The annual Mariners' Service at Cherry Valley United Church drew a capacity crowd and many were turned away. For the past nine years it has been the custom to hold this special service instead with another hundred in the aisles.

Decorations were very appropriate, being emblems of sailors and fishermen. The altar rail was draped with fish net. The flag-draped pulpit had a pair of crossed oars in front, with a life preserver and ship's model. Evergreens of wall-mount water craft adorned the walls; flags everywhere provided a bright note. The choir loft was also artistically decorated. Prominent in the decoration was a large framed photograph of Captain Nelson Fallmaller of Cherry Valley, who inaugurated this unique service nine years ago. He had attended such a service in Oswego, N.Y., many years ago and since its inception in Cherry Valley has proved a great success. Drawing great crowds from long distances. Following Cherry Valley's service, Capt. Jas. McConnell of Port Mcnicoll, who attended it, left and also decided to hold one at Port McNicoll and this year had a very large crowd.

Though the service was advertised to start at eight o'clock the church was filled an hour before.

Rev. F. F. Gardiner, minister of the church, was in charge of the lovely service which opened with a prelude on the organ and piano by Mrs. Hart, Scott and Mrs. R. J. Fenwick. Rev. Gardiner gave the invocation and Cherry Valley church choir sang a fine processional hymn. The opening hymn was "For the Beauty of the Earth." Psalm 93 was read as Scripture by Rev. David Wren of Picton Baptist Church. "Hymn of What the Future Hath" was sung by the congregation.

Dedicate Sermon

Rev. David Wren delivered the sermon. Life was likened to a journey, a guide, a compass and a chart are required. We must not live in the past, nor in the future and too far from it. There is a great challenge facing us today. To the church God has come a great opportunity.

Christianity has never failed. Every dollar was tried and failed. Prosperity was followed by depression. Scientific progress tried a solution. Scientific discoveries defeated its own ends, bringing more unemployment and rescinding purchasing power. Democracy failed. The speaker cited the present situation in Europe where dictator and strife are rampant. Nothing can save the world from disaster, but Jesus Christ. He is the hope of the world of tomorrow, declared Rev. Mr. Wren in closing his forceful message.

Rev. Mr. Wren paid tribute to Capt. Fallmaller and to the village of Cherry Valley which so fittingly held this service, all of which was extended far beyond the county.

A beautiful duet, "The Divine All Love Excelling," was given by Miss Jean Insley and Mr. W. J. Dow of Picton.

Roll Call of The Dead

Captain Palmatier read the Roll Call of the Dead—names of sailors and fishermen who had entered the Last Port since the 1935 Mariners' Service. There were twenty-four of these—Captain Byron Rongard of Cherry Valley; Capt. Bernard Palmer of Picton; Capt. Murney Acker of South Bay; sailor William Kerman, a South Bay native, who died in Rochester, N.Y.; Henry Whatman of Waupoos, who sailed; Fishermen Mark Young of Salmon Point; Harry Brooker of Cherry Valley who sailed in the British Navy for many years, winning medals for gallantry; Manley Deetsa of Picton; Ray Coxal preacher, who died when young.

Captain Palmatier related interesting facts about each.

Following the reading of the Roll, Captain D. B. Christie of Picton, placed a basket of flowers on the altar in memory of deceased fishermen and sailors of Prince Edward County.

Minutes of silence followed as those present remembered friends and relatives who have gone before.

Captain Christie then called the roll call for fifty-two years, retiring age for fifty-two years, retiring age for fifty-two years, retiring age

"Prisoner of Shark Island" Tells True Story of Man Martyred
By Hale

The parge of history become flaming, vivid drama, the hidden story of America's most tragic figure is at last bared, as 20th Century-Fox brings to the screen in "The Prisoner of Shark Island," coming tomorrow and Friday, matinee daily, to the Belle Theatre, the profound and moving story of a man who was martyred by his countrymen's frenzy.

In telling the story of Dr. Samuel Alexander Mudd who suffered a living death on America's Island Hell because of his innocent connection with Lincoln's assassination, the new picture reveals a man who plumbs the depths of despair, and who is carried to the heights of self-sacrifice by a woman's love.

Powerfully and realistically directed by John Ford, the picture takes up the story with a startling re-enactment of Lincoln's assassination. John Wilkes Booth, the killer, flees to Maryland where his broken leg is set by Dr. Mudd, played by Warner Baxter, the star of the picture.

For his unwitting part in the plot Baxter is sentenced to life imprisonment; but, instead of being sent to Albany, as his sentence indicated, he is transported to the desolated, sun-baked Fort Jefferson, an island of horror and despair.

What happens on the island, the doctor's degradation and torture, the terror of the shark-filled moat and the ravages of disease among the convicts....all these are startlingly brought to life on the screen.

Caught in a desperate attempt to escape, Baxter is confined in solitary, while yellow fever rages on the island. The climax of the picture arrives when he is restored to his former dignity to take up the fight against fever, free MY cadors to help him and conquers the epidemic. For this courageous work, as the true story runs, Baxter is pardoned and restored to his family.

Johnson prepared the screen story of "The Prisoner of Shark Island" for the screen, faithful in every detail to the true account. Heading the magnificent supporting cast of the production are Gloria Stuart, cast as Baxter's heroic and loving wife, and Arthur Byron, Claude Gillingwater, O. P. Heggie and Harry Carey.

Two Feature Picture Bill "Tough Guy" and "Stowaway" now at The Capitol Theatre

Ladies and Gentlemen: Do you like action-packed, lightning speed adventure? Now the screen has one of the penniest, most breathtaking adventure romances ever filmed, in "Tough Guy", Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's amazing new story now at the Capitol theatre. It's a story about a boy—and a dog —and a fumited criminal. It's a story of a crook's regeneration, but told in a series of amazing action sequences—with chases and battles —airplanes chasing automobiles —and the long arm of the government secret service. The boy is Jackie Cooper—in a new type of role, and how he plays it! The criminal is Joseph Calleia, hero of "Public Hero" and "Riff-raff." The dog is Rin Tin Tin, Jr., son of the famous dog star of silent days and great as his father. With this setup you can't help thrill, marvel and enjoy one of the breathless pieces of entertainment of the year. Don't miss "Tough Guy" at the Capitol theatre.

On The Same Bill "Stowaway"

Hailed as one of the most novel and most beautiful scenic pictures ever filmed, "Stowaway," the spectacular Universal drama of the great outdoors, now at the Capitol.

The screen version of the popular novel by Cherry Wilson, "Stowaway" was filmed in its entirety in the Painted Desert and other beautiful scenic locations in Arizona. This is the first time in many years, it is said, that an entire picture has been made on location. A terrific stampede of wild horses climaxes the story.

Directed by Louis Friedlander, "Stowaway" is the story of a wild horse and the part it plays in the lives of an oddly assorted group of persons. Jean Rogers, Noah Beery, Jr., Fred Kohler, J. Farrell MacDonald, Raymond Hatton, Walter Miller, James Burtis, Rex, the king of wild horses, and a group of weeks old colt, hailed as a real screen "find;" and the original Arizona Wranglers, a popular radio septette of real frontiersmen are among the players featured in the Henry MacRae production.

Todd-Kelly Comedy, Funny

Guaranteed as one of the year's funniest comedies, Thelma Todd and Patsy Kelly are appearing on the same program in "Top Flat," with a beautiful Fingerich Travel talk in beautiful technicolor, "Modern Pacific." Performances start daily at 2.30, 7.10 and 9.15. "The Prisoner of Shark Island" starts at 3.00, 7.35 and 9.40.

Charlie Chaplin Leaving

Charlie Chaplin is appearing at the Belle tonight for the last times in his latest and most hilarious comedy, "Modern Times." The Latest News Flashes and a smart and tuneful revue, "Starlit Days at Lido" complete the program. Don't miss it.

MR. AND MRS. J. McLARNIN IN NEW YORK—The loving couple you see above are James Archibald McLarnin and his wife. James Archibald is Vancouver's pride and joy, a baby-faced bunch of concentrated dynamite in the boxing ring and he arrives in New York along with Mrs. McLarnin—the former Miss Lillian Cubitt also of the coast city—for a rendezvous with lightweight champion, Tony Canzoneri. It should be a very nice scrap indeed.

REPORT 10 DEAD, TWO CITIES IN FLAMES IN JEW-ARAB RIOTS— Incendiarism has added its horror to the tragic rioting between Jews and Arabs at the adjoining cities of Jaffa and Tel Aviv, Jerusalem. Flames, visible miles from the city, were reported roaring through the Neue Shalom, Jewish and Arab quarter of Jaffa and Tel Aviv reach ed 15 killed and 110 wounded. Of the dead 12 were Jews and four Arabs though it was feared several of the wounded might die. The Above photo shows a scene from the last serious rioting in 1933, when 22 were killed.
